CONCERNING

A 2

$25 \sqrt{2}$
A

D I A L O GU.E

To the Right Honourable the ## Earl of Shaftesbury.

My Lord,

THE following is a Converfation in its kind fomewhat uncommon, and for this reafon I have remembered it more minutely than I could imagine. Should the fame Peculiarity prove a Reafon to amufe your Lordfhip, I fhall think myfelf well rewarded in the Labour of reciting. If not, you are candid enough to accept of the Intention, and to think there is fome kind, of Merit even in the Sincerity of my Endeavours. To make na longer Preface, the Fact was as follows.

$$
\text { - }{ }_{2}
$$

A

A Friend from a diftant Country havi ing by chance made me a Vifit, we were tempted by the Serenity of a chearful Morning in the Spring, to walk from $S--r--m$ to fee Lord $P-m b r-k e$ 's at $W-l t-n$. The Beauties of Gardening, Architecture, Painting, and Sculpture belonging to that Seat, were the Subject of great Entertainment to my Friend: Nor was I, for my own part, lefs delighted than he was, to find that our Walk had fo well anfwered hisExpectations. We had given a large Scope to our Curiofity, when we left the Seat, and leifurely be= gan our return towards home.

And here, my Lord, in paffing over a few pleafant Fields, commenced the Converfation which I am to tell you, and which fell at firft, as was natural, on the many curious Works, which had afforded us both fo elegant an Amufement. This led us infenfibly to difcourfing upon A RT, for we both agreed, that whatever we had been admiring of Fair and Beautiful, could all be referred referred to no other Caufe. And here, I well remember; I called upon my Friend to give me his Opinion upon the meaning of the Word ART : A Word it was (I told him) in the Mouth of every one; but for all that, as to its precife and definite Idea, this might fill be a Secret ; that fo it was in fact with à thoufand Words befide, all no lefs common, and equally familiar, and yet all of them equally vague and undetermined:

To this he anfwered, That as to the precife and definite Idea of Art, it was a Queftion of fome Difficulty, anid not fo foon to be refolved; that, however, he could not conceive a more likely Method of coming to know it, than by confidering thofe feveral Particulars, to each of which we gave the Name. It is hardly probable, faid he, that Mufic, Painting, Medicine, Poetry, Agriculture, and fo many more fhould be all called by one common Name, if there was not fometbing in each, wobich was common to all. It fhould feem fo, replied I. What then, faid he, fhall we pronounce this to be ? At this, I remember, I was under B 3 fome fome fort of Hefitation. Have Courage, cried my Friend, perhaps the Cafe is not fo defperate. Let me afk you --- Is Medicine the Caufe of any thing ? Yes furely, faid I, of Health. And Agriculture, of what? Of the plentiful Growth of Grain. And Poetry, of what? Of Plays, and Satires, and Odes, and the like. And is not the fame true, faid he, of Mufic, of Statuary, of Architecture, and, in fhort, of every Art whatever? I confefs, faid I, it feems fo. Suppofe then, faid he, we fhould fay, It was common to every Art to be a Caufe. ---- Should we err? I replied, I thought not. Let this then, faid he, be remembered, that all Art isCaufe. I promifed him it fhould.

Bu t how then, continued he, if all Art be Caufe, is it alfo true, that all Caufe is Art? At this again I could not help hefitating. You have heard, faid he, without doubt, of that Painter famed in Story, who being to paint the Foam of a Horre, and not fucceeding to his Mind, threw threw his Pencil at the Picture in a Fit of Paffion and Defpair, and produced a Foam the moft natural imaginable. Now, what fay you to this Fact? Shall we pronounce Art to have been the Caufe? By no means, faid I. What, faid he, if inftead of Cbance, his Hand had been guided by mere Compulfion, himfelf diffenting and averfe to the Violence? Even here, replied I , nothing could have been referred to his Art. But what, continued he, if inftead of a cafual Thbrow, or involuntary Compulfion, he had willingly and deliberately directed his Pencil, and fo produced that Foam, which Story fays he failed in ?------Would not Art bere have been the Caufe? I replied, in this cafe, I thought it would. It fhould feem then, faid he, that Art implies not only Caufe, but the additional Requifite of Intention, Reafon, Volition, and Confcioufnefs; fo that not every Caufe is Art, but only voluntary or intentional Caufe. So, faid I, it appears.

And fhall we then, added he, pronounce every intentional Caufe to beArt? I fee no reafon, faid $I$, why not. Confider, faid he ; Hunger this Morning prompted you to eat. You were then the Caufe, and that too the intentional Caufe, of confuming certain Food: And yet will you refer this Confumption to Art? Did you chew by Art? Did you fwallow by Art? No certainly, faid I. So by opening your Eyes, faid he, you are the intentional Caufe of Seeing, and by ftretching your Hand, the intentional Caufe of Feeling; and yet will you affirm, that theje things proceed from Art? I hould be wrong, faid I, if I did: For what Art can there be in doing, what every one is able to do by mere Will, and a fort of uninffructed Inftinet? You fay right, replied he, and the reafon is manifeft. Were it otherwife, we fhould make all Mankind univerfal Artifts in every fingle Action of their Lives. And what can be a greater Abfurdity than this? I confeffed that the Abfurdity appeared peared to be evident. But if nothing then, continued he, which we do by Compulfion, or without intending it, be Art; and not even what we do intentionally, if it proceed from mere Will and uninftructed In ftinct; what is it we have left remaining, where Art may be found converfant? Or can it indeed poffibly be in any thing elfe, than in that which we do by Ufe, Practice, Experience, and the like, all which are born with no one, but which are acquired all afterward by Advances unperceived. I can think, faid I, of nothing elfe. Let therefore the Words Habit and Habitual, faid he, reprefent this Requifite, and let us fay, that Art is not only a Caufe, but an intentional Caufe; and not only an intentional Caufe, but an intentional Caufe founded in Habit, or, in other Words, an babitual Caufe. You appear, faid I, to argue rightly.

But if Art, faid he, be what we have now afferted, fomething learnt and acquired; if it be alfo a thing intentional or voluntary, and not governed either by Cbance or blind Necefity ----- If this, I fay, be the Cafe, then mark the Confequences. And what, faid I, are they? The firft, faid he, is, that no Events, in what we call the natural World, muft be referred to Art; fuch as Tides, Winds, Vegetation, Gravitation, Attraction, and the like. For thefe all happen by ftated Laws; by a curious Necelfity, which is not to be withftood, and where the nearer and immediate Caufes appear to be utterly unconfcious. I confefs, faid I, it feems fo. In the next place, continued he, we muft exclude all thofe admired Works of the Animal World, which, for their Beauty and Order, we metaphorically call artificial. The Spider's Web, the Bee's Comb, the Beaver's Houfe, and the Bird's Neft, muft all be referred to another Source. ----For who can fay, thefe ever learnt to be thus ingenious? or, that they were ignorant by Nature, and knowing only by Education? None furely, replied I. But we have fill, faid he, a higher Confideration. And what, faid I, is that? It is, anfwered he, this---Not even that Divine Porver, which gave Form to all things, then acted by Art, when it gave that Form. For how, continued he, can that Intelligence, which has all Perfestion ever in Energy, be fuppofed to have any Power, not original to its Nature? How can it ever have any thing to learn, when it knows all from the Beginning; or, being perfect and complete, admit of what is additional and fecondary? I fhould think, faid I , it were impoffible. If fo, faid he, then Art can never be numbered among its Attributes: For all Art is fomething learnt, fomething fecondary and acquired, and never original to any Being, which poffeffes it. So the Fact, faid $I_{\text {, }}$ has been eftablifhed.

IF this therefore, continued he, be true; if Art belong not either to the Divine Nature, the Brute Nature, or the Inanimate Nature,----- to what Nature fhall we fay it does belong ? I know not, faid I, unlefs it be to the Human. You are right, faid he;
he; for every Nature elfe you perceive is either too excellent to want it, or too bafe to be capable of it. Befide, except the Human, what other Nature is there left? Or where elfe can we find any of the Arts already inftanced, or indeed whatever others we may now fancy to enumerate? Who are Statuaries, but Men? Who Pilots, who Muficians? This feems, replied I , to be the Fact.

Let us then, continued he, fay, not only that Art is a Caufe, but that it is, Man becoming a Caufe; and not only Man, but Man intending to do what is going to be done, and doing it alfo by Habit; fo that its whole Idea, as far as we have hitherto conceived it, is ----- Man becoming a Caufe, Intentional and Habitual. I confefs, faid I, it has appeared fo.

And thus, faid he, have you had exhibited a fort of a Sketch of Art. You muft rea member however, it is but a Sketch : there is ftill fomething wanting to make it a finihed finifhed Piece. I begged to know what this was. In order to that, replied he, I cannot do better, than remind you of a Paffage in your admired Horace. It is concerning Alfenus; who (if you remember) he tells us, though his Tools were laid afide, and his Shop fhut up, was ftill an Artift as much as ever.----
---Alfenus vafer omni

Abjecto inftrumento Artis, claufâq; taberna, Sutor erat ------ I remember, faid I, the Paffage, but to what purpofe is it quoted? Only, replied he, to fhew you, that I fhould not be without Precedent, were I to affirm it not abfolutely neceffary to the being of Art, that it fhould be Man actually becoming a Caufe; but that it was enough, if he had the Power or Capacity of fo becoming, Why then, faid I , did you not fettle it fo at firft? Becaufe, replied he, Faculties, Porvers, Capacities (call them as you will) are in themfelves abftract from Action, but obfcure and bidden things. On the contrary; Energies and Operations lie open to the Senjes, and cannot cannot but be obferved, even whether we will or no. And hence therefore, when firft we treated of Art, we chofe to treat of it, as of a thing only in Energy. Now we better comprehend it, we have ventured fomewhat farther. Repeat then, faid I, if you pleafe, the Alteration, which you have made. At firft, anfwered he, we reafoned upon Art, as if it was only Man actually becoming a Caufe intentional and habitual. Now we fay it is a Power in Man of becoming fuch Caufe; and that, though be be not actually in the Exercife of fucb a Power. I told him, his Amendment appeared to be juft.

14 Concerning A R T,

There is too another Alteration, added he, which, for the fake of Accuracy, is equally wanting; and that is with refpect to the Epithet, Intentional or Voluntary. And what, faid $I$, is that? We have agreed it, replied he, to be neceffary, that all Art fhould be under the Guidance of Intention or Volition, fo that no Man acting by Compulfion, or by Chance, fhould be called an Artif. We have. Now tho ${ }^{\circ}$ this, faid he, be true, yet it is not fufficient. We muft limit this Intention or Volition to a peculiar Kind. For were every little Fancy, which we may work up into Habit, a fufficient Foundation to conftitute an Art, we fhould make Art one of the loweft and moft defpicable of things. The meaneft Trick of a common Juggler might, in fuch cafe, entitle a Man to the Character of an Artift. I confeffed, without fome Limitation, that this might be the Confequence. But how limit Intentions to a Kind or Species? What think you, replied he, if we were to do it, by the Number and Dignity of the Precepts, which go to the directing of our Intentions? You muft explain, faid I; for your Meaning is obfcure. Are there not Precepts, replied he, in Agriculture, about Ploughing and Sowing? Are there not Precepts in Architecture, about Orders and Proportions? Are there not the fame in Medicine, in Navigation, and the reft? There are. And what is your Opinion of thefe feveral feveral Precepts? Are they arbitrary and capricious; or rational and feady? Are they the Inventions of a Day; or wellapproved by long Experience? I told him, I fhould confider them for the moft as: rational, fteady, and well-approved by long Experience. And what, continued he, fhall we fay to their Number? Are they few? Or are they not rather fo numerous, that in every particular Art, fcarce any comprehend them all, but the feveral Artifts themfelves; and they only by length of time, with due Attendance and Application? I replied, It feemed fo.
Suppofe then We were to pronounce, that to every Art there was a Syftem of fuch various and well-approved Precepts: Should we err? No certainly. And fuppofe we fhould fay, that the Intention of every Artift, in his feveral Art, was directed by fuck a Sy/tem: Would you allow this? Surely. And will not this limiting of Intentions to fuch only, as are fo directed, fufficiently diftinguifh Art from any thing elfe which may refemble it? --- In other words, Is it likely, under this Diftinction, to be confounded with other Habits of a trifling, capricious and inferior Kind ? I replied, I thought not.

Let us then fee, fid he, and collect all that we have faid, together. We have already agreed, that the Power of acting after a certain manner is fufficient to conftitute Art, without the actually operating agreeably to that Power. And We have now farther held the Intentions of every Artift to be directed by a Syftem of various and well-approved Precepts. Befides all this,' we fettled it before, that all Art was founded in Habit; and was peculiar to Man; and was feen by becoming the Cause of Some Efffeet. It fhould rem then, that the whole Idea of Art was this----Anhabitual Power in Man of becoming the Cause of some Effect, according to a System of various and well-approved Precepts.' I replied, That his Account appeared to be probable and jut.

18  Concerning A R T,

§.2. And now then, continued he, as we have gone thus far, and have fettled between us what we believe Art to be; fhall we go a little farther, or is your Patience at an end?

Oh! no, replied I, not if any thing be left. We have walked fo leifurely, that much remains of our Way ; and I can think of no Method, how we may better amufe ourfelves.

My Friend upon this proceeded with faying, that if Art were a Caufe, (as we had agreed it was) it muft be the Caufe of fomething. Allow it, faid I. And if it be the Caufe of fomething, it muft have a Subject to operate on. For every Agent has need of its Patient ; the Smith of his Iron, the Carpenter of his Wood, the Statuary of his Marble, and the Pilot of his Ship.
I anfwered, It was true. If then, faid he, the Subjects of particular Arts be thus evident: What Idea fhall we form of that univerfal Subject, wbich is common to all Art? At this Queftion, it muft be confeffed, I was a little embaraffed.

This induced him to afk me, How many forts of Subjects I allowed of ? Here I could not help hefitating again. There is nothing, continued he, fo difficult in the Queftion. You muft needs perceive, that all Natures whatever can be but either contingent or neceffary. This may be, re $\rightarrow$ plied I; but even yet I do not comprehend you. Not comprehend me! faid he; then anfwer me a Queftion: Can you conceive any Medium between Motion and $\mathrm{NO}_{\mathrm{o}}$ Motion, between Cbange and No-Cbange? I replied, I could not. If not, can you conceive any thing in the whole Order of Being, which muft not be either liable to there, or not liable? Nothing.

Call thofe things therefore, faid he, which are liable to Change and Motion, contingent Natures; and thofe, which are not liable, nece ffary Natures: And thus you have a Divifon, in which all things are in cluded. We have fo, faid I.

20 Concerning A R T,

In which therefore, faid he, of thefe Na tures fhall we feek for this common Subject of Art ? To this, I told him, I was unable to anfwer. Reflect, faid he, a little. We have found Art to be a Caufe.

We have. And is it not effential to every Caufe to operate? or can it be a Caufe, and be the Caufe of nothing? Impoffible. Wherever therefore there is Caufe, there is neceffarily implied fome Operation. There is. And can there poffibly be Operation, without Motion and Cbange? There cannot. But Cbange and Motion muft needs be incompatible with what is neceffary and immutable. They muft. So therefore is Caufe. It muft. And fo therefore Art. It muft. Truth therefore, faid he, and Knowledge; Principles and Demonftrations; the general and intellectual Effences of Things; in fhort, the rebole immutable and neceflary Nature is no part of it reducible to a Subject of Art. It feems fo, faid I.

If therefore Art, faid he, have nothing to do with the feady, abftract, and neceffary Nature, it can have only to do with the tranfient, the particular, and contingent one. 'Tis true, faid I; for there is no other left. And fhall we then fay, replied he, it has to do with all contingent Natures exifting in the Univerfe? For aught, replied I, which to me appears contrary. What think you, faid he, of thofe Contingents of bigber Order? fuch as the grand Planetary Syftem; the Succeffion of the Seafons; the regular and uniform Courfe of all fuperior Natures in the Univerfe? Has Art any Ability to intermeddle here? No certainly, faid I: Thefe fuperior Contingents then, sobich move roithout Interruption, are, it feems, above it. They are.
And fhall we fay the fame of thofe of lower fort; thofe, whofe Courfe we fee often interrupted; thofe, which the Strength and Cunning of Man are able to influence and controul? Give Inftances, faid I , of what you mean, I mean, faid he, Earth, Water, Air, Fire; Stones, Trees; Animals; Men themfelves. Are thefe Contingents within the reach of Art, or has Art bere no Influence ? I fhould think ${ }_{2}$ faid I, a very great one.

If this, continued he, be true, it fhould feem that the common or universal Subject of Art was---All those contingent Natures, which lie within the reach of the Human Powers to influence. I acknowledge, faid $\mathrm{I}_{3}$ it appears fo.

Thus far then, faid he, we have advanced with tolerable Succefs. We have gained fome Idea of Art, and fome Idea of its Subject. Our Inquiry, on the whole, has informed us, that ART is .---- an babitual Power in Man of becoming a certain Caufe ---- and that its Subject is ---- every fuch contingent Nature, which lies within the reach of the buman Powers to influence.
§.3. 'Tis true, faid I, this appears to have been the Refult of our Inquiry, and a full and ample one it feems to have been. A long one, replied he, if you pleafe, but not a full and ample one. Can any thing, faid I, be wanting, after what you have faid already? Certainly, replied he, a great deal. We have talked much indeed of Art, confidered as a Caufe; and much of the Subject, on which it operates; but what moves thefe Operations to commence, and where it is they end, thefe are Topicks, which we have as yet little thought of. I begged him then, that we might now confider them,

He was willing, he faid, for his part; and immediately went on by afking, What I thought was the Beginning of Art? I mean, faid he, by Beginning, that Caufe for the fake of which it operates, and which being fuppofed away, Men would be never moved to follow it. To this, I told him, I was unable to anfwer. You will not think it, faid he, fo difficult, when you have a little more confidered. Reflect with yourfelf ------Was it not the Abfence of Health, which excited Men to cultivate the Art of Medicine? I replied, it was. What then, faid he, if the Human Body had been fo far perfect and Jelffufficient, as never to have felt the Viciffitudes of Well and Ill: Would not then this Art have been wholly unknown?

24 Concerning A R T,
I replied, I thought it would. And what, faid he, if we extend this Perfection a degree farther, and fuppofe the Body not only thus bealthful, but withal fo robuft, as to have felt no Uneafinefs from all Inclemencies of Weather: Would not then the Arts of Building alfo and Clothing have been as ufelefs, as that of Medicine?
I replied, It feemed they would. But what, faid he, if we bound not this Perfection of ours even here? What if we fuppofe, that not only Things merely neceffary, but that thofe alfo conducive to Elegance and Enjoyment were of courfe all implied in the Conftitution of Human $\mathrm{Na}-$ ture; that they were all fecady, confant, and independant from witbout, and as infeparable from our Being, as Perfpiring, or Circulation: In fuch cafe, would not the Arts of Mufic, Painting and Poetry, with every other Art paffing under the Denomination of Elegant, have been as ufelefs, as we have held thofe others of Medicine, Clothing, and Architecture? I replied, It feemed they would. It was then the Abjence of Joys, Elegancies, and Amufements from our Confitution, as left by Nature, which induced us to Seek them ins thefe Arts of Elegance and Entertainment. It was. And what, faid he, are Joys, Elegancies, Amufements, Health, Robuftnefs, with thofe feveral other Objects of Defire, whofe Abfence leads to Art, but fo many different Names of that complex Being called Good, under its various, and multiform, and popular Appearances? I replied, It feemed fo.

If this then, faid he, be granted, it fhould feem that the Beginning or Principle of Art was the Abjence of fometbing tbougbt Good; becaufe it has appeared that it is for the fake of fome fuch abfent Good that every Art operates; and becaufe, if we fuppofe no "fuch Abfence to bave been, ave flould never bave known any Art. I confefs, faid I, it feems fo.

26 Concerning A R T,

But how then, continued he? If it be true that all Art implies fuch Principle, is it reciprocally true, that every fuch Principle fhould imply Art? I fee no reafon, faid $I$, why not. Confider, faid he. It might be thought a Good by fome perhaps, to be as ftrong as thofe Horfes, which are ploughing yonder Field; to be as tall as thofe Elms, and of a Nature as durable.-----Yet would the Abfence of Goods, like thefe, lead to Art? Or is it not ablurd to fuppofe, there fhould be an Art of Impoffibilites? Abfurd, faid I , certainly. If fo, faid he, when we define the Beginning or Principle of Art, it is not enough to call it the Abfence of fometbing thougbt Good, unlefs we add, that the Good be a Good Pofible; a Thing attainable by Man; a Thing relative to Human Life, and confferit with Human Nature: Or does not this alfo appear a Requifite? I replied, I thought it did.

But fill, continued he ----- Is it a fufficient Motive to Art, that the Good defired fhould be attainable? In other Words, does every Abjence of Good attainable lead to Art, or is our Account ftill too loofe, and in need of ftricter Determination?
Of none, faid I, which appears to me. Reflect, faid he ; there are fome of the pof. fible Goods fo obvious and eafy, that every Man, in an ordinary State of common natural Perfection, is able to acquire them, without Labour or Application. You will hardly deny but that a fair Apple, tempting to eat, may be gathered; or a clear Spring, tempting to drink, may be drank at, by the mere Suggeftions of Will and uninfructed Infinct. I granted, they might.

It would be therefore impertinent, faid he, to fuppofe that Goods, like thefe, fhould fhould lead to Art, becaufe Art would be fuperfluous, and in no refpect neceffary. Indeed, faid I, it feems fo.

28 Concerning A R T,

If therefore, faid he, neither Impofibles lead to Art, becaufe of fuch there can be no Art; nor Things eafily pofjible, becaufe in fuch Nature can do without Art: what is it we have left, to which we may refer it? Or can it indeed be to any other than to that middle Clafs of Things, which, however poffible, are ftill not fo eafy, but to be beyond the Powers of Will, and Inftinct uninAtructed ? I replied, It feemed fo. That there are many fuch things, faid he, is evident paft doubt. For what Man would pay Artifts fo largely for their Arts, were he enabled by Nature to obtain whatever he defired? Or who would ftudy to be fkilled in Arts, were Nature's original Powers to be in all refpects fufficient? I told him, It was not likely.

It fhould feem then, faid he, according to this Reafoning, that the Beginning, Ma.
tive, or Principle of Art; that Caufe, which firft moved it to Action, and, for the fake of which its feveral Operations are exerted, is ---- the Want or Absence of something appearing Good; Relative to Human Life, and attainable by Man, but superior to his natural And uninstructed Faculties.
I replied, I could not deny, but that the Account appeared probable.
§. 4. Let this then, faid he, fuffice, as to the Beginning of Art. But how fhall we defcribe its End? What is it we fhall pronounce this? My Anfwer, I replied, muft be the fame as often already; which was indeed, that I could not refolve the Queftion. It fhould feem, faid he, not fo difficult, now we have difcovered what Beginning is. For if Beginning and End are Contraries and oppofed, it is but to invert, as it were, the Notion of Beginning, and we gain of courfe the Notion of End. I afked him, In what manner? Thus, faid he, the Beginning of Art has been

30 . Concerning A R T,
been held to be fomething, which, if fuppofed away, Men would be never moved to apply to Art. By Inverfion therefore the End of Art muft be fometbing, which, wbile fuppofed awoy, Men will never ceaje applying to Art; becaufe, were they to ceafe, while the End was wanting, they would ceafe with Imperfection, and their Performance would be incomplete. To this I anfwered, That the Account, however true, was by far too general, to give me much Intelligence.

He replied, If it was, he would endeavour to be more particular. And what, continued he, fhould we fay, that every Art, according to its Genius, will of courfe be accomplifbed either in fome Energy, or in fome Work; that, befides thefe two, it can be accomplifhed in nothing elfe ; and confequently that one of thefe muft of neceflity be its End? I could not here but anfwer him with a Smile, That the Matter was now much obfcurer than ever. I find then, faid he, it is proper we fhould be more explicit in our Inquiries, and deduce our Reafonings from fome clearer Point of View. I told him, It was quité neceffary, if he intended to be intelligible.

Thus then, faid he. You will grant, that every Art, being a Caufe, muft be productive of fome Effect; for inftance, Mufic, of a Tune; Dancing, of a Dance ; Architecture, of a Palace; and Sculpture, of a Statue. 'Tis allowed, faid I. You will grant alfo, faid he, that in the epe Productions they are all accompliJbed and ended: Or , in other words, that as Mufic produces a Tune, fo is it ended and accomplifhed in a Tune; and as Sculpture produces a Statue, fo is it ended and accomplifhed in a Statue.
'Tis admitted, faid I. Now thefe Productions, continued he, if you will examine, are not like Units or Mathematical Points; but, on the contrary, all confjif of a certain Number of Parts, from whofe accurate Order is derived their Beauty and Perfection. For example; Notes, ranged after fuch a manner, make a Tune in Mufic; and Limbs, ranged after fuch a manner, make a Statue or a Picture. I replied, They did. If then the Productions, continued he, of every Art thus confift of certain Parts it will follow, that thefe Parts will be either co-exiftent, or not; and if not co-exiftent, then of courfe fuccefive. Affift me, faid I, by another Inftance, for you are growing again obfcure. Co-exiftent, replied he, as in a Statue, where Arms, Legs, Body, and Head all fubffit together at one individual Infant: Succefive, as in a Tune or Dance, where there is no fuch Co-exiftence, but where fome Parts are ever pafing away, and others are ever fucceeding them.

CAN any thing be faid to exift, faid I, whofe Parts are ever pafing away?
Surely, replied he, or how elfe exift Years and Seafons, Months and Days, with their common Parent, Time itfelf? -- Or indeed what is Human Life, but a Compound of Parts tbus fleeting; a Compound of various and multiform Actions, which fucceed each other in a certain Order? The Fact, faid $I$, appears fo.

This then, continued he, being the cafe, and there being this Difference in Productions, call every Production, the Parts of wobich exift fuccef/ively, and whofe Nature batb its Being or Efence in a Tranfition, call it, what it really is, a Motion or an Energy-Thus a Tune and a Dance are Energies; thus Riding and Sailing are Energies; and fo is Elocution, and fo is Life itfelf. On the contrary, call every Production, whofe Parts exift all at once, and wobofe Nature depends not on a Tranjition for its Efence, call it a Work, or Thing done, not an Energy or Operation.-----Thus a Houfe is a Work, a Statue is a Work, and fo is a Ship, and fo a Picture. I feem, faid I, to comprehend you.

If then there be no Productions, faid he, but muft be of Parts, either co-exiftent or fuccefive; and the one of thefe be, as you perceive, a Work, and the otber be an Energy; it will follow, there will be no Production, but will be either a Work or an

D
Energy.

34 Concerning A R T,
Energy. There will not, faid I. But every Art, faid he, you have granted, is accomplifbed and ended in what it produces? I replied, I had. And there are no Productions, but Works or Energies? None.

It will follow then, faid he, that every Art will be accomplished and ended in a Work or Energy.

To this I anfwered, That his Reafoning I could not impeach ; but that fill the Diftinction of Work and Energy was, what I did not well comprehend.

There are feveral Circumftances, faid he, which will ferve fufficiently to make it clear. I begged he would mention fome.

Thus then, faid he ---When the Production of any Art is an Energy, then the Perfection of the Art can be only perceived during that Energy. For inftance, the Perfection of a Mufician is only known, while he continues playing. But when the Production duction of any Art is a Work, then is not the Perfection vifible during the Energy, but only after it. Thus the Perfection of the Statuary is not feen during his Energies as a Statuary, but when his Energies are over; when no Stroke of the Chizzel is wanting, but the Statue is left, as the Refult of all. ''Tis true, faid I.

Again, continued he, ------ in confequence of this, where the Production is an Energy, there the Production is of Neceflity co-eval with the Artif. For how fhould the Energy furvive the Man; the Playing remain, when the Mufician is dead? But where the Production is a Work, then is there no fuch Necefjity. The Work may well remain, when the Artift is forgotten ; there being no more reafon, that the Statue and the Artift fhould be co-eval, than the Man and the rude Marble, before it received a regular Figure. You feem now, faid $\mathrm{I}_{2}$ to have explained yourfelf.
36. Concerning A R T,

If then, faid he, Work and Energy be made intelligible Terms, you cannot but perceive the Truth of what we before afferted ----- that every Art, according to its Genius, muft needs be accomplibbed in one of thefe; that, except in thefe two, it can be accomplifbed in nothing elfe; and confequently that ONE OF THESE MUST OF NECESSITY be its End. I anfwered, That the Reafoning appeared juftly deduced. So much then, replied he, for the Ending or Accomplifbment of Art; and fo much alfo for a long, and, I fear, an intricate Difquilition.
§. 5. He had no fooner faid this, than I was beginning to applaud him; efpecially on his having treated a Subject fo copioully, flarted, as it were, by Chance, and without any apparent Preparation. But I had not gone far, before he interrupted me, by faying, That as to my Praifes they were more than he deferved; that he could pretend to no great Merit for having been, as I called it, fo copious, when he had fo often before thought, on what at prefent we had been talking. In fhort, fays he, to tell you a Secret, I have been a long time amufing myfelf, in forming an Effay upon this Subject. I could not here forbear reproaching him, for having hitherto concealed his Intentions. My Reproaches produced a fort of amicable Controverfy, which at length ended in his offering, That, to make me fome amends, he would now recite me (if I pleared) a fmall Fragment of the Piece; a Fragment, which he had happened accidentally to have about him. The Propofal, on my part, was willingly accepted, and without farther Delay, the Papers were produced.

As to the Performance itfelf, it muft be confeffed, in point of Stile, it was fomewhat high and florid, perhaps even bordering upon an Excefs. At the time however of recital, this gave me lefs Offence, becaufe it feemed, as it were, to palliate the Drynefs of what had paffed before, and in fome fort to fupply the Place of an Epilogue to our Conference. Not however to anticipate, he began reading as follows,
$3^{8}$ Concerning A R T,
"OArt! Thou Praife of Man, and "Ornament of Human Life! Poffeffed of " Thee, the meaneft Genius grows deferv" ing, and has a juft Demand for a Portion " of our Efteem. Devoid of Thee, the "Brighteft of our Kind lie loft and ufelefs, " and are but poorly diftinguifhed from "the moft Defpicable and Bafe. When "we inhabited Forefts in common with "Brutes, nor otherwife known from them "than by the Figure of our Species; Thou "taughteft us to affert the Sovereignty of our " Nature, and to affume that Empire, for ${ }^{\text {" }}$ which Providence intended us. Thou" fands of Utilities owe their Birth to Thee; "thoufands of Elegancies, Pleafures, and "Joys, without which Life itfelf would be «t but an innfipid Poffeffion.
"Wide and extenfive is the Reach "pof thy Dominion, No Element is "c there either fo violent or fo fubtle, fo yield" ing or fo Juggi/h, as by the Powers of its "Nature to be fuperior to thy Direction. " Thou dreadeft not the fierce Impetuofity " of Fire, but compelleft its Violence to " be both obedient and ufeful. By it Thou " fofteneft the ftubborn Tribe of Minerals, " fo as to be formed and moulded into "Shapes innumerable. Hence Weapons, "Armour, Coin; and previous to thefe, " and other Thy Works and Energies, " hence all thofe various Tools and Inftru" ments, which empower Thee to proceed " to farther Ends more excellent. Nor is "the fubtle Air lefs obedient to Thy "Power, whether Thou willeft it to be a " Minifter to our Pleafure, or Utility. At " Thy Command it giveth Birth to Sounds, " which charm the Soul with all the Powers " of Harmony. Under thy Inftruction it " moves the Ship o'er Seas, while that " yielding Element, where otherwife we "fink, even Water itfelf is by Thee " taught to bear us; the vaft Ocean to pro". mote that Intercourfe of Nations, which

40 Concerning A R T,
"Ignorance would imagine it was deftined "to intercept. Tofay how thy Influence is ss feen on Earth, would be to teach "the meaneft, what he knows already. "Suffice it but to mention Fields of Arable " and Pafture; Lawns and Groves, and " Gardens; and Plantations; Cottages, Vil" lages, Caftles, Towns; Palaces, Temples, " and fpacious Cities.
"Nor does thy Empire end in Subjects " thus in-animate. Its Power alfo extends " thro' the various Race of Animals, "s who either patiently fubmit to become " thy Slaves, or are fure to find Thee an ir"s refiftible Foe. The faithful Dog, the ss patient Ox, the generous Horfe, and the " mighty Elephant, are content all to re${ }^{s}$ ceive their Inftructions from Thee, and "s readily to lend their natural Infinets or "Strength, to perform thofe Offices, which sc thy Occafions call for. If there be found "s any Species, which are ferviceable when "s dead, Thou fuggefteft the Means to in?s veftigate and take them. If any be fo favage, "favage, as to refufe being tamed; or of "Natures fierce enough, to venture an At"tack; Thou teacheft us to fcorn their " brutal Rage ; to meet, repel, purfue, and "conquer.
"And fuch, O Art! is thy amazing "Influence, when Thou art employed only " on there inferior Subjects; on Natures In" animate, or at beft Irrational. But when"e'er Thou choofeft a Subject more noble, " and fetteft to the cultivating of Mind " itfelf, then 'tis Thou becomeft truly ami" able and divine ; the ever flowing Source " c f thofe fublimer Beauties, of which no "Subject but Mind alone is capable. Then " 'tis Thou art enabled to exhibit to Man" kind the admired Tribe of Poets and of " Orators ; the facred Train of Patriots and " of Heroes; the godlike Lift of Philofo" phers and Legiflators; the Forms of vir"tuous and equal. Polities, where private "Welfare is made the fame with public; "where Crowds themfelves prove dif. " interefted
" interefted and brave, and Virtue is made " a national and popular Characteriftic.
"Hail! facred Source of all thefe "Wonders! Thyyelf inftruct me to praife " Thee worthily, thro' whom, whate'er " we do, is done withElegance and Beauty ; " without whom, what we do, is ever grace" lefs and deformed.----Venerable Power! "By what Name fhall I addrefs Thee? "Shall I call Thee Ornament of Mind; " or art Thou more truly Mind itfelf? ?-"'Tis Mind Thou art, moft perfect " Mind; not rude, untaught, but fair and " polifhed ; in fuch Thou dwelleft, of fuch " Thou art the Form; nor is it a Thing " more poffible to feparate Thee from fuch, " than it would be to feparate Thee from " thy own Exiftence." -----

My good Friend was now arrived to a very exalted Pitch, and was purfuing his Panegyric with great Warmth andFluency; when we entered the Suburbs, our Walk being being near finifhed. The People, as we went along, began to look at us with Surprize ; which I, who was lefs engaged, having leifure to obferve, thought 'twas proper to admonifh my Friend, that he Thould give over. He immediately ceafed reading; put his Papers up; and thank'd me for ftopping him at fo feafonable a Time.
§. 6. Wнат remained of our Difcourfe paffed off with lefs Rapture, and was indeed no more, than a kind of fhort Re capitulation.
/ He obferved to me, that our Inquiries had furnifhed out an Anfwer to four different Queftions. For thus, faid he, if it be afked us, What Art is? We have to Anfwer, it is ----- an babitual Porver in Man, of becoming the Caufe of fome Effect, according to a Sytem of various and wellapproved Precepts. If it be alked us, On what Subject Art operates? We can anfwer, On a contingent, which is within the reach of the Human Powers to influence. If it be afked us, For what Reafon, for the fake of wobat Art operates? We may reply, For the fake of fome abfent Good, relative to Human Life, and attainable by Man, but fupeperior to bis natural and uninftructed Faculties. Laftly, if it be afked, Where 'tis the Operations of Art end? We may fay, Either in Jome Energy, or in fome Work.

44 Concerning A R T,

He added, That if he were not afraid of the Imputation of Pedantry, he could be almoft tempted to fay, That we had been confidering Art, with refpect to thofe four Caufes, fo celebrated once among Profeffors in the Schools. By thefe, upon Inquiry, I found that he meant certain Caufes, called the *efficient, the $\downarrow$ Material, the $\ddagger$ Final, and the \|I Formal.

But

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { * P. } 17 . \quad+\text { P. } 22 . \quad \pm \text { P. } 28,29 . \\
& \text { & P. } 34,36 .
\end{aligned}
$$

But here, without farther explaining, he begged for the prefent that we might conclude, being fufficiently, as he faid, fatigued with the Length of what had paffed already. The Requeft was reafonable I could not but own, and thus ended our Converfation, and foon after it our Walk.

The E N D.

TREATISE the Second: A

DISCOURSE O N

M U S I C, PA INTING,
A N D

POETRY.

> ,

1

$$
=1 \pi
$$

(49)

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER the First.
NTRODUCTION ---- Defign and Diftribution of the Whole ---Preparation for the following Cbapters.

CHAPTER the SECOND.
On the Subjects, which Painting imitates--. On the Subjests, which Mufic imitates-Comparifon of Mufic with Painting.

CHAPTER the Third.

On the Subjects which Poetry imitates, but imitates only tbro' natural Media, or mere Sounds ---- Comparifon of Poetry in this Capacity, frrft with Painting, then with Mufic.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER the Fourth,
$\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{N}}$ the Subjects which Poetry imitates, not by mere Sounds or natural Media, but by Words fignificant; the Subjects being fuch, to which the Genius of each of the otber two Arts is moft perfectly adapted.---Its Comparifon in thefe Subjects, frrf with Painting, then with Mufic.

CHAPTER the Fifth.

On the Subjects, which Poetry imitates by Words fignificant, being at the fame time Subjects not adapted to the Genius of either of the other Arts. ---- The Nature of thefe Subjects. ------ The Abilities of Poetry to imitate them.--- Comparifon of Poetry in refpect of thefe Subjects, firft with Painting, then with Mufic.

CHAP-

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER the Sixth.

On $^{\text {N Mufic confidered not as an Imitation, but }}$ as deriving its Efficacy from another Source.----- On its joint Operation by this means with Poetry. ------ An Objection to Mufic folved.----The Advantage arijng to it, as well as to Poetry, from their being united,----- Conchufon.

(53)

A  DISCOURSE  ON  MUSIC, PAINTING, and POETRY.

C H A P. 1.

Introduction. --- Defign and Diftribution of the Whole.-Preparation for the following Cbapters.

LL Arts have this in common, Ch. I. that they refpect Human Life. Some contribute to its Nece $/ \sqrt{2}-$ ties, as Medicine and Agriculture; others to its Elegance, as Mufic, Painting, and Poetry.

$$
\mathrm{E}_{3} \quad \text { Now }
$$

Ch. I. Now, with refpect to there two liferent Species, the neceffary Arts feem to have been prior in time; if it be probable, that Men confulted how to live and to support themselves, before they began to deliberate how to render Life agreeable. Nor is this indeed unconfirmed by Fact, there being no Nation known fo barbarous and ignorant, as where the Rudiments of thee neceffary Arts are not in forme degree cultivated. And hence poffibly they may appear to be the more excellent and worthy, as having claim to a Preference, derived from their Seniority.

The Arts however of Elegance cannot be faid to want Pretenfions, if it be true, that Nature framed us for fometbing more, than mere Exifence. Nay, farther, if Wellbeing be clearly preferable to Mere-being, and this without it be but a thing contemptile, they may have reafon perhaps to afpire even to a Superiority. But enough of this, to come to our Purpose.
§. 2. TheliDefign of this Difcourfe is to Ch. T. treat of Music, Painting, and Poetry; to confider in what they agree, and in what they differ; and which, upon the whole, is more excellent than the OTHER TWO:

In entering upon this Inquiry; it is firft to be obferved, that the Mind is made confcious of the natural World and its Affections, and of other Minds and their Affections, by the feveral Organs of the Senfes (a). By the fame Organs, thefe Arts exhibit to the Mind Imitations, and imitate either Parts or Affections of this natural

$$
\mathrm{E}_{4} \quad \text { World; }
$$

(a) To explain fome future Obfervations, it will be proper here to remark, that the Mind from thefe Materials thus brought together, and from its own Operations on them, and in confequence of them, becomes fraught with Ideas ----- and that many Minds fo fraught, by a fort of СомРАст afigning to each Idea fome Sound to be its MARk or Symbol, were the firft Inventors and Founders of Language.
h. I. World; or elfe the Paffions, Energies, and other Affections of Minds. there is this Difference however between there Arts and Nature; that Nature paffes to the Percipient thro' all the Senfes; whereas thee Arts ufe only two of them, that of Seeing and that of Hearing. And hence it is that the fenfile Objects or Media, thro' which (b.) they imitate, can be fuck only, as there two Senfes are framed capable of perceiving; and there Media are Motion, Sound, Colour, and Figure.

Paint-

(b) To prevent Confufion it muff be observed, that in all there Arts there is a Difference between the fencible Media, taro' which they imitate, and the Subjects imitated. The fenfible Media, tho' which they imitate, muff be always relative to that Sense, by which the particular Art applies to the Mind; but the Subject imitated may be foreign to that Sense, and beyond the Power of its Perception. Painting, for infrance, (as is thew in this Chapter) has no Senfible Media, thro' which it operates, except Colour and Figure: But as to Subjects, it may have Motions, Sounds, moral Affections and Actions; none of which are either Colours or Figures, but which however are all capable of being imitated thro' them. See Chapter the Second, Notes (b), (c), (d).

Painting, having the Eye for its Or - Ch. I. gan, cannot be conceived to imitate, but thro' the Media of vifible Objects. And farther, its Mode of imitating being always motionlefs, there muft be fubftracted from thefe the Medium of Motion. It remains then, that Colour and Figure are the only Media, thro' which Painting imitates.

Music, paffing to the Mind thro' the Organ of the Ear, can imitate only by Sounds and Motions.

Poetry, having the Ear alfo for its Organ, as far as Words are confidered to be no more than mere Sounds, can go no further in Imitating, than may be performed by Sound and Motion. But then, as thefe its Sounds fand by * Compact for the various Ideas, with which the Mind is fraught, it is enabled by this means to imitate, as far as

Lan-

* See Note (a) Fage 55. will, in a manner, include all things.

Now from hence may be feen, how thefe Arts agree, and how they differ.

They agree, by being all Mimetic; or Imitative.

They differ, as they imitate by different Media; Painting, by Figure and Colour; Music, by Sound and Motion; Painting and Music, by Media which are Natural; Poetry, for the greater Part, by a Medium wobich is Artificial (c).

As
(c) A Figure painted, or a Compofition of Mufical Sounds have always a natural Relation to that, of which they are intended to be the Refemblance. But a Defcription in Words has rarely any fuch natural Relation to the feveral Ideas, of which thofe Words are the Symbols. None therefore underftand the Dejcription, but thofe who fpeak the Language. On the contrary, Mufical and Picture-Imitations are intelligible to all Men.
§. 3. As to that ArT, which upon the Ch. I. whole is moft excellent of the tbree; it muft be obferved, that among thefe various Media of imitating, fome will naturally be more accurate, fome lefs; fome will beft imitate one Subject; fome, another. Again, among the Number of Subjects there will be naturally alfo a Difference, as to Merit and Demerit. There will be fome fublime, and fome low; fome copious, and fome Sort; fome patbetic, and others void of Pafion; fome formed to inftruct, and others not capable of it.

Now, from thefe two Circumftances; that is to fay, from the Accuracy of the Imitation, and the Merit of the Subject imitated, the Queftion concerning wobich Art is moft excellent, muft be tried and determined.

This

[^0] a Detail of Particulars, that fo there may be formed, on every part, juft and accurate Comparifons.

To begin therefore with Painting.

CHAP。

C H A P. II.

On the Subjects, wobich Painting imitates.-On the Subjects, which Mufic imitates.Comparifon of Mufic with Painting.

THE fittest Subjects for Ch. II. Painting, are all fuch Things and Incidents, as are * peculiarly cbaracterijed by Figure and Colour.

Of this kind are the whole Mafs (a) of Tbings inanimate and vegetable; fuch as Flowers, Fruits, Buildings, Landfkips ---The various Tribes of Animal Figures; fuch as Birds, Beafts, Herds, Flocks ---The Motions and Sounds peculiar to each Animal Species,

* P. 57.
(a) The Reafon is, that thefe things are almoft wholly known to us by their Colour and Figure. Befides, they are as motionlefs, for the moft part, in Noture, as in the Imitation. tions, which are obvious and remarkable (b)-The Human Body in all its Appearances (as Male, Female; Young, Old; Handfome, Ugly ;) and in all its Attitudes, (as Lying, Sitting, Standing, © ©c.) -----The Natural Sounds peculiar to the Human Species, (fuch as Crying, Laughing, Hollowing, E®c.) (c)-All Energies, Pafions, and Affections of the
(b) Instances of this kind are the Flying of Birds, the Galloping of Horfes, the Roaring of Lions, the Crowing of Cocks. And the Reafon is, that though to paint Motion or Sound be impofible, yet the Motions and Sounds here mentioned having an immediate and natural Comnection with a certain vifible Configuration of the Parts, the Mind, from a Profpect of this Configuration, conceives infenfibly that which is concomitant; and hence 'tis that, by a fort of Fallacy, the Sounds and Motions appear to be painted alfo. On the contrary, not fo in fuch Motions, as the Swimming of many kinds of Fifh; or in fuch Sounds, as the Purring of a Cat ; becaufe bere is no fuch /pecial Configuration to be perceived.
(c) The Reafon is of the fame kind, as that given in the Note immediately preceding; and by the fame Rule, the Obfervation muft be confined to natural Sounds only. In Language, few of the Speakers know the Configurations, which attend it.

PAINTING and POETRY.

Soul, being in any degree more intenfe or Ch. II. violent than ordinary (d) ----- All Actions and Events, whofe Integrity or Wholenefs depends upon a flort and felf-evident Succeffion of Incidents (e) ---- Or if the Succeffion be extended, then fuch Actions at leaft, whofe Incidents are all along, during tbat Succeffion, fimilar (f) ---- All Actions, which being qualified as above, open themfelves
(d) The Reafon is fill of the fame kind, viz. from their Vifible Effects on the Body. They naturally produce either to the Countenance a particular Rednefs or Palenefs; or a particular Modification of its Mufcles; or elfe to the Limbs, a particular Attitude. Now all thefe Effects are folely referable to Colour and Figure, the two grand fenfible Media, peculiar to Painting. See Raphael's Cartoons of St. Paul at Athens, and of his ftriking the Sorcerer Elymas blind: See alfo the Crucifixion of Polycrates, and the Sufferings of the Conful Regulus, both by Salvator Rofa.
(e) For of neceflity every Picture is a Punctum Temporis or Instant.
(f) Such, for inftance, as a Storm at Sea; whofe Incidents of Vifion may be nearly all included in foaming Waves, a dark Sky, Ships out of their erect Pofture, and Men hanging upon the Ropes.-------

64 $A$ Discourse on MUSIC,

Ch. II. felves into a large Variety of Circumftances, concurring all in the fame Point of Time (g) ----- All AEtions which are known, and known univerfally, rather than Actions nerwly invented, or known but to ferw (b).

And

Or as a Battle; which from Beginning to End prefents nothing elfe, than Blood, Fire, Smoak, and Diforder. Now fuch Events may be well imitated all at once; for how long foever they laft, they are but Repetitions of the fame.
(g) For Painting is notbounded in Extension, as it is in Duration. Befides, it feems true in every Species of Compofition, that, as far as Perplexity and Confufion may be avoided, and the Wholeness of the Piece may be preferved clear and intelligible; the more ample the Magnitude, and the greater the Variety, the greater alfo, in proportion, the Beauty and Perfection. Noble Inftances of this are the Pictures above-mentioned in Note (d).
 $\pi р \alpha ́ \gamma \mu \alpha \tau$ (G) ${ }^{\circ} p(\sigma), ~ \alpha \dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\prime} \mu \dot{\varepsilon} \nu \& \mathrm{c}$. See alfo Characterificks, V. I. p. 143. and Boffu, B. 1. cap. 16. L'Achille d'Homére eft 5 grand, \&c.
(h) The Reafon is, that a Picture being (as has been faid) but a Point or Inftant, in a Story well known the Spectator's Memory will fupply the previous and the fubfequent. But this cannot be done,

And thus much as to the Subjects of $\mathrm{Ch}_{i}$ II. Painting.
§. 2. In Music, the fittest Subjects of Imitation are all fuch Things where fuch Kinowledge is wanting. And therefore it may be juftly queftioned, whether the moft celebrated Subjects, borrowed by Painting from Hiftory, would have been any of them intelligible tbro the Medium of Painting only, fuppofing Hiftory to have been filent, and to have given no additional Information.

It may be here added, that Horace, conformably to this Reafoning, recommends even to Pcetic Imitation a known Story, before an unknown.

Tuque

Rectius Iliacum carmen deducis in ątus, 2uam fi proferres ignota, indictaq; primus. Art. Poet. v. 128.

And indeed as the being inderfood to others, either Hearers or Spectators, feems to be a common Requifite to all Mimetic Arts whatever; (for to thofe, who underftand them not, they are in fact no Mimetic Arts) it follows, that Perpicuity muft be ESential to them all; and that no prudent Artift would neglect, if it were poffible, any juft Advantage to obtain this End. Now there can be no Advantage greater, than the Notoriety of the Subject imitated. racterijed by Motion and Sound.

Motion may be either flow or fwifts even or ineven, broken or continuous.----Sound may be either loft or loud, bigh or low. Wherever therefore any of thefe Species of Motion or Sound may be found in an eminent (not a moderate or mean) degree, there will be room for Musical ImitaTION.

Thus, in the Natural or Inanimate World, Music may imitate the Glidings, Murmurings, Toffings, Roarings, and other Accidents of Water, as perceived in Fountains, Cataracts, Rivers, Seas, $\mathcal{E} c . .---$ The fame of Thunder---the fame of Winds, as well the ftormy as the gentle. --.-- In the Animal World, it may imitate the Voice of fome Animals, but cbiefly that of finging. Birds.----- It may alfo faintly copy fome of their Motions.---In the Human Kind, it can alfo
alfo imitate fome Motions (i) and Sounds ( $k$ ); Ch. II and of Sounds thofe moft perfectly; which are expreffive of Grief and Anguifh (l).

And thus much as to the Subjects, which Mufic imitates:
§. 3. IT remains then, that we compare theefe two Arts together. And here indeed, as to Mufical Imitation in general, it muft be confeffed that --as it can, from its Genius, imitate only Sounds and Motions-as there are not many Motions either in the $\mathrm{F}_{2}$ Animal
(i) As the Walk of the Giant Polypheme, in the Paftoral of Acis and Galatea.----Sce wbat ample Strides be takes, &rc.
(k) As the Sbouts of a Multitude, in the Coronation Anthem of, God fave the King, &c.
(l) The Reafon is, that this Species of Mufical Imitation moft nearly approaches Nature. For Grief, in moft Animals, declares itfelf by Sounds, which are not unlike to long Notes in the Cbromatic Syfem. Of this kind is the Chorus of Baal's Priefts in the Oratorio of Deborah, Doleful Tidings, how ye. zound, &x.

Th. II. Animal or in the Inanimate World, which are exclufively peculiar even to any Species, and fcarcely any to an Individual --- as there are no Natural Sounds, which characterife at leaf lower than a Species (for the Natural Sounds of Individuals are in every Species the fame) ------ farther, as Mufic does but imperfectly imitate even there Sounds and Motions ( $m$ ) -----On the contrary, as Figures, Poftures of Figures, and Colours characterife not only every fenfoible Species, but even every Individual; and for the mort part alfo the various * Energies and Paffions of every Individual ------ and farther, as Painting is able, with the bigheft Accuracy and Exactness, to imitate all there Colours and Figures; and while Mufical Imita-

> * See Note (d) of this Chapter.
(m) The Reason is from the Difsmilitude between the Sounds and Motions of Nature, and thole of Kufic. Mrifical Sounds are all produced from Even Vibration, mol Natural from Uneven; Mufical Motions are chiefly Definite in their Meafure, mot Natural are Indefinite.

Imitation pretends at mof to no more, than Ch . In the raifing of Ideas $/$ mimilar, itfelf afpires to raife Ideas the very fame --- in a word, as Painting, in refpect of its Subjects, is equal to the nobleft Part of Imitation, the imitating regular Actions conjfifing of a Whole and Parts; and of fucb Imitation, Mufic is utterly incapable ------ From all this it muft be confeffed, that Musical Imitation is greatly below that of Painting, and that at beft it is but an imperfect thing.

As to the Efficacy therefore of Music, it muft be derived from another Source, which muft be left for the prefent, to be confidered of hereafter.*.

There remains to be mentioned Imitation by Poetry.

* Ch. VI,

C H A P. III.

On the Subjects wwhich Poetry imitates, but imitates only tbro' natural Media, or mere, Sounds -----Comparijon of Poetry in this Capacity, fref with Painting, then with Mufic.
h.III. DOETIC Imitation includes every T thing in it, which is performed either by Picture-Imitation or Musical; for: its Materials are Words, and Words are * Symbols by CompaEt of all Ideas.

Farther as Words, befide their being Symbols by Compact, are alfo Sounds varioufly difinguifbed by their Aptnefs to be rapidly or Jowoly pronounced, and by the refpective Prevalence of Mutes, Liquids, or Vowels in their Compofition ; it will follow that, befide their Compact-Relation, they will

[^1]will have likewife a Natural Relation to all Ch.II fuch Things, between which and themfelves there is any Natural Refemblance. Thus, for inftance, there is a Natural Refemblance between all forts of bar $/ \mathrm{h}$ and grating Sounds. There is therefore (exclufive of its Signification) a Natural Relation between the Sound of a vile Hautboy, and of that Verfe in *Virgil, Stridenti miferum fipulâ dijperdere Carinten. or of that other in $\downarrow$ Milton, Grate on their Scrannel Pipes of weretched Straw,

So alfo between the fmootb frift Gliding of a River, and of that Verfe in || Horace,

Labitur, E labetur in omne volubilis cevum.
And thus in part even Poetic Imitation has its Foundation in Nature, But then

$$
\mathrm{F}_{4}
$$

this

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { * Ecl. 3. ver. 27. }+ \text { In his Lycidas. } \\
& \| \text { Epif. 2. 1, I. v. } 42,43 .
\end{aligned}
$$

Ch.III. this Imitation goes not far ; and taken without the Meaning derived to the Sounds from Compact, is but little intelligible, however perfect and elaborate.
§. 2. $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{F}}$ therefore Poetry be compared with Painting, in refpect of this its merely Natural and Inartificial Refem= blance, it may be jufly faid that----In as much as of tbis fort of Refemblance, Poetry (like Mufic) has no other Sources, than thofe troo of Sound and Motion----in as much as it often wants thefe Sources themfelves (for Numbers of Words neither bave, nor can bave any Refemblance to thofe Ideas, of which they are the Symbols) ------- in as much as Natural Sounds and Motions, which Poetry thus imitates, are themfelves but * loofe and indefinite $A c$ cidents of thofe Subjects, to which they belong, and confequently do but loofely and indefinitely characterife them----- laftly, in as much as Poetic Sounds and Motions do. but

[^2]but faintly refemble thofe of Nature, which Ch.III are themfelves confeffed to be fo imperfect and vague -------- From all this it will follow (as it has already followed of Mufic) that ----- Poetic Imitation founded in mere Natural Resemblance is much inferior to that of Painty ING, and at beft but very imperfect.
§. 3. As to the Preference, which fuck Poetic Imitation may claim before Musical, or Musical Imitation before that; the Merits on each Side may appear perhaps equal. They both fetch their Imitations from + Sound and Motion。 Now Music feems to imitate Nature better as to Motion, and Poetry as to Sound. The Reafon is, that in Motions (a) Mufic has

+ P. 57.
(a) MUsic has no lefs than five different Lengthe of Notes in ordinary ufe, reckoning from the Semibrief to the Semi-quaver ; all which may be infinitely

Ch.III. has a greater Variety; and in Sounds, thofe of Poetry approach nearer to Nature (b).

If therefore in Sound the one have the Preference, in Motion the otber, and the Merit of Sound and Motion be fuppofed nearly equal; it will follow, that the Merit of the two Imitations WILL BE NEARLY EQUAL ALSO.
nitely compounded, even in any one Time, or Mea-fure-----Poetry, on the other hand, has but two Lengtbs or Quantities, a long Syllable and a Bort, (which is its Half) and all the Variety of Verfe arifes from fuch Feet and Metres, as thefe two Species of Syllables, by being compounded, can be made produce.
(b) Musical Sounds are produced by even Vibrations, which fcarcely any Natural Sounds are--on the contrary, Words are the Product of uneven Vibration, and fo are moft Natural Sounds------Add to this, that Words are far more numerous, than Mufical Sounds. So that Poetry, as to Imitation by Sound, feems to exceed Mufic, not only in nearne $\sqrt{\S}$ of Refemblance, but even in Variety alfo.

C H A P. IV.

On the Subjects which Poetry imitates, no by mere Sounds or natural Media, but by Words fignificant ; the Subjects at the fame time being fuch, to which the Genius of each of the other two Arts is moft perfectly adapted.--Its Comparifon in thefe Subjects, frft with Painting, then with Mufic.

THE Mimetic Art of Poetry has Ch.IV, been hitherto confidered, as fetching its Imitation from mere Natural Refemblance. In this it has been fhewn much inferior to Painting, and nearly equal to Music.

It remains to be confidered, what its Merits are, when it imitates not by mere Natural Sound, but by Sound fignificant; by Words, the compact Symbols of all kinds of Ideas. From hence deperds its genuine Force, Ch.IV. Force. And here, as it is able to find Sounds expreffive of every Idea, fo is there no Subject either of Picture-Imitation, or Mufical, to which it does not afpire ; all Things and Incidents whatever being, in a manner, to be defcribed by Words.

Whether therefore Poetry, in this its proper Spbere, be equal to the Imitation of the other two ArTs, is the Queftion at prefent, which comes in order to be difcuffed.

Now as Subjects are infinite, and the other two Arts are not equally adapted to imitate all; it is propofed, firft to compare Poetry with them in fuch Subjects, to wobich they are moft perfectly adapted.
§. 2. To begin therefore with Painting. A Subject, in which the Power of this Art may be mof fully exerted, (whether it be taken from the Inanimate, or the Animal, or the Moral World) muft be a Subject, which is principally and eminently charazterifed by certain Colours, Figures, Figures, and Poftures of Figures ---- wobofe Ch.IV. Comprebenfion depends not on a Succefion of Events; or at leaft, if on a Succeffion, on a Short and Self-evident one-----wbich admits a large Variety of fuch Circumftances, as all concur in the fame individual Point of Time, and relate all to one principal AEtion.

As to fuch a Subject therefore ---- In as much as Poetry is forced to pafs thro the Medium of Compact, while Painting applies immediately thro' the Medium of Nature; the one being underftood to all, the other to the Speakers of a certain Language * only ------ in as much as Natural Operations muft needs be more affecting, than Artificial--- in as much as Painting helps our owon rude Ideas by its orwn, which are confummate and wrought up to the Perfection of Art; while Poetry can raife no other (a) than what every Mind is furnihed with

$$
\text { * Note (c) p. } 58
$$

(a) When we read in Milton of Eve, that Grace was in all her Steps, Heav'n in her Eye, In ex'y Gefture Dignity and Love;

Ch.IV. with before--in as much as Painting fhews all the minute and various concurrent Circumftances of the Event in the fame individual Point of Time, as they appear in Nature ; while Poetry is forced to want this Circumftance of Intelligibility, by being ever obliged to enter into fome degree of Detail---in as much as this Detail creates often the Dilemma of either becoming tedious, to be clear; or if not redious, then obfcure -- laftly, in as much 2s all Imitations more finilar, more imme= diate, twe have an Image not of that Eve, which Milton conceived, but of fuch an Eve only, as every one, by bis own proper Genius, is able to reprefent, from teflecting on thofe Ideas, which he has annexed to thefe feveral Sounds. The greater Part, in the meant time, have never perhaps beftowed one accurate Thought upon what Grace, Heaven, Love, and Dignity mean; or ever enriched the Mind with Ideas of Beauty, or afked whence they are to be acquired; and by what Proportions they are confituted. On the contrary, when we view Eve as painted by an able Painter, we labour under no fuch Difficulty; becaufe we have exhibited before us the better Coinceptions of an Artist, the genuine Ideas of perhaps a Titian or a Raphael.
diate, and more intelligible, are preferable Ch.IV. to thofe which are lefs fo; and for the Reafons above, the Imitations of Poetry are lefs fimilar, lefs immediate, and lefs intelligible than thofe of Painting ----From All this it will follow, that --- in all Subjects, where Painting can fully exert itself, the Imitations of Painting are superior to those of Poetry, and conseQuently in all such Sụbects that Painting has the Preference.
§. 3. And now to compare Poetry with Music, allowing to Mu/ic the fame Advantage of a veell-adapted Subject, which has already been allowed to Painting in the Comparifon juft preceding.

What fuch a Subject is, has already been * defcribed. And as to Preference, it muft
${ }^{*}$ See Chap. II. §. 2 。 Musical Imitations, tho' Natural, afpire not to raife the fame Ideas, but only Ideas $|\mid$ fimilar and analogous; while Poetic Imitation, tho' Artificial, raifes Ideas the very fame---in as much as the Definite and Certain is ever preferable to the Indefinite and Uncertain; and that more efpecially in Imitations, where the principal (b) Delight is in recognizing the Thing imitated

> || P. 68, 69.
(b) That there is an eminent Delight in this very Recognition itfelf, abftract from any thing pleafing in the Subject recognized, is evident from hence------that, in all the Mimetic Arts, we can be bighly charmed with Imitations, at whofe Originals in Nature we are bocked and terrified. Such, for inftance, as Dead Bodies, Wild Beafts, and the like.

The Caufe, affigned for this, feems to be of the following kind. We have a Joy, not only in the Sanity and Perfection, but alfo in the juft and natural Energies of our feveral Limbs and Faculties. And hence, among others, the foy in Reasoning; as being the Energy of that principal Faculty, our $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{N}}$ tellect or Understanding. This Joy extetids, not only to the Wife, but to the Multitude. For all Men have an Averfion to Ignorance and Error; imitated---it will follow from bence that---Ch. IV even in Subjects the best adapted to Musical Imitation, the Imitation of Poetry will be still more EXCELLENT。 and in fome degree; however moderate, are glad to learn and to inform themfelves.

Hence therefore the Delight, arifing from thefe Imitations; as we are enabled, in each of them, to exercife the Reasoning Facuilty; and, by comparing the Copy with the Architype in our Minds, to infer that this is such a thing; and that, Another; a Fact remarkablè among Children; even in their firft and earlieft Days.
 $\pi \alpha i \delta \omega \nu$ है丂

C H A P. V.

On the Subjects wobich Poetry imitates by Words jignificant, being at the fame time Subjects not adapted to the Genius of eitber of the other Arts----- The Nature of thoofe Subjects ---- The Abilities of Poetry to imitate them------ Comparifon of Poetry in there Subjects, firft with Painting, then with Mufic.
$\underbrace{\text { Ch.V. }}$ HE Mimetic Art of Poetry Views---Firft, as imitating by mere natural Media; and in this it has been placed on a level with Music, but much inferior to Painting ------ It has been fince confidered as imitating thro' Sounds fignificant by Compact, and that in fuch Subjects refpectively, where Painting and Music have the fulleft Power to exert themfelves.

Here to Painting it has been held inferior, Ch. V but to Mufic it has been preferred.

IT remains to be confidered --- what other Subjects Poetry has left, to which the Genius of the other two Arts is not $\int 0$ perfectly adapted---How far Poetry is able to imitate them ---- and whether from the Perfection of its Imitation, and the Nature of the Subjects themfelves, it ought to be called no more than equal to its Sifter Arts; or whether, on the whole, it fhould not rather be called fuperior.
§. 2. To begin, in the firft place, by comparing it with Painting.

The Subjects of Poetry, to which the Genius of Painting is not adapted, are --all Actions, whofe (a) Whole is of fo G 2 lengthened
(a) For a juft and accurate Defcription of Wholenefs and Unity, fee Arift. Poet. Ch. 7 & 8. and Boffu, his beft Interpreter, in his Treatife on the Epic Poems. B. II. ch. 9,$10 ; 1$ II. Time, in any part of that Whole, can be given fit for Painting; neither in its Beginning, which will teach what is Subjequent; nor in its End, which will teach what is Previous; nor in its Middle, which will declare both the Previous and the SubSequent. .- Alfo all Subjects fo framed, as to lay open the internal Confitution of Man, and give us an Infight into (b) Cbaracters, Manners, Pafions, and Sentiments.

The

(b) For a Defcription of Character, fee below, Note (c) of this Chapter.

As for Manners, it may be faid in general, that a certain Syfem of them makes a Character; and that as thefe Syftems, by being differently compounded, make each a different Character, fo is it that one Man truly differs from another.

Passions are obvious; Pity, Fear, Anger, &c.
Sentiments are difcoverable in all thofe Things, which are the proper Bufiness and End of Speech or Discourse. The chief Branches of this End are to ADert and Prove; to Solve and Refute; to exprefs or excite Pafions; to amplify Incidents?

The Merit of thefe Subjects is obvious. Ch. V. They muft neceffarily of all be the moft affecting; the moft improving; and fuch of which the Mind has the frongeft Comprebenfion.

For as to the affecting Part---if it be true, that all Events more or lefs affect us, as the Subjects, which they refpect, are more or lefs nearly related to us; then furely thofe Events muft needs be moft affecting, to whofe Subjects we are of all the mof intimately related. Now fuch is the Relation, which we bear to Mankind; and Men and Human Actions are the Subjects, here propofed for Imitation, cidents, and to dimini $/ \mathrm{b}$ them. 'Tis in thefe things therefore, that we muft look for Sentiment.

$$
\mathrm{G}_{3} \quad \mathrm{As}
$$

 ภ!

h. V. As to Improvement----there can be none furely (to Man at leaft) fo great, as that which is derived from a juft and decent Reprefentation of Human Manners, and Sentiments. For what can more contribute to give us that Mafter-Knowoledge (c), with## out

(c) $\Gamma \mathrm{N} \Omega \Theta \mathrm{I} \Sigma \mathrm{A} \Upsilon \mathrm{TON}$. But farther, befides obtaining this moral Science from the Contemplation of Human Life; an End common both to Epic, Tragic, and Comic Poetry; there is a peculiar End to Tragedy, that of eradicating the Paffions

 Tragedy is the Imitation of an Aetion important and perfect, tbro' Pity and Fear working the Purgation of such-like Passions.

- There are none, 'tis evident, fo devoid of thefe two Paffions, as thofe perpetually converfant, where the Occafions of them are moft frequent; fuch, for inftance, as the Military Men, the Profeffors of Medicine, Chirurgery, and the like. Their Minds, by this Intercourfe, become as it were callous; gaining an Apathy by Experience, which no Thsory can ever teach them.

Now of little or no Utility?

Now that, which is wrought in thefe Men by the real Difafters of Life, may be fuppofed wrought in others by the Fictions of Tragedy; yet with this happy Circumftance in favour of Tragedy, that, without the Difafters being real, it can obtain the fame End.

It muft however, for all this, be confeffed, that an Effect of this kind cannot reafonably be expected, except among Nations, like the Athenians of old, who lived in a perpetual Attendance upon thefe Theatrical Reprefentations. For 'tis not a fingle or occafional Application to thefe Paffions, but a confant and uninterrupted, which alone can leffen or remove them.

It would be improper to conclude this Note, without obferving, that the Philofopher in this place by Pity means not Philanthropy, Natural Affection, a Readiness to relieve others in their Calamities and Diftrefs; but, by Pity, he means that Senseless, Effeminate Consternation, which feizes weak Minds, on the fudden Profpect of any thing difaftrous; which, in its more violent Effects, is feen in Sbriekings, Swoonings, Sxc. a Paffion, fo far from laudable, or from operating to the Good of others, that it is certain to deprive the Party, who labours under its Influence, of all Capacity to do the leaft good Office.
h. V. As to our Comprebenfion=---- there is nothing certainly, of which we have fo frong Ideas, as of that which happens in the - Moral, or Human World. For as to the Internal Part, or Astive Principle of the Vegetable, we know it but obfcurely; becaufe there we can difcover neither Pafion, nor Senfation. In the Animal World indeed this Principle is more feen, from the Paffions and Senfations which there declare themfelves. Yet all fill refts upon the mere Evidence of Senfe; upon the Force only of external and unaffijed Experience. But in the Moral or Human World, as we have a Medium of Knorveledge far more accurate than this; fo from hence it is, that we can comprehend accordingly.

With regard therefore to the various Events, which happen bere, and the various Caufes, by which they are produced---in other Words, of all Characters, Manners, Human Parfions, and Sentiments; befides the Evidence of Senfe, we have the bigbeft

Evidence additional, in having an exprefs $\mathrm{Ch} . \mathrm{V}$. Confcioufnefs of fomething fimilar within; of fomething bomogeneous in the Receffes of our own Minds; in that, which conftitutes to each of us bis true and real Self,

These therefore being the Subjects, not adapted to the Genius of Painting, it comes next to be confidered, bow far Poetry can imitate them.

And here, that it has Abilities clearly equal, cannot be doubted; as it has that for the Medium of its Imitation, through which Nature declares herfelf in the fame Subjects. For the Sentiments in real Life are only known by Men's * Difcourfe. And the Cbaracters, Manners, and Pafions of Men being the Prompters to what they fay; it muft needs follow, that their Difcourfe will be a conftant Specimen of thofe Charaiters, Manners and Pafions.

Format
跑 P. 84, Note (b).

Ch. V.* Format enim Natura prius nos intis ad omnem Fortunarum babitum; juvat, aut impellit ad iran:
Pol effort Animi Motes, Interpreted Lingua.

Not only therefore Language is an addquate Medium of Imitation, but in Sentiments it is the only Medium; and in Mangers and Pafions there is no other, which can exhibit them to us after that clear, precife and definite Way, as they in Nature stand alotted to the various forts of Men, and are found to constitute the Several Cba racters of each (d).

$$
\text { §. } 3 .
$$

* Hor. de Arts Poet. v. Io.
(d) IT is true indeed that (betides what is done by Poetry) there is rome Idea of Character, which even Painting can communicate. Thus there is no doubt, but that fuch a Countenance may be found by Painters for 压neas, as would convey upon view a mild,

PAINTING and POETRY.

§. 3. To compare therefore Poetry, in efe Subjects, with Painting---In as much as no Subjects of Painting are * rebolly fuperior

$$
\text { * P. } 57,58.75,76 .
$$

mild, bumane, and yet a brave Difpofition. But then this Idea would be vague and general. It would be concluded, only in the grofs, that the Hero was Good. As to that Syftem of Qualities peculiar to Eneas only, and which alone properly confitutes bis true and real Cbaracter, this would ftill remain a Secret, and be no way difcoverable. For how deduce it from the mere Lineaments of a Countenance? Or, if it were deducible, how few Spectators would there be found fo fagacious ? 'Tis here therefore, that Recourfe muft be had, not to Painting, but to Poetry. So accurate a Conception of Character can be gathered only from a Succefion of various, and yet confifent Actions; a Succeffion, enabling us to conjecture, what the Perfon of the Drama will do in the future, from what already he has done in the paft. Now to fuch an Imitation, Poetry only is equal; becaufe it is not bounded, like Painting, to /hort, and, as it were, inftant Events, but may imitate Subjects of any Duration whatever. See Arif. Poet. cap. 6.

 Bo.fu, Book 4. ch. 4.
h. V. perior to Poetry; while the Subjects, here defcribed, far exceed the Power of Paint-ing-----in as much as they are of all Subjects the moft + affecting, and improving, and fuch of which we have the ftrongeft Comprebenfion-----further, in as much as Poetry can moft $\ddagger$ accurately imitate them--in as much as, befides all Imitation, there is a Cbarm in Poetry, arifing from its very Numbers (e); whereas Painting has Pretence

$$
\begin{aligned}
& + \text { P. } 85, \text { छ\%. } \\
& \ddagger \text { P. } 89, \text { छ\%. }
\end{aligned}
$$

(e) That there is a Charm in Poetry, arifing from its Numbers only, may be made evident from the five or fix firft Lines of the Paradife Loft; where, without any Pomp of Phrafe, Sublimity of Sentiment, or the leaft Degree of Imitation, every Reader muft find himfelf to be fenfibly delighted ; and that, only from the graceful and fimple Cadence of the Numbers, and that artful Variation of the Cafura or Paufe, fo effential to the Harmony of every good Poem.

[^3]tence to no Charm, except that of Imita-Ch. V. tion only ------ laftly, (which will foon be * (hewn) in as much as Poetry is able to affociate Mufic, as a moft powerful Ally; of which Affiftance, Painting is utterly incapable ---- From all this it may be fairly concluded, that-----Poetry is not only Equal, but that it is in fact far Superior to its Sister Art of PaintING.
§. 4. Bu t if it exceed Painting in Subjects, to which Painting is not adapted; no doubt woill it exceed Music in Subjects to Mufic

> * Chap. VI.
the Paules are varied upon different Semipeds in the Order, which follows; as may be feen by any, who. will be at the Pains to examine Paradise Lost, B. I.

Ch. V. Mufic not adapted. For bere it has been * preferred, even in thofe Subjects, which have been held adapted the beft of all.
§. 5. Poetry is therefore, on the whole, much superior to either of the other Mimetic Arts; it baving been Jbewn to be equally excellent in the $\uparrow$ Accuracy of its Imitation; and to imitate Subjects, which far surpass, As well in $\ddagger$ Utility, As in $\|$ DignITY.

> * Ch. IV. §. 3. + P. $89 . \quad \ddagger$ P. 86.
> II See p. $83,84$. and p. 64 , Note (g). See alfo p. 59.

CHAP.

C H A P. VI.

On Mufic confidered not as an Imitation, but as deriving its Efficacy from another Source.--On its joint Operation, by this means, weith Poetry. ---- An Objection to Mufic folved.----The Advantage arijing to it, as well as to Poetry, from their being united.---- Conchufion.

N the above Difcourfe, Music has Ch.VI. been mentioned as an * Ally to Poetry. It has alfo been faid to derive its + Efficacy from another Source, than Imitation. It remains therefore, that thefe things be explained.

Now, in order to this, it is firf to be obferved, that there are various Affections, which may be raifed by the Power of Mufic.

$$
\text { * P. 93. } \quad+\text { P. } 69 .
$$

Ch.VI. Mufic. There are Sounds to make us chearful, or fad; martial, or tender; and fo of almoft every other Affection, which we feel.

It is alfo further obfervable, that there is a reciprocal Operation between our Affections, and our Ideas; fo that, by a fort of natural Sympatby, certain Ideas neceffarily tend to raife in us certain Affections; and thofe Affections, by a fort of CounterOperation, to raife the fame Ideas: Thus Ideas derived from Funerals, Tortures; Murders, and the like, naturally generate the Affection of Melancholy. And when, by any Phyjical Caufes, that Affection happens to prevail, it as naturally generates the fame doleful Ideas.

And hence it is that Ideas, derived from external Caufés, have at different times, upon the fame Perfon, fo different an Effect. If they happen to fuit the Affections, which prevail within, then is their Imprefion moot fenfible, and their Effect moft laffing. If the contrary be true, then $\mathrm{Ch} . \mathrm{VI}$ is the Effect contrary. Thus, for inftance, a Funeral will much more affect the fame Man, if he fee it when melancholy, than if he fee it when chearful.

Now this being premifed, it will follow, that whatever happens to be the Affection or Difpofition of Mind, which ought naturally to refult from the Genius of any Poem, the fame probably it will be in the Power of fome Species of Mufic to excite. But whenever the proper Affection prevails, it has been allowed that then all kindred Ideas, derived from external Caufes, make the mof fenfible Impreffion. The Ideas therefore of Poetry muft needs make the moft fenfible Impreffion, when the (a) Affections, peculiar to them, are already
(a) Quintilian elegantly, and exactly appofite to this Reafoning, fays of $M u f i c-------$ Namque $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$ voce $\mathfrak{E}$ modulatione grandia elatè, jucunda dulciter, moderata

98 A Discourse on MUSIC,

Ch. VI. ready excited by the Mufic. For here a double Force is made co-operate to one End. A Poet, thus aljzted, finds not an Audience in a Temper, averfe to the Genius of his Poem, or perhaps at beft under a cool $\mathrm{In}^{\prime}$ difference; but by the Preludes, the Symphonies, and concurrent Operation of the Mufic in all its Parts, rouzed into thofe very Affections, which he would moft defire.

An Audience, fo difpofed, not only embrace with Pleafure the Ideas of the.Poet, when exhibited; but, in a manner, even anticipate them in their feveral Imaginations. The Superfitious have not a more previous Tendency to be frightned at the fight of Spectres, or a Lover to fall into Raptures at the fight of his Miftrefs; than a Mind, thus tempered by the Power of Mufic, moderata leniter canit, totâq; arte confentit cum eorum, quæ dicuntur, Affectibus. Inf. Orator. 1. I. cap. Io.

Mufic, to enjoy all Ideas, which are fuitable Ch. VI. to that Temper.

And hence the genuine Charm of Mufic, and the Wonders, which it works, thro' its great Profeffors (b). A Power, which confifts not in Imitations, and the raifing Ideas; but in the raifing Affections, to which Ideas may correfpond. There are few to be found fo infenfible, I may even fay fo inhumane, as when GOOD Poetry is justly set to Music, not in fome degree to feel the Force of fo amiable an Union. But to the Mufes Friends it is a Force irrefjfible ${ }_{2}$ and pene$\mathrm{H}_{2}$ trates
(b) Such, above all, is George Frederick Handel; whofe Genius, having been cultivated by continued Exercife, and being itfelf far the fublimeft and moft univerfal now known, has juftly placed him with out an Equal, or a Second. This tranfient Teftimony could not be denied fo excellent an Artift, from whom this Treatife has borrowed fuch eminent Examples, to juftify its Affertions in what it has offer'd concerning Mufic. Soul.
----------- * Pectus inaniter angit, Irritat, mulcet, falfis terroribus implet.
§. 2. Now this is that Source, from whence Mufic was + faid formerly to derive its greateft Efficacy. And here indeed, not in (c) Imitation, ought it to be chiefly cultivated. On this account alfo it has been called a $\ddagger$ porwerful Ally to Poetry. And farther, 'tis by the help of this Reafoning, that the Objection is folved, which is raifed againft the Singing of Poetry (as in Opera's, Oratorio's, Ěc.) from the want

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { * Horat. Epif. 1. 1. 2. v. } 21 \mathrm{Ir} \\ & \begin{array}{l}
\text { + P. 6g. } \\
\ddagger \text { P. } 93 .
\end{array} \end{aligned}
$$

(c) For the narrow Extent and little Efficacy of Music, confidered as a Mimetic or Imitative Art, fee Ch. II. §.3.
of Probability and Refemblance to Nature. Ch.VI
To one indeed, who has no mufical Ear, this Objection may have Weight. It may even perplex a Lover of Mufic, if it happen to furprize him in his Hours of $I^{n}$ difference. But when he is feeling the Charm of Poetry fo accompanied, let him be angry (if he can) with that, which ferves only to intereft him more feelingly in the Subject, and fupport him in a ftronger and more carneft Attention; which enforces, by its Aid, the feveral Ideas of the Poom, and gives them to his Imagination with unufual Strength and Grandeur. He cannot furely but confefs, that he is a Gainer in the Exchange, when he barters the want of a fingle Probability, that of Pronunciation (a thing merely arbitrary and every where different) for a noble Heigbtening of Affections which are fuitable to the Occafion, and enable him to enter into the Subject with double Energy and Enjoyment.
h.VI. §. 3. From what has been faid it is evident, that there two Arts can never be fo powerful fingly, as when they are promperly united. For Poetry, when alone, muft be neceffarily forced to wafte many of its richert Ideas, in the mere raifing of Affections, when, to have been properly relifhed, it fhould have found thofe Affections in their higheft Energy. And Mufce, when alone, can only raife Affections, which foon languifs and decay, if not maintained and fed by the nutritive Images of Poetry. Yet muft it be remembered, in this Union, that Poetry ever have the Precedence; its * Utility, as well as Dignity, being by far the more confiderable, §. 4. And thus much, for the prefent, as to $\dagger$ Music, Painting, and Poetry; the

> * Ch. v, §. 2. p. 83. + P. 55.
the Circumftances, in which they agree, Ch.VI and in which they differ; and the Preference, due to one of them above the other two.

The E N D.
$\mathrm{H}_{4}$

TREATISE the Third:

CONCERNING
HAPPINESS,

A DIALOGUE.

CONCERNING

H A P P I N E S S,

A

D I A L O G U E.

PART the First,

J.H. to $F . S$.

- ATURE feems to treat Man, Part I as a Painter would his Difciple, $\sim$ to whom he commits the OutLines of a Figure lightly fketched, which the Scholar for himfelf is to colour and complete. Thus from Nature we derive Senfes, and Paffions, and an Inteilect, which each of us for bimjelf has to model into a Character. And hence (the reverfe alone are infinitely various; as various indeed, as there are Individuals to form them. Hence too, the great Diverfity of Syftems, and of Doctrines, refpecting the Laws, and Rules, and Conduct of Human Life.
${ }^{\prime} T$ is in the Hiftory of thefe, my Friend, you have fo fuccesffully employed yourfelf. You have been fudious to know, not fo much what Greeks, Romans, or Barbarians have done; as what they have reafoned, and If what they have taught. Not an Epicure has more Joy in the Memory of a delicious Banquet, than I feel in recollecting, what we have difcourfed on there Subjects.
$x$
And here you cannot forget (for we were both unanimous) the Contempt, in which we held thofe fuperficial Cenfurers, who profefs to refute, what they want even Capacities to comprehend. Upon the Faith of their own Boanting (could that be credited) credited) Sentiments are expofed, Opinions Part I, demolifhed, and the whole Wiidom of Antiquity lies vanquifhed at their Feet. Like Opera Heroes, upon their own Stage, they can with eafe difpatch a Lion, or difcomfit a whole Legion. But alafs! were they to encounter, not the Shadow, but the Subftance, what think you would be the Event then ?--Little better, I fear, than was the Fortune of poor Priam, when the feeble Old Man durft attack the Youthful Pyrrbus.
------ * Telum imbelle fone ietu
Conjecit: rauco quod protenus cre repulfum, Et fummo Clypei nequicquam umbone pependit.

Among the many long exploded and obfolete Syftems, there was one, you may remember, for which I profeffed a great Efteem. Not in the leaft degree convinced by all I had heard againft it, I durft was more plaufible; that grant but its Principles, and the reft followed of courfe; that none approached nearer to the Perfection of our oren Religion, as I could prove, were there occafion, by Autbority not to be controverted. As you, I knew, were the Favourer of an Hypothefis fomewhat + different; fo I attempted to fupport my own, by reciting you a certain Dialogue. Not fucceeding however fo happily in the Recollection, as I could wifh, I have fince endeavoured to tranfcribe, what at that time I would have rehearfed. The Refult of my Labour is the following Narrative, which I commit with Confidence to your Friendfhip and Candour.
What was? It? The time
$X$ §. 2. 'TwAs at a time, when a certain wo Friend, whom I highly value, was mytio.. Gueft. We had been fitting together, enter-$\dagger$ Viz: the Platonic. entertaining ourfelves with Shakefpear. Part I Among many of his Characters, we had looked into that of Woolfey. How foon, fays my Friend, does the Cardinal in Difgrace abjure that Happinefs, which he was lately fo fond of? Scarcely out of Office, but he begins to exclaim *Vain Pomp and Glory of the World! Ibate ye.
So true is it, that our Sentiments ever vary with the Seafon; and that in Adverfity we are of one Mind, in Profperity, of another. As for his mean Opinion, faid I, of Human Happinefs, 'tis a Truth, which fmall Reflection might have taught him long before. There feems little need of Diftrefs to inform us of this. I rather commend the feeming Wifdom of that Eaftern Monarch, who in the Affluence of Profperity, when he was proving every Pleafure, was yet fo fenfible of their Emptinefs, their Infufficiency to make him happy, that he fhould invent a new Delight. The Reward indeed was proclaimed, but the De light was not to be found. If by Delight, faid he, you mean fome Good; fomething conducive to real Happinefs; it might have been found perhaps, and yet not hit the Monarch's Fancy.
Is that, faid I, poffible? 'Tis poffible, replied he, tho' it had been the Sovereign $X$ Good itfelf-----And indeed what wonder? Is it probable that fuch a Mortal, as an Eaftern Monarch; fuch a pamper'd, flatter'd, idle Mortal ; fhould have Attention, or Capacity to a Subject fo delicate? A Subject, enough to exercife the Subtleft and moft Acute?

What then is it you efteem, faid I, the Sovereign Good to be? It fhould feem, by your Reprefentation, to be fomething very uncommon. Afk me not the Queftion, faid he, you know not where 'twill carry us. Its general Idea indeed is eafy and plain; but the Detail of Particulars is perplex'd perplex'd and long------Paffions, and Opi- Part I. nions for ever thwart us ------- a Paradox appears in almoft every Advance. Befides, did our Inquiries fucceed ever fo hiappily, the very Subject itfelf is always enough to give me Pain. That, replied I, feems a Paradox indeed. 'Tis not, faid he, from any Prejudice, which I have conceived againft it ; for to Man I efteem it the nobleft in the World. Nor is it for being a Subject, to which my Genius does not lead me; for no Subject at all times has more employ'd my Attention. But the Truth is, I can fcarce ever think on it, but an unlucky Story ftill occurs to my Mind. "A certain Star-gazer, with his "Telefcope, was once viewing the Moon; " and defrribing her Seas, her Mountains, " and her Territories. Says a Clown to " his Companion, Let bim Spy webat be "pleafes; wee are as near to the Moon, as "be and all bis Bretbren." So fares it alafs! with thefe, our moral Speculations, Practice too often creeps, where Theory can foar. The Pbilofopher proves as weeak, arhapo-cannot. - ) $\operatorname{cmp}_{14} p^{2}$. Concerning HAPPINESS,
Part I. as thofe, whom be moft contemns. A mortifying Thought to fuch as well attend it. Too mortifying, replied I, to be long dwelt on. Give us rather your general Idea of the Sovereign Good. This is eafy from your own Account, however intricate the Detail.

Thus then, faid he, fince you are fo urgent, 'tis thus that I conceive it. The Sovereign Good is that, the PosSESSION of Which renders us Happy, And how, faid I, do we poffers it ? Is it Senfual, or Intellectual? There you are entering, faird he, upon the Detail. This is beyond your Queftion. Not a fmall Advance, faid I, to indulge poor Curiofity? Trill your raife me a Thirft, and be fo cruel not to ally it? 'Tis not, replied he, of my raifing, but your own. Befides I am not certain, fhould I attempt to proceed, whether you will admit fuch Autborities, as 'tis poffible I may vouch.

That, faid I, muft be determined $\begin{array}{ll}\text { by their Weight, and Character. } & \begin{array}{l}\text { Sup- } \\ \text { pofe, }\end{array}\end{array}$ pore, faid he, it fhould be MANíind; Part I. the whole Human Race. Would you not think it fomething ftrange; to feek of thofe concerning Good, who purfue it a thoufand Ways, and many of them contradietory? I confefs, faid $I$, it feems fo. And yet, continued he; were there a Point, in which fuch Difentients ever agreed; this Agreement would be no mean Argument in favour of its Truth and Fuft$n e \int s$. But where, replied I , is this Agreement to be found ?
$\mathrm{H}_{\mathrm{E}}$ anfwered me by afking; What if it fhould appear; that there were certain Original Characteristics and Pré conceptions of Good; which were Nad tural, Uniform and Comigon to all Men; which all recognized in their various Purfuits; and that the Difference lay only in the applying them to Particulars? This requires, faid I , to be illuftrated: As if, continued he, a Company of Travellers; in fome wide Foreft, were all intending for one City,

$$
12
$$ The Roads indeed would be various, and many perhaps falfe; but all who travelled, would have one End in viero.' 'Tis evident, faid I, they would. So fares it then, added he, with Mankind in purfuit of Good. The Ways indeed are Many,《 but what they feek is One.

e Name indeed.!
For inftance ؛ Did you ever hear of any, who in purfuit of their Good, were for living the Life of a Bird, an Infect, or a Fifh? None. And why not? It would be inconfiftent, anfwered I, with their Nature. You fee then, faid he, they all agree in this----that what they purfue, ought to be confjfent, and agreeable to their proper Nature. So ought it, faid I, undoubtedly. If fo, continued he, one Pre-conception is difcovered, which is common to Good in gene-ral----It is, that all Good is fuppofed fomething agreeable to Nature. This indeed, replied I, feems to be agreed on all hands.

Bu T again, faid he, --- Is there a Man Part I. fcarcely to be found of a Temper fo truly mortified, as to acquiefce in the loweft, and Shorteft Neceffaries of Life? Who aims not, if he be able, at fomething farther, fomething better? I replied, Scarcely one.

Do not Multitudes purfue, fail he, infinite Objects of Defire, acknowledged, every one of them, to be in no refpect Neceffaries? ------ Exquifite Viands, delicious Wines, fplendid Apparel, curious Gardens; magnificent Apartments adorned with Pictures and Sculpture; Kufic and Poetry, and the whole Tribe of Elegant Arts?
'Ti evident, faid I. If it be, continued he, it fhould feem that they all confidered the Chief or Sovereign Good, not to be that, which conduces to bare Exiftence or mere Being; for to this the Neceffaries alone are adequate. I replied they were.

But if not this, it muff be fomewhat conducive to that, which is Superior to mere Being. It muff. And what, continued he, can this be, but Well-Being? oh

$$
I_{3} \text { Well-precic }
$$

118 Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part I, Well-Being, under the various Shapes, in which differing Opinions paint it? Or can you fuggeft any thing elfe? I replied, re.con I could not. Mark here, then, con= tinued he, another Pre-conception, in which they all agree ------ the Sovereign Good is, fomewhat conducive, not to mere Being, but to Well-Being: I replied, It had fo ape peared,

Again, continued he. What Labour, what Expence, to procure thofe Rarities, which our own poor Country is unable to afford us? How is the World ranfacked to its utmoft Verges, and Luxury and Arts imported from every Quarter? ------ Nay more ------ How do we baffle Nature herfelf; invert her Order ; feek the Vegetables of Spring in the Rigours of Winter, and Winter's Ice, during the Heats of Summer ? I replied, We did. And what Difappointment, what Remorfe, wher Endeavours fail? 'Tis true. If this then be evident, faị he, it fhould feem, that whatever we defire as our Cbief and Sovereign Good, is fomething wobich, as far Part I. as pofible, ree would accommodate to all Places and Times. I anfwered, So it appeared. See then, faid he, another of its Cba racterifics, another Pre-conception.

But farther fill----What Contefts for Wealth? What Scrambling for Property? What Perils in the Purfuit; what Sollicitude in the Maintenance ?--- And why all this? To what Purpofe, what End?----Or is not the Reafon plain? Is it not that Wealth may continually procure us, whatever we fancy Good; and make that perpetual, which would otherwife be tranfient ?
I replied, It feemed fo. Is it not farther defired, as fupplying us from ourfelves; when, without it, we muft be beholden to the Benevolence of others, and depend on their Caprice for all that we enjoy? 'Tis true, faid I, this feems a Reafon.

Again----Is not Power of every degree as much contefted for, as Wealth? Are not Magiftracies, Honours, Principalities, and

$$
I_{4} \quad \text { Empire, }
$$

Part I. Empire, the Subjects of Strife, and everlafting Contention? I replied, They were. And why, faid he, this? To obtain what End ? ------ Is it not to belp us, like Wealth, to the Poffefion of what we defire? Is it not farther to afcertain, to fecure our Enjoyments; that when others would deprive us, we may be frong enough to reffet them? I replied, It was.
$\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{R}}$ to invert the whole -----Why are there, who feek Receffes the moft diftant, and retired? fly Courts and Power, and fubmit to Parcimony and Obfcurity? Why all this, but from the fame Intention ? From an Opinion that fmall Poffeffions, ufed moderately, are permanent ------ that larger Poffeffions raife Envy, and are more frequently invaded ------ that the Safety of Power and Dignity is more precarious, than that of Retreat; and that therefore they have chofen, what is moft eligible upon the w:bole? It is not, faid I, improbable, that they act by fome fuch Motive

Do you not fee then, continued he, two Part I. or three more Pre-conceptions of the Sovereign Good, which are fought for by all, as Effential to constitute it? And what, raid $I$, are the le? That it fhould not be tranfient, nor derived from the Will of others, nor in their Power to take away; but be durable, felf-derived, and (if I may ufe the Expreffion) indeprivable. ill I confess, fail I, it appears fo. che But we have already found it to be con- imp n fidered, as fometbing agreeable to our Nature; yes conducive, not to mere Being, but to WellBeing; and what we aim to have accommodate to all Places and Times. We have,

There may be other Characteriftics, fair he, but there I think fufficient. See char then its Idea; behold it, as collected from: ing the Original, Natural, and Univerfal Pres- owlet conceptions of all Mankind. The Sove-ini-2 REIGN Good, they have taught us, ought to be fomething ---- Agreeable to our Nature; Conducive to Well-Being;
Gorse these two $3 y^{r}+2 b l e$ Ancon and coss used to the tame inbotarn fine appears jut.

Ir matters, continued he, little, how they er in the Application--if they covet that as agreeable to Nature, which is in itfelf molt Contrary --if they would have that as Durable, which is in itfelf mort Tranfient-_that as Independent, and their own, which is moot precarious and Servile. 'This enough for us, if we know their Aim- _-enough, if we can difoover, what 'is they propoie-the Means and Method may be absurd, as it happens. I anfwered, Their Aim was fufficient to prove what he had afferted.
'Tais true, replied he, 'tis abundantly fufficient. And yet perhaps, even tho' this were ever fo certain, it would not be altogether foreign, were we to examine, how they act; how they fucceed in appiling there Umiverfals to Particular Subjects.
jects. Should they be found juft in the Part I Application, we need look no farther The true Sovereign Good would of courfe be Plain and Obvious; and we fhould have no more to do, than to follow the beaten Road. 'Tis granted, replied I. But what if they err? Time enough for that, faid he, when we are fatisfied that they do. We ought firt to inform ourfelves, whether they may not poffibly be in the Right. I fubmitted, and begged him to proceed his own Way, §. 3. Wile you then, faid he, in this Difquifition into Human Conduct, allow me this --- That fuch, as is the Species of Life, which every one cloofes; fuch is his Idea of Happinefs, fuch his Conception of the Sovereign Good? I feem, faid I, to comprehend You, but fhould be glad You would illuftrate. His Meaning, he anfwered, was no more than this If a Man prefer a Life of Induffry, 'tis tecaufe he has an Idea of Happinefs in Wealtb; if he prefers a Lifẹ of Gaiety, 'tis from a fame, we fay, holds true in every other Inftance. I told him, It muft certainly.

And can you recollect, faid he, any wank-Life, but what is a Life of Bufine $/ s_{s}$, or of Lion, Leifure? I anfwered, None. And is not the great End of Bufinefs either Power, or Wealth? It is. Muft not every Life therefore of Bufmefs, be either Political or Lucrative? It muft. Again----Are not Intellect and Senfe, the Soul's leading Powers? They are.

And in Leifure are we not ever feeking, to gratify one, or the other ? We are. Muft not every Life thereIt fore of Leifure be either Pleafurable, or $\therefore \propto$ Contemplative? If you confine Pleafure, faid I, to Senfe, I think it neceffarily muft. If it be not foconfined, faid he, we confound all Inquiry, Allow it,

Mark then, faid he, the two grand Genera, the Lives of Business and of Leisure Leisure -----mark alfo the fubordinate Part I. Species; the Political and Lucrative, the Contemplative and Pleasurable -----Can you think of any other, which thefe will not include?

I replied, I knew of none. 'Tis poffible indeed, faid he, that there may be other Lives framed, by the blending of thefe, two or more of them, together. But if we feparate with Accuracy, we fhall find that here they all terminate. I replied, fo it feemed probable.

If then, continued he, we would be exact in our Inquiry, we mult examine thefe four Lives, and mark their Confequences. 'Tis thus only we fhall learn, how far thofe, who embrace them, find that Good and Happinefs, which we know they all purfue. I made anfwer, It feemed neceffary, and I fhould willingly attend him.
§.4. To begin then, faid he, with the Political Life. Let us fee the Good, ufually

126 Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part I. ufually fought after here. To a private Man, it is the Favour of fome Prince, or Commonwealth; the Honours and Emo luments derived from this Favour ; the Court and Homage of Mankind; the Power of commanding others ------ To a Prince, it is the fame Things nearly, only greater in Degree; a larger Command; a ftricter and more fervile Homage; Glory; Conqueft, and extended Empire---Am I right in my Defcription? I replied, I thought he was. Whether then, faid he, all this deferve the Name of Good ot not, I do not ccatrovert. Be it one, or the other, it affects not our Inquiry. All that I would afk concerning it, is this----Do you not think it a Good (if it really be one) derived from Foreign and External Caufes? Undoubtedly, replied I. It cannot come then from ourfelves, or be felf-derived. It cannot. And what fhall we fay as to its Duration and Stability? Is it fo firm and lafing, that we cannot be deprived of it? I fhould imagine, faid I, quite otherwife. You infift not then, then, faid he, on my appealing to Hiftory. Part I, You acknowledge the Fate of Favourites, of Empires, and their Owners. I replied, I did.

If fo, faid he, it fhould feem that this Political Good, which they feek, correfponds not to the Pre-conceptions of being Durable, and Indeprivable. Far from it. But it appeared juft before, not to be felfderived. It did. You fee then, faid he, that in three of our Pre-conceptions it intirely fails. So indeed, faid I, it appears.

But farther, faid he---We are told of this Good, that in the Pofeffion it is attended with Anxiety; and that when loft, it is ufually lof with Ignominy and Difgrace; nay, often with Profecutions and the bittereft Refentments; with Mulcts, with Exile, and Death itfelf. 'Tis frequently, faid I, the Cafe. How then, faid he, can it anfwer that other Pre-conception, of contributing to our Well-Being? Can that contribute art I. contribute to Well-Being, whofe Confequences lead to Calamity, and whofe Prefence implies Anxiety? This, it muft be confeffed, faid I, appears not probable.

But once more, faid he -......- There are certain Habits or Difpofitions of Mind, called Sincerity, Generofity, Candour, Plain-dealing, Juftice, Honour, Honefty, and the like. There are. And it has been generally believed, that there are agreeable to Nature. Affuredly. But it has been as generally believed, that the Political Good, we fpeak of, is often not to be acquired but by Habits, contrary to thefe; and which, if thefe are Natural, muft of neceffity be unnatural. What Habits, faid I, do you mean? Flattery, anfwered he, Diffimulation, Intrigue: upon occafion, perhaps Iniquity, Falhood, and Fraud. 'Tis poffible indeed, faid I, that there may fometimes be thought neceffary. How then, faid he, can that Good be agreeable to Nature, which cannot be acquired, but by Habits contrary to Nature?

Nature? Your Argument, faid I, Part I. feems juft.

If then, faid he, we have reafoned rightly, and our Conclufions may be depended on; it fhould feem that the supposed Good, which the Political Life purfues, correfponds not, in any Infance, to our Pre-conceptions of the Sovereign Good. I anfwered, So it appeared.
§. 5. Let us quit then, faid he, the Polis tical Life, and pafs to the Lucrative. The Object of this is Weaith. Admit it. And is it not too often, faid he, the Cafe, that to acquire this, we are tempted. to employ fome of thofe Habits, which we have juft condemned as Unnatural? Such, I mean, as Fraud, Falhood, Injuftice, and the like? It muft be owned, faid $I_{\text {, }}$ too often.

Besides, continued he----What thall we fay to the Effeem, the Friend/bip, and Love of Mankind? Are they worth having?
${ }^{3} 30$ Concerning HAPPINESS,
Part I. Is it agreeable, think you, to Nature, to endeavour to deferve them? Agreeable, faid I, to Nature, beyond difpute. If fo, then to merit Hatred and Contempt, faid he, muft needs be contrary to Nature. Undoubtedly. And is there any thing which fo certainly merits Hatred and Contempt, as a mere Lucrative Life, fpent in the uniform Purfuit of Wealth?
I replied, I believed there was nothing. If fo, faid he, then as to correfponding with our Pre-conceptions, the Lucrative Good, in this refpect, fares no better than the Political. It appears not.

And what fhall we fay as to Anxiety? Is not both the Pofeffion and Purfuit of Wealth, to thofe who really love it, ever anxious? It feems fo. And why anxious, but from a Certainty of its Infability; from an Experience, how obrioxious it is to every crofs Event; how eafy to be loft and transfer'd to others, by the fame Fraud and Rapine, which acquired it to ourfelves? -.-- This is indeed the triteft of all Topics. The Poets and Orators have Part long ago exhaufted it. 'Tis true, faid I, they have. May we not venture then, faid he, upon the whole, to pafs the fame Sentence on the Lucrative Life; as we have already on the Political-----that it propofes not A Good, correfpondent to thofe Pre-conceptions, by wobich we would all be governed in THE GOOD, which we are all feeking? I anfwered, We might juftly.
§. 6. If then neither the Lucrative Life, nor the Political, faid he, procure that Good which ve defire : fhall we feek it from the Pleasurable? Shall we make Pleasure our Goddefs?

$$
---- \text { Pleafure }_{5}
$$

Whom Lave attends; and Joft Defire; and Words
Alluring, apt the feadieft Heart to bend.
So fays the Poet, and plaufible his Docrine. Plaufible, faid I , indeed.

$$
\mathrm{K}_{2} \quad \mathrm{~L}_{5} \mathrm{I}_{1}
$$

art I. Let it then, continued he, be a pleacurable World; a Race of harmless, loving Animals; an Elysian Temperature of Sunthine and Shade. Let the Earth, in every Quarter, refemble our own dear Country; where never was a Froft, never a Fog, never a Day, but was delicious and ferene. I was a little embarraffed at this unexpected Flight, 'till recollecting myself, I told him, (but fill with forme Surprize) that, in no degree to difparage either my Country or my Countrymen, I had never found Either fo exquifite, as he now fuppofed them. There are then it rems, fail he, in the Natural World, and even in our own beloved Country, fuch things as Storms, and Tempers; as pinching Colds, and fcorching Heats. I replied, There were. And confequent to the e, Difeafe, and Famine, and infinite Calamities. There are.
And in the Civil or Human World, we have Dijcord and Contention; or (as the Cruel Revenge, and rancorous Defpite, Difloyal Treafon, and beart-burning Hate.

We have. Alafs! then, poor Pleafure! Where is that Good, accommodate to every Time; fuited to every Place; felf-derived, not dependent on Foreign External Caufes? Can it be Pleasure, on fuch a cbangeable, fuch a turbulent Spot, as this? I replied, I thought not.

AND what indeed, were the World, faid he, modelled to a Temperature the moft exact? Were the Rigours of the Seafors never more to be known; nor Wars, Devaftations, Famines or Difeafes? Admitting all this, (which we know to be impofible) can we find Atill in Pleafure that lengtbened Duration, which we confider as an Effential, to conftitute the Sovereign food ? --- Afk the Glutton, the Drinker,

$$
\mathrm{K}_{3}
$$

the

Spencer's Fairy 2ueen, B. 2. Cant. 7. Stanz. 22,
art I. the Man of Gaiety and Intrigue, whether they know any Enjoyment, not to be cancelled by Satiety? Which does not haftily pafs away into the tedious Intervals of $I n$ difference? ---- Or yielding all this too, (which we know cannot be yielded) where are we to find our Good, how poffers it in Age? In that Eve of Life, declining Age, when the Power of Senfe, on wobich all depends, like the fetting Sun, is gradually forfaking us?

I should imagine, faid I , that Pleafure was no mean Adverfary, fince you employ, in attacking her, fo much of your Rhetoric. Without heeding what I faid, he purfued his Subject ---- Befide, if this be our Good, our Happinefs, and our End to what purpofe Porvers, which bear n Relation to it? ----- Why Memory? Wh Reafon? Mere Senfation might have bee as exquijite, had we been Flies or Eart, worms----Or can it be proved otherwifi I replied, I could not fay. No $A_{2}$ 2zatl; continued he, poffefes its Faculties vain. And fhall Man derive no Good Part from his beft, his moft eminent? From That, which of all is peculiar to himfelf? For as to Growth and Nutrition, they are not wanting to the meaneft Vegetable; and for Senfes, there are Animals, which perhaps exceed us in them all.
§. 7. This feems, faid I, no mean Argument in favour of Contemplation. 'The Contemplative Life gives Reafon all the Scope, which it can defire. And of all Lives, anfwered he, would it furely be the beft, did we dwell, like Milton's Uriel, in the Sun's bright Circle. Then might we plan indeed the moft Romantic Kind of Happinefs. Stretch'd at Eafe, without Trouble or Moleftation, we might pafs our Days, contemplating the Univerfe ; tracing its Beauty; loft in Wonder; ravifhed with Ecftacy, and. I know not what -----But here alafs! on this fublunary, this turbulent Spot, (as we called it not long fince) how little is this, or any thing like it, practicable? -----Fogs arife, which art I. dim our Profpects--the Cares of Life perpetually moleft us---Is Contemplation fuited to a Place, like this? It muft be owned, faid I , not extremely. How then is it the Sovereign Good, which fhould be Accommodate to every Place? I replied, It feemed not probable.

But farther, faid he---Can we enjoy the Sovereign Good, and be at the fame time vexed, and agitated by Paffion? Does not this feem a Paradox? I anfwered, It did. Suppofe then an Event were to happen---not an Inundation, or Maffacre--but an Acquaintance only drop a difrefpectful Word; a Servant chance to break a favourite Piece of Furniture--What would inftruct us to endure this? --- Contemplation, Theory, Abftractions? Why not, faid I ? No, replied he with Warmth, (quoting the Poet) not
------ *Tho' all the Stars
Thou knero't by Name; and all the Etherial Powers.

Fo

$$
\text { * Par. Loft, B. 12. v. } 576 .
$$

For does not Experience teach us, abun- Part] dantly teach us, that our deepeft Philofophers, as to Temper and Bebaviour, are as very Cbildren for the moft part, as the meaneft and moft illiterate? A little more Arrogance perhaps, from Prefumption of what they know, but not a grain more of Magnanimity, of Candour and calm Indurance.

You are fomewhat too fevere, faid I, in cenfuring of all. There are better and worfe among Them, as among Others. The Difference is no way proportioned, faid he, to the 2uantity of their Knoreledge; fo that, whatever be its Caufe, it can't be imputed to their Speculations.-Befides, can you really imagine, we came here only to Think? Is AEting a Circumftance, which is foreign to Our Cbaracter? -----Why then fo many Social Affections, which all of us feel, even in fpite of ourfelves? Are we to fupprefs them All, as ufelefs and unnatural? The Attempt, replied I, muft needs be found impracticable.
?art I. cable. Were they once fuppreffed, faid he, the Confequences would be fomewhat ftrange. We fhould hear no more of Fa ther, Brother, Hufband, Son, Citizen, Magiftrate, and Society itfelf. And were this ever the Cafe, ill (I fear) would it fare with even Contemplation itfelf. It would certainly be but bad Speculating, among. lawlefs Barbarians --.-Unaffociated Ani-mals-----where Strengtb alone of Body was to conftitute Dominion, and the Conteft came to be (as * Horace defcrịbes it)
----- glandem atque cubilia propter,

Bad enough, replied I, of all confcience.

It fhould feem then, faid he, that not even the best Contemplative Life, however noble its Object, was agreeable to our present Nature, or confglent with seith our prefent Situation. I confefs, Part I, (aid I, you appear to have proved fo. But if this be allowed true of the Beft, the moft Excellent; what Chall we fay to the Mockery of Monkery; the Farce of Friars; the ridiculous Mummery of being fequeftred in a Cloyfer? This furely is too low a Thing, even to merit an Examination. I have no Scruples here, faid I, you need not wafte your Time.

* Sat. 3. 1. I. v. 99:
§. 8. If that, faid he, be your Opinion, let us look a little backward. For our Memory's fake it may be proper to recapitulate. I replied, 'Twould be highly acceptable. Thus then, faid he We have examined the four grand Lives, which we find the Generality of Men embrace; the Lucrative, and the Political; the Pleafurable, and the Contemplative. And we have aimed at proving that ---. to fuch a Being as MAN, with fuch a Body, fuch Affections, fucb Senfes, and fuch an In-tellect-----placed in fuch a World, jubject to fuch Incidents----not one of thefe Lives is pro- Pre-conceptions; and which thro' one or other of the efe Lives they all of them purfue.
§. 9. You have jufty, faid I, collected the Sum of your Inquiries. And happy, faid he, fhould I think it, were they to terminate here. I afked him, Why? Becaufe, replied he, to infinuate firf, that all Mankind are in the wrong; and then to attempt afterwards, to Thew one's felf only to be right; is a Degree of Arrogance, which I would not willingly be guilty of. I ventured here to fay, That I thought he need not be fo diffident ------ that a Subject, where one's own Intereft appeared concerned fo nearly, would well juftify every Scruple, and even the fevereft Inquiry. There, faid he, you fay fomething ---- there you encourage me indeed. For what? - Are we not cautioned againft Counterfeits, even in Matters of meaneft Value ? If a Piece of Metal be tender'd us, which feems doubtful, do we not hefitate? Do we not try it by the Part I. Teft, before we take it for Current? ---And is not this deem'd Prudence? Are we not cenfured, if we act otherwife? --- How much more then does it behove us not to be impofed on bere? To be diffident and fcrupuloufly exact, where Impofture, if once admitted, may tempt us to a far worfe Bargain, than ever Glaucus made with Diomed? What Bargain, faid I, do you mean? The Exchange, replied he, not of Gold for Brafs, but of Good for Evil, and of Happinefs for Mifery ---. But enough of this, fince you have encouraged me to proceed--We are feeking that Good, which we think otbers have not found. Permit me thus to purfue my Subject.
§. 10. Every Being on this our Tere reftrial Dwelling, exifts encompafjed with infinite Objects; exifts among Animals tame, and Animals wild; among Plants and Vegetables of a thoufand different Qualities; among Heats and Colds, Tempefts and Calms, the Friendhips and Difcords of

142 Concerning HAPPINESS;
Part I. beterogeneous Elements .-.. What fay you? Are all thefe Things exactly the fame to it; or do they differ, think you, in their $E f$ fects and Confequences? They differ ${ }_{\text {; }}$ faid I, widely. Some perhaps then; faid he, are Apt, Congruous, and Agreeable to its Natural State. I replied, They were. Others are In-apt, Incongruous, and Difagreeable. They are. And others again are Indifferent. They are.

İt fhould feem then, faid he, if this be allowed, that to every individual Being, without the leaft Exception, the wobole Ma/s of Things External, from the greateft to the meaneft, flood in the Relations of eitber Agreeable, Difagreeable, or Indifferent. I replied, So it appeared.

But tho' this, continued he, be true in the general, 'tis yet as certain when we defcend to Particulars, that what is Agreeable to one Species is Difagreeable to another; and not only fo, but perhaps Indifferent to a third. Inftances of this kind, he faid, Part I. were too obvious to be mentioned.

I replied, 'Twas evident. Whence then, faid he, this Diverfity? - It cannot arife from the Externals - for Water is equally Water, whether to a Man, or to a FiJh; whether, operating on the one, it fuffocate, or on the other, it give Life and Vigour. I replied, It was. So is >> Fire, faid he, the fame. Fire, however various in its Confequences; whether it barden or Soften, give Pleafure or Pain. I replied, It was. But if this $\mathrm{Di}_{i}$ verfity, continued he, be not derived from the Externals, whence can it be elfe? Or can it poffibly be derived otherwife than from the peculiar Confitution, from the Natural State of every Species itfelf? I replied, It appeared probable.

Thus then, faid he, is it that Every particular Species is, itfelf to itfelf, the Meafure of all Things in the Univer $\int$ e-that as Things vary in their Relations to it, they

144 Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part I. vary too in their Value --- and that if their Value be ever doubtful, it can no way be adjufted, but by recurring with Accuracy to the Natural State of the Species, and to thofe feveral Relations, wobich fuch a State of courfe creates. I anfwered, He argued juftly.
§. in. To proceed then, faid he---Tho' it be true, that every Species has a Natural State, as we have afferted; it is not true, that every Species has a Senfe or Feeling of it. This Feeling or Senfe is a Natural Eminence or Prerogative, denied the Vegetable and Inanimate, and imparted only to the Animal. I anfwered, It was.

And think you, continued he, that as many as have this Senfe or Feeling of a Natural State, are alienated from it, or indifferent to it? Or is it not more probable, that they are well-affected to it?
Experience, faid I, teaches us, how well they are all affected. You are right, replied he. For what would be more abfurd, abfurd, than to be indifferent to their own Part: Welfare; or to be alienated from it, as tho' 'twas Foreign and Unnatural? I replied, Nothing could be more. But, continued he, if they are well-affected to this their proper Natural State, it hould feem too they mult be well-affected to all thofe Externals, which appear apt, congruous, and agreeable to it. I anfwered, They muft. And if fo, then ill-affected or averfe to fuch, as appear the contrary. They muft. And to fuch as appear indifferent, indifferent. They muft.

But if this, faid he, be allowed, it will follow, that in confequence of thefe Appearances, they will think fome Externals worthy of Purfuit; fome worthy of Avoidance; and fome worthy of neither. 'Twas probable, faid I, they fhould.

Hence then, faid he, anotber Divifion of Things external; that is, into Purfuable, Avoidable, and Indifferent--a Divifion only belonging to Beings Senfitive and Animate, becaufe all, below thefe, can neither avoid art I. nor purfue. I replied, They could not.
146 Concerning H APPINESS,

If, then, faid he, Man be allowed in the Number of thefe Senfitive Beings, this Divifion will affect MAN --.- or to explain more fully, the whole Mafs of Things external will, according to this Divifion, exift to the Human Species in the Relations of Purfuable, Avoidable, and Indifferent. I replied, They would.

Should we therefore defire, faid he, to know what thefe things truly are, we muft firft be informed, what is MAN's truly Natural Constitution. For thus, you may remember, 'twas fettled not long fince -- that every Species was its cwon Standard, and that when the Value of Things zoas doubtful, the Species was to be fudied; the Relations to be deduced, wobich were confequent to it; and in this manner the Value of Things to be adjufted and afcertained. I replied, We had fo agreed it. I fear then, faid he, we are engaged.
gaged in a more arduous Undertaking, a Part I. Tafk of more Difficulty, than we were at firft aware of --- But Fortuna Fortes --- we muft endeavour to acquit ourfelves as well as we are able.
§. 12. That Man-therefore has a Body, of a Figure and internal Structure peculiar to itfelf; capable of certain De grees of Strength, Agility, Beauty, and the like; this I believe is evident, and hardly wants a Proof. I anfwered, I was willing to own it: That he is capable too of Pleafure and Pain; is poffefs'd of Senfes, Affections, Appetites, and Averfions; this alfo feems evident, and can fcarcely be denied. I replied, 'Twas admitted. We may venture then to range Him. in the Tribe of Animal Beings. I replied, We might.

And think you, faid he, without Society, you or any Man could have been born? Moft certainly not.

Without
Society, when born, could you have been $L_{2}$ brought.

148 Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part I. brought to Maturity? Moft certainly not. Had your Parents then had no Social Affections towards you in that perilous State, that tedious Infancy, (fo much longer than the longeft of other Animals) you muft have inevitably perifhed thro' Want and Inability. I muft. You perceive then that to Society you, and every Man are indebted, not only for the Beginning of Being, but for the Continuance. We are.

Suppose then we pafs from this Birtb and Infancy of Man, to his Maturity and Perfection-Is there any Age, think you, fo felf-fufficient, as that in it he feels no Wants? What Wants, anfwered I, do you mean? In the firft and principal place, faid he, that of Food; then perhaps that of Raiment : and after this, a Drwelling, or Defence againft the Weather. Thefe Wants, replied I, are furely Natural at all Ages. And is it not agreeable to Nature, faid he, that they fhould at all Ages be fupplied? Affuredly. furedly. And is it not more agreeable Part I to have them well fupplied, than-ill?
It is. And moft agreeable, to have them beft fupplied ? Certainly. If there be then any one State, better than all others, for the fupplying thefe Wants; tbis State, of all others, muft needs be moft Natural. It muft.

And what Supply, faid he, of thefe Wants, fhall we efteem the meaneft, which we can conceive? -Would it not be fomething like this? Had we nothing beyond Acorns for Food; beyond a rude Skin, for Raiment; or beyond a Cavern, or hollow Tree, to provide us with a Dreelling? Indeed, faid I, this would be bad enough.

And do you not imagine, as far as this, we might each fupply ourfelves, tho' we lived in Woods, mere folitary Savages? I replied, I thought we might.

Suppose then, continued he, that our Supplies were to be mended-for inftance, that we were to exchange Acorns for

$$
\mathrm{L}_{3} \quad \text { Bread }-
$$ fufficient bere? Muft we not be a little better difciplined? Would not fome Art be requifite? -The Baker's, for example. It would. And previouly to the Baker's, that of the Miller? It would. And previoully to the Miller's, that of the Hufbandman? It would. Three Arts then appear neceflary, even upon the loweft Eftimation. 'Tis admitted,

But a Queftion farther, faid he - Can the Hufbandman work, think you, without his Tools? Muft he not have his Plough, his Harrow, his Reap-hook, and the like? He muft. And muft not thofe other Artifs too be furnifhed in the fame manner? They muft. And whence muft they be furnifhed? From their own Arts? - Or are not the making Tools, and the ufing them, two different Occupations? I believe, faid I, they are. You may be convinced, continued he, by fmall Recollection. Does Agriculture make its own Plough, its owon Harrow? Part I.
Or does it not apply to other Arts, for all Neceffaries of this kind? It does. Again - Does the Baker build bis oron Oven; or the Miller frame bis oron Mill? It appears, faid I, no part of their Bufinefs.

What a Tribe of Mechanics then, faid he, are advancing upon us?-Smiths, Carpenters, Mafons, Mill-wrights - and all thefe to provide the fingle Neceffary of . Bread. Not lefs than Jeven or eight Arts, we find, are wanting at the ferweft. It appears fo. And what if to the providing a comfortable Cottage, and Raiment fuitable to an induftrious Hind, we allow a dozen Arts more? It would be eafy, by the fame Reafoning, to prove the Number double. I admit the Number, faid I, mentioned.

If fo, continued he, it fhould feem, that towards a tolerable Supply of the three Primary and Common Neceffaries, Food, Raiment,

$$
\mathrm{L}_{4} \quad \text { and }
$$

152 Corcerning HAPPINESS, Part I. and a Dwelling, not lefs than twenty Arts qwere, on the lorveft Account, requifite. It appears fo.

And is one Man equal, think you, to the Exercife of thefe twenty Arts? If he had even Genius, which we can fcarce imagine, is it poffible he fhould find Leifure?

- I replied, I thought not. If fo, then a folitary, unfocial State can never fupply tolerably the common Neceffaries of Life, It cannot.

But what if we pafs from the Neceflow ries of Life, to the Elegancies? To Mufic, Sculpture, Painting and Poetry? - What if we pafs from all Arts, whether Neceffary or Elegant, to the large and various Tribe of Sciences? To Logic, Mathematics, Aftronomy, Phyfics? - Can one Man, imagine you, mafter all this? Abfurd, faid I , impoffible. And yet in this Cycle of Sciences and Arts, feem included all the Comforts, as well as Ornaments of Life ; included all conducive, either to Being, or to Well-Being.

It muft be confeffied, faid I, it has Part I. the Appearance.

What then, faid he, muft be done? In what manner muft we be fupplied? I anfwered, I knew not, unlefs we made a Diftribution - Let one exercife one Art ; and another a different - Let this Man fudy fuch a Science; and that Man, anotber _Thus the whole Cycle (as you call it) may be carried eafily into Perfection. 'Tis true, faid he, it may; and. every Individual, as far as his own Art or Science, might be fupplied completely, and as well as he could wifh. But what avails a Supply in a fingle Inftance? What in this cafe are to become of all his numerous otber Wants? You conceive, replied I, what I would have faid, but partially. My Meaning was, that Artift trade with Artift; each fupply where he is deficient, by exchanging where he abounds; fo that a Partion of every thing may be difperfed tbrougbout all. You intend then a State,

If fo, continued he, I fee a new Face of things. The Savages, with their Skins and their Caverns, difappear. In their place I behold a fair Community rifing. No longer Woods, no longer Solitude, but all is Social, Civil, and Cultivated - And can we doubt any £arther, whether Society.be Natural? Is not this evidently the State, which can beft fupply the Primary Wants? It has appeared fo., And did we not agree fome time fince, that this State, whatever we found it, would be certainly of all others the moft agreeable to our Nature? We did. And have we not added, fince this, to the Weight of our Argument, by paffing from the Neceffary Arts to the Elegant; from the Elegant, to the Sciences? We have. The more, faid he, we confider, the more fhall we be convinced, that All thefe, the nobleft Honours and Ornaments of the Human Mind, without that Leifure; that Experience, that Emulation, lation, that Reward, which the Social State Part I. alone we know is able to provid them, could never have found Exiften or been in the leaft recognized. Ind faid I, I believe not.

ter

Let it not be forgot then, faid he, in favour of Society, that to it we owe, not only the Beginning and Continuation, but the Well-Eieing, and (if I may ufe the Expreffion) the very Elegance, and Rationality of our Exifence. I ạnfwered, It appeared evident.

And what then, continued he? - If Society be thus agreeable to our Nature, is there nothing, think you, witbin us, to excite and lead us to it? No Impulfe, no Preparation of Faculties? It would be ftrange, anfwered I, if there fhould not. 'Twould be a fingular Exception, faid he, with refpect to all other berding Species-Let us however examine-Pity, Benevolence, Friend $h i p$, Love ; the general Dinike of Solitude, and Defire of Company;

Part I. pany; are they Natural Affections, which come of theingelves; or are they taugbt us by Art, like Mufic and Arithmetic?
I fhould think, replied I, they were Na tural, becaufe in every Degree of Men fome Traces of them may be difcovered.
And are not the Powers and Capacities of Speech, faid he, the fame? Are not all Men naturally formed, to exprefs their Sentiments by fome kind of Language? I replied, They were.

If then, faid he, thefe feveral Porvers, and Difpofitions are Natural, fo fhould feem too their Exercife. Admit it. And if their Exercife, then fo too that State, wobere alone they can be exercijed. Admit it. And what is this State, but the Social? Or where elfe is it poffible to converfe, or ufe our Speech; to exhibit Actions of Pity, Benevolence, Friendfhip or Love; to relieve our Averfion to Solitude, or gratify our Defire of being with others? I replied, It could be no where elfe.

You fee then, continued he, a Prepa- Part I. ration of Faculties is not wanting. We are fitted with Powers and Difpofitions, which have only Relation to Society; and which, out of Society, can no where elfe be exercifed. I replied, It was evident. You have feen too the fuperior Advantages of the Social State, above all others. I have.

Let this then be remember'd, faid he, throughout all our future Reafonings, remember'd as a firft Principle in our Ideas of Humanity, that Man by Nature is truly a Social Animal. I promifed it fhould.
§. 13. Let us now, faid he, examine, what farther we can learn concerning Him. As Social indeed, He is diftinguifhed from the Solitary and Savage Species; but in no degree from the reft, of a milder and more friendly Nature. 'Tis true, replied I, He is not. Does He then differ no more from there of them, differ from one another? Muft we range them all, and Man among the reft, under the fame common and general Genus?

I fee no Foundation, faid I, for ' making a Diftinction.

Perhaps, faid he, there may be none; and 'tis poffible too there may. Confider a little - Do you not obferve in all other Species, a Similarity among Individuals? a furprizing Likenefs, which runs tbro' each Particular? In one Species they are all Bold; in another, all Timorous; in one all Ravenous; in another, all Gentle. In the Bird-kind only, what a-Uniformity of Voice, in each Species, as to their Notes; of Ar cbitecture, as to building their Nefts; of Food, both for themfelves, and for fupporting their Young ? 'Tis true, faid I. And do you obferve, continued he, the Same Similarity among Men? Are thefe all as Uniform, as to their Sentiments and Actions? I replied, By no means.

Part I.

One Queftion more, faid he, as to the Character of Brutes, if I may be allowed the Expreffion-Are thefe, think you, wobat we bebold them, by Nature or otherwife? Explain, faid I, your Queftion, for I do not well conceive you. I mean, replied he, is it by Nature that the Swallow builds her Neft, and performs all the Offices of her Kind: Or is the taught by Art, by Difcipline, or Cuftom? She acts, replied I, by pure Nature undoubtedly.
And is not the fame true, faid he, of every other Bird and Beaft in the Univerfe?
It is. No wonder then, continued he, as they have fo wife a Governefs, that a uniform Rule of Action is provided for each Species. For what can be more worthy the Wifdom of Nature, than ever to the fame Subfances to give the fame Law? It appears, faid I, reafonable.

But what, continued he, fhall we fay as to Man? Is He too actuated by Nature purely? I anfwered, Why not? that with refpect to Man alone, fhe fhould follow fo different a Conduct. The Particulars in other Species, we agree, fhe renders Uniform; but in Our's, every Particular feems a fort of Model by bimfelf. If Nature, faid I, do not actuate us, what can we fuppofe elfe?' AreLocal Cuffoms, faid he, Na ture? Are the Polities and Religions of particular Nations, Nature? Are the Examples, which are fet before us; the Preceptors who inftruct us; the Company and Friends, with whom we converfe, all Nature?
No furely, faid I.
And yet, faid he, 'tis evident that by thefe, and a thoufand incidental Circumftances, equally foreign to Nature, our Actions, and Manners, and Characters are adjufted. Who then can imagine, we are actuated by Nature only? I confers, faid I, it appears contrary.

You fee then, faid he, one remarkable Difinction between Man and Brutes in ge-neral---In the Brute, Nature does all; in Man, but Part only. faid I.

'Tis evident, Part I

Bu t farther, continued he -.-.--Let us confider the Powers, or Faculties, poffeffed by each---Suppofe I was willing to give a Brute the fame Inflruction, which we give a Man, A Parrot perhaps, or Ape, might arrive to fome fmall Degree of Mimicry; but do you think, upon the whole, they would be much profited or altered? I replied, I thought not. And do you perceive the fame, faid he, with refpect to Man? Or does not Experience fhew us the very reverfe? Is not Education capable of moulding us into any thing ----- of making us greatly Good, or greatly Bad; greatly Wife, or greatly $A b f u r d$ ? The Fact, faid I , is indifputable.

Mark then, faid he, the Difference between Human Powers and Brutal---The Leading Principle of Brutes appears to tend in each Species to one fingle Purpofe---to this, in general, it uniformly arrives; and here, M will it eafily be changed, or admit a.different Direction. On the contrary, the Leading Principle of MAN is capable of infinite Directions ---- is convertible to all forts of Purpofes ----equal to all forts of Subjepts--neglected, remains ignorant, and void of every Perfection ------ cultivated, becomes adorned with Sciences and Arts---can raife us to excel, not only Brutes, but our own Kind---with refpect to our other Powers and Faculties, can inftruct us how to ufe them, as well as thofe of the various Natures, which we fee exifting around us. In a word, to oppofe the two Principles to each other----The Leading Principle of Man, is Multiform, Öriginally Uninffructed, Pliant and Docil---the Leading Principle of Brutes is Uniform, Originally Infructed; but, in moft Inftances afterward, Inflexible andIndocil ---- Or does not Experience plainly fhew, and confirm the Truth of what we affert? I made anfwer, It did.

You allow, then, faid he, the Human Part I. Principle, and the Brutal, to be things of different Idea. Undoubtedly. Do they not each then deferve a different Appellation? I fhould think fo. Suppofe therefore we call the Human Principle Reason; and the Brutal, Instinct: would you object to the Terms? I replied, I fhould not. If not, continued he, then Reafon being peculiar to Man, of all the Animals inhabiting this Earth, may we not affirm of Him, by way of Diftinction, that He is a Rational Animal? I replied, We might juftly.

Let this too then be remember'd, faid he, in the Courfe of our Inquiry, that Man is by Nature a Rational Animal.
I-promifed it fhould.
§. I4. In confequence of this, faid he, as often as there is Occafion, I Chall appeal as well to Reafon, as to Nature, for a Standard. What, faid I, do you mean by Nature? M 2

Its

Its Meanings, replied he, are many and various. As it ftands at prefent oppofed, it may be enough perhaps to fay, that Nature is that, which is the Caufe of every thing, except thofe Things alone, wbich are the immediate Effects of Reajon. In other words, whatever is not Reafon, or the Effect of Reafon, we would confider as Nature, or the Effect of Nature. I anfwered, as he fo diftinguifhed them, I thought he might juflly appeal to either.

And yet, cantinued he, there is a re-markable Difference between the Standard of Reafon, and that of Nature; a Difference, which at no time we ought to forget. What Difference, faid I , do you mean? 'Tis this, anfwered he $-\ldots-{ }^{-}$In Nature, the Standard is fought from among the Many; in Reafon, the Standard is fought from among the Ferw. You muft explain, faid I, your Meaning, for I muft confefs you feem obfcure.

Thus

Thus then, faid he-----Suppofe, as an Part I. Anatomift, you were feeking the Structure of fome internal Part -----To difcover this, would you not infpect a Number of Individuals? I fhould. And would you not inform yourfeif, what had been difcovered by others ? I fhould. And fuppofe, after all, you fhould find a Multitude of Inftances for one Structure, and a ferw fingular for a different: by which would you be governed? By the Multitude, faid I, undoubtedly. Thus then continued he, in Nature the Standard, you fee, exifts among the Many: I replied, It had fo appeared,

And what, faid he, were we to feek the Perfection of Sculpture, or of Painting ?----Where fhould we inquire then ? --Among the rumerous common Artifts, or among the fer and celebrated? Among the Few, faid I. What if we were to feek the Perfection of Poetry, or Oratory--Where then? Among the Few ftill.

What

Concerning HAPPINESS,

What if we were to feek the Perfection of true Argument, or a found Logic -----Where then ? Still among the Few. And is not true Argument, or a found Logic, one of Reafon's greateft Perfections? It is. You fee then, continued he, whence the Standard of Reafon is to be fought----'Tis from among the Ferw, as we faid before, in contradifinction to the Standard of Nature.
I confefs, faid I, it appears fo.
And happy, faid he, for us, that Providence has fo ordered it----happy for us, that what is Rational, depends not on the Multitude; or is to be tried by fo pitiful a Teft, as the bare counting of Nofes. 'Tis bappy, faid I, indeed----But whence pray the Difference? Why are the Many to determine in Nature, and the Ferw only, in Reafon? To difcufs this at large, faid he, would require fome time. It might infenfibly perhaps draw us from our prefent Inquiry. I will endeavour to give you the Reafon, in as few words as poffible; which fhould they chance to be obfcure, be not too folicitous for an Explanation.
I begged him to proceed his own way.

The Cafe, faid he, appears to be this--In Natural Works and Natural Operations, we hold but one Efficient Cauje, and that confummately rwife. This Caufe in every Species recognizing wobat is beft, and working ever uniformly according to this Idea of Perfection, the Productions and Energies, in every Species where it acts, are for the moft part fimilar and exactly correspondent. If an Exception ever happen, it is from fome bidden bigher Motive, which tranfcends our Comprehenfion, and which is feen fo rarely, as not to injure the general Rule, or render it doubtful and precarious. On the contrary, in the Productions and Energies of Reafon, there is not one Caufe but infinite--as many indeed, as there are Agents of the Human Kind. Hence Trutb being but one, and Error being infirite, and Agents infinite alfo: what wonder they fhould oftener mifs, than hit the Mark ? that Mulititudes fhould fail, where one alone art I. fucceeds, and Truth be only the Poffeffion of the chofen, fortunate Ferw? You feem to have explained the Difficulty, faid I, with fufficient Perfpicuity.

Let us then go back, faid he, and recollect ourfelves; that we may not forget, what 'tis we are feeking. I replied; Moft willingly. We have been feeking, continued he, the Sovereign Good. In confequence of this Inquiry, we have dif-covered----that all Things whatever exift to the Human Species in the Relations of either Purfuable, Avoidable, or Indifferent. To determine thefe Relations with Accuracy, we have been fcrutinizing the Humar Nature ; and that, upon this known Maxim, that every Species was its owne proper Standard; and that where the Value. of Things was dubious, there the Species was to be fudied, and the Relations to be deduced, wobich naturally fow from it. The Refult of this Scrutiny has been --- that we have firft agreed Man to be a Social Animal; and fince, to be a Rational. So that if we can be content with a defcriptive, concife Part I. Sketch of Human Nature, it will amount to this---that Man is A Social Ra, tional Animal. I anfwered, It had appeared fo.
§. I 5. If then, faid he, we purfue our Difquifitions, agreeably to this Idea of Hu man Nature, it will follow that all Things will be Purfuable, Avoidable, and Indifferent to Man, as they refpect the Being and Welfare of fuch a Social, Rational Animal. I replied, They muft.

Nothing therefore in the firft place, faid he, can be Purfuable, which is defructive of Society. It cannot. Acts therefore of Fraud and Rapine, and all acquired by them, whether Wealth, Power, Pleafure, or any thing, are evidently from their very Character not fit to be purfued:

They are not.
But it is impoffible not to purfue many fuch things, unlefs we are furnifhed with fome Habit or Difpofition of Mind, by which their own, and to regard the Welfare, and Intereft of Society. It is impoffible. But the Habit or Difpofition of rendering to all their own, and of regarding the Welfare and Intereft of Society, is Justice. It is. We may therefore fairly conclude, that Notbing is naturally Purfuable, but wobat is either correfpondent to Fuftice, or at leaft not contrary. I confefs, faid I, fo it appears.

But farther, faid he--- 'Tis poffible we may have the beft Difpofition to Society; the moft upright Intentions; and yet thro' Want of Ability to diccern, and know the Nature of Particulars, we may purfue many things inconfiftent, as well with our Private Intereft, as the Public. We may even purfue what is Rigbt, and yet purfue it in fuch a manner, as to find our Endeavours fruitlefs, and our Purpofes to fail. I anfwered, 'Twas poffible.
But this would ill befit the Character of a Rational Animal. It would. It is necerneceffary therefore, we Chould be furnifhed Part I with fome Habit or Faculty, inftructing us how to difcern the real Difference of all Particulars, and fuggefting the proper Means, by which we may either avoid or obtain them. It is. And what is this, think you, but Prudence? I believe, faid $I$, it can be no other. If it be, faid he, then 'tis evident from this Reafoning, that Notbing is purfuable, wobich is not correfpondent to Prudence. I replied, He had fhewn it could not.

But farther ftill, faid he---'Tis poffible we may neither want Prudence, nor Jufice to direct us; and yet the Impulfes of Appetite, the Impetuofities of Refentment, the Charms and Allurements of a thoufand flattering Objects, may tempt us, in fpite of ourfelves, to purfue what is both Imprudent, and Unjuft. They may. But if fo, 'tis neceffary, would we purfue as becomes our Cbaracter, that we fhould be furnifhed with fome Habit, which may moderate our Exceffes; which may temper

172 Concerning H APPINESS,

Part I. our Actions to the Standard of a Social State, and to the Intereft and Welfare, not of a Part, but of the Whole Man. Nothing, faid I , more neceffary. And what, faid he, can we call this Habit, but the Habit of Temperance? You name it, faid I, rightly. If you think fo, replied he, then Nothing can be Purfuable, which is not either correfpondent to Temperance, or at leaft not contrary.
I replied, So it feemed,
Once more, continued he, and we have done---'Tis poffible that not only Refentment and Appetite, not only the Cbarms and Allurements of external Objects, but the Terrors too, and Dread of them may marr the Rectitude of our Purpofes. 'Tis poffible. Tyranny and Superfition may affail us on one hand; the Apprehenfions of Ridicule, and a Falfe Sbame on the other--'Tis expedient, to withftand thefe, we fhould be armed with fome Habit, or our wifert beft Purfuits may elfe at all times be defeated. They may. And what is that that generous, manlike and noble Habit, Part ] which fets us at all times above Fear and Danger; what is it but Fortitude? I replied, It was no other. If fo then, continued he, befides our former Conclufions, Notbing fartber can be Purfuable, as our Inquiries now have fhewn us, wobich is not either correfpondent to Fortitude, or at leaft not contrary. I admit, faid I , it is not.

Observe then, faid he, the Sum, the Amount of our whole Reafoning ---- Nothing is truly Purfuable to fuch an Animal as Man, except what is correfpondent, or at leaft not contrary, to Justice, Prudence, Temperance and Fortitude. I allow, faid I , it appears fo. But if nothing Purfuable, then nothing Avoidable or Indifferent, but what is tried and eftimated after the fame manner. For Contraries are ever recognized tbro' the fame Habit, one with another. The fame Logic judges of Truth and Falfhood; the fame Mufical Art, of Concord and Difcord. So the fame Purfuable. I replied, It appeared probable.

To how unexpected a Conclufion then, faid he, have our Inquiries infenfibly led us? ---- In tracing the Source of Human Action, we have eftablifhed it to be thofe Four Grand Virtues, which are efteemed, for their Importance, the very Hinges of all Morality. We have.

But if fo, it fhould follow, that a Life, whofe Purfuings and Avoidings are governed by thefe Virtues, is that True and Rational Life, which we have fo long been feeking; that Life, where the Value of all things is juftly meafured by tbofe Relations, which they bear to the Natural Frame and real Conflitution of Mankind ---in fewer Words, a Life of Virtue appears to be the Life according to Nature. It appears fo.

But in fuch a Life every Purfuit, every Part I. Avoiding, (to include all) every Action will of courfe admit of being rationally juffifeed.

It will. But That, which being Done, admits of a Rational Fufification, is the Effence or genuine Character of an Office, or Moral Duty. For thus long ago it has been defined by the beft * Authorities. Admitit. If fo, then A Life according to Virtue, is A Life according to Moraf Offices or Duties. It appears fo. But we have already agreed it, to be a Life according to Nature. We have. Obferve then: A Life according to Virtue, According to Moral Offices, and according to Nature, mean all the same Thing, tho' varied in the Expreffion. Your Remark, faid I, feems juft.

$$
\text { §. } 15
$$

* By Tully in his Offices, and by other Authors of Antiquity.

Part I. §. I6. We need never therefore; replied he, be at a lois how to chafe, tho' the Objects of Choice be ever fo infinite and diverfified. As far as nothing is inconfident with fuck a Life and fuck a Charater, we may juftly fet Exiftence before Death; prefer Health to Sicknefs; Integrity of the Limbs, to being maimed and debilitated; Pleafure to Pain; Wealth to Poverty; Fame to Difhonour ; Free Go vernment to Slavery; Power and Magiftracy, to Subjection and a private State---Univerfally, whatever tends either to Being, or to Well-Being, we may be juftified, when we prefer to whatever appears the contracy. And when our feveral Energies, exerted according to the Virtues above, have put us in Poffeffion of all that we require : what then can there be wanting to complete our Happiness; to render our State perfectly consonant to Nature; or to give us a more Sovereign Good, than that which we now enjoy? Nothing, replied I, that I can at prefent think of.

There would be nothing indeed, faid $\sim$ he, were our Energies never to fail; were all our Endeavours to be ever crowned with due Succefs. But fuppofe the contrary--Suppofe the worft Succefs to the mof up= rigbt Conduct; to the wifeft Rectitude of Energies and Actions. 'Tis poffible, nay Experience teaches us 'tis too often fact, that not only the Purfuers of what is contrary to Nature, but that thofe who purfue nothing but what is Jristly congruous to it, may mifs of their Aims, and be fruftrated in their Endeavours. Inquifitors and Monks may deteft them for their Virtue, and purfue them with all the Engines of Malice and Inhumanity. Without thefe, Pefts may afflict their Bodies; Inundations o'erwhelm their Property; or what is worfe than Inundations, either Tyrants, Pirates, Heroes, or Banditti. They may fee their Country fall, and with it their braveft Countrymen; themfelves pillaged, and reduced to Extremities, or N perihing

Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part I. perifhing with the reft in the general Maffacre.
..... * cadit E厅 Ripbeus, jufiffimus unus थui fuit in Teucris, EJ fervantifimus aqui.

It muft be owned, faid I , this has too often been the Cafe.

Or grant, continued he, that thefe greater Events never happen -- that the Part allotted us, be not in the Tragedy of Life, but in the Comedy. Even the Comic Diftreffes are abundantly irkfome ------. Domeftic Jars, the ill Offices of Neighbours ----- Sufpicions, Jealoufies, Schemes defeated ----- The Folly of Fools; the Knavery of Knaves; from which, as Members of Society, 'tis impoffible to detach ourfelves.

Where

$$
\text { * ÆNEID. 1. 2. v. } 426 .
$$

Where then fhall we turn, or what Part I. have we to imagine? We have at length placed Happiness, after much Inquiry, in At taining the primary and juft Requiftes of our Nature, by a Conduct fuitable to Virtue. and Moral Office. But as to correfponding with our Pre-conceptions (which we have made the Teft) does this Syftem correfpond better, than thofe otbers, which we have rejected? Has it not appeared from various Facts, too obvious to be difputed, that in many Times and Places it may be abfolutely unattainable? That in many, where it exifts, it may in a moment be cancelled, and put irretrievably out of our Power, by Events not to be refifed? If this be certain, and I fear it cannot be queftioned, our fpecious long Inquiry, however accurate we may believe it, has not been able to fhew us a Good, of that Character which we require; a Good Durable, Indeprivable, and Accommodate to every Circum-fance----Far from it---Our Speculations N 2
(I
,art I. (I think) rather lead us to that low Opinion of Happinefs, which you may remember you * expreffed, when we firft began the Subject. They rather help to prove to us, that inftead of a Sovereign Good, 'tis the more probable Sentiment, there is no fuch Good at all. I fhould indeed, faid I, fear fo. . For where, continued he, lies the Difference, whether we purfue what is congruous to Nature, or not con-. gruous; if the Acquifition of one be as difficult, as of the otber, and the Poffefion of both equally doubtful and precarious? If Cefar fall, in attempting his Country's Ruin; and Brutus fare no better, who only fought in its Defence? It muft be owned, faid I, thefe are melancholy Truths, and the Inftances, which you alledge, too well confirm them.

We were in the midft of thefe ferious Thoughts, defcanting upon the Hardfips and

$$
\text { See p. } 11 \mathrm{t}
$$

and Miferies of Life, when by an Inci- Part I dent, not worth relating, our Speculations were interrupted. Nothing at the time, I thought, could have happened more unluckily ----- our Queftion perplexed ----- its Iffue uncertain ---- and myfelf impatient to know the Event. Neceffity however was not to be refifted, and thus for the prefent pur Inquiries were poftponed.

CONCERNING

HAPPINESS,

A

D I A L O G U E.

PART the SECond.

BRUTUS peribed untimely, and $\mathrm{P}_{\text {ait }} \mathrm{Il}$ Cæfar did no more---Thefe Words I was repeating the next day to myfelf, when my Friend appeared, and chearfully bade me Good-Morrow. I could not return his Compliment with an equal Gaiety, being intent, fomewhat more than ufual, on what had paffed the day before. Seeing this, he propofed a Walk into the Fields. The Face of Nature, faid he, will perhaps difpel thefe Glooms. No Affiftance, on my part, fhall be wanting, art II. you may be affured. I accepted his Propofal ; the Walk began; and our former Converfation infenfibly renewed.

184  Concerning H APPINESS,

Brutus, faid he, peribod untimely, and Cæfar did no more-----'Twas thus, as I remember, not long fince you were expreffing yourfeif. And yet fuppofe their Fortunes to have been exactly parallel----Which would you have preferred? Would you have been Cafar or Brutus?
Brutus, replied I, beyond all controverfy. He afked me, Why ? Where was the Difference, when their Fortunes, as we now rupoled then, were confidered as the fame? There feems, faid I, abitract from thein Foriunes, fomething, I know not what, inirinfically preferable in the Life and Character of Brutus. If that, faid he, be true, then mult we derive it, not from the Succéss of his Endicavours, but from their Trutb and Rectitude. He had the Comfort to be confcious, that his Caufe was a juft one. 'Twas impoffible the other fhould have any fuch Feeling. faid I , you have explained it.

Suppose then, continued he, ('tis but merely an Hypothefis) fuppofe, I fay, we were to place the Sovereign Good in fuch a Rectitude of Conduct ---- in the Conduct merely, and not in the Event. Suppofe we were to fix our Happiness, not in the actual Attainment of that Health, that Perfection of a Social State, that fortunate Concurrence of Externals, which is congruous to our Nature, and which we have a Right all to purfue; but folely fix it in the mere Doing whatever is correfpondent to fuch an End, even tho' we never, attain, or are near attaining it. In fewer words-What if we make our Natural State the Standard only to determine our Conduct; and place our Happinefs in the Rectitude of this Conduct alone?--On fuch an Hypothefis (and we confider it as nothing farther) we fhould not want a Good perhaps, to correffond to our Pre-conceptions; for this, 'tis evident, would be correfpondent to them new and ftrange, that tho' you been copious in explaining, I can hardly yet comprehend you:

It amounts all, faid he, but to this--Place your Happine/s, where your Praife is. I afked, Where he fuppofed that? Not, replied he, in the Pleafures which you feel, more than your Difgrace lies in the Pain_-_ not in the cafual Profperity of Fortune, more than your Difgrace in the cafual Adverfity---but in juft complete Aetion througbout every Part of Life, what ever be the Face of Things, whether favourable or the con= trary.

But why then, faid I, fuch Accuracy about Externals? So much Pains to be informed, what are Purfuable, what Avoidable? It behoves the Pilot, replied he, to know the Seas and the Winds; the Nature of Tempefts, Calms and Tides. They are the Subjects, about which his Art is converfant. Without a juft Experience Part II of them, he can never prove himfelf an Artij. Yet we look not for his Reputation either in fair Gales, or in adverfe; but in the Skilfulne/s of bis Conduct, be thefe Events as they happen. In like manner fares it with this the Moral Artift. He, for a Subject, has the Whole of Human Life-Health and Sicknefs; Pleafure and Pain; with every other poffible Incident, which can befal him during his Exiftence. If his Knoreledge of all thefe be accurate and exact, fo too muft hiṣ Conduct, in which we place his Happinefs. But if this Knorvledge be defective, muft not his Conduct be defective alfo ? I replied, So it thould feem. And if his Conduct, then his Happinefs? 'Tis true.

You fee then, continued he, even tho Externals were as nothing; tho' 'twas true, in their own Nature, they were neither Good nor Evil; yet an accurate Knowledge of them is, from our Hypothefis, abfolutely neceffary.
art II. neceffary. proved it.

Indeed, faid I, you have

He continued----Inferior Artifts may be at a ftand, becaufe they want Materials. From their Stubbornefs and Intractability, they may often be difappointed. But as long as Life is paffing, and Nature continues to operate, the Moral Artit of Life has at all times, all he defires. He can never want a Subject fit to exercife him in his proper Calling; and that, with this happy Motive to the Conftancy of his Endeavours, that, the croffer, the harfher, the more untoward the Events, the greater his Praife, the more illuftrious his Reputation.

All this, faid I, is true, and cannot be denied. But one Circumftance there appears, where your Similes feem to fail. The Praife indeed of the Pilot we allow to be in his Conduct; but 'tis in the Succe/s of that Conduct, where we look for his Happinefs. If a Storm arife, and the Ship be loft, we call him not bappy, how well Part II foever he may have conducted. 'Tis then only we congratulate him, when he has reached the defired Haven. Your Diftinction, faid he, is juft. And 'tis here lies the noble Prerogative of Moral Artifts, above all others----But yet I know not how. to explain myfelf, I fear my Doctrine will appear fo ftrange. You may proceed, faid I fafely, fince you advance it but as an Hypotbe/is.

Thus then, continued he ---The End in others Arts is ever diftant and removed. It confifts not in the mere Conduct, much lefs in a fingle Energy; but is the juft Refult of many Energies, each of which are effential to it. Hence, by Obftacles unavoidable, it may often be retarded: Nay more, may be fo embaraffed, as never poffibly to be attained. But in the Moral Art of Life, the very Conduct is the End; the very Conduct, I fay, itfelf, throughout every its minuteft Energy; becaufe each of thefe, however minute, partake as truly of Rectitude, when confidered collectively. Hence of all Arts is this the only one perpetually complete in every Inftant, becaufe it needs not, like other Arts, Time to arrive at that Perfection, at which in every Inftant 'tis arrived already: Hence by Duration it is not rendered either more or lefs perfect; Completion, like Truth, admitting of nơ Degrees, and being in no fenfe capable of either Intenfion or Remifion. And hence too by neceffary Connection (which is a greater Paradox than all) even that Happis ne/s or Soriereign Good, the End of this Moral Art, is itfelf toin, in every Infant; Confummate and Complete; is neither beightened or diminifbed by the Quantity of its Diration, but is the fame to its Enjoyers, for a Moment or a Century.

Upon this I fmiled. He afked me

 the Reafon. 'Tis only to obferve, faid I, the Courfe of our Inquiries--A new Hy pothefis has been advanced -----Appearing fomewhat ftrange, it is defired to be ex-plained--plained----You comply with the Requeft, Part I and, in purfuit of the Explanation, make it ten times more obfcure and unintelligible, than' before. 'Tis but too often the Fate, faid he, of us Commentators. But you know in fuch cafes what is ufually done. When the Comment will not explain the Text, we try whether the Text will not explain itfelf. This Method, 'tis poffible, may affift us here. The Hypothefis, which we would have illuftrated, was no more than this----That the Sovem reign Good lay in Rectitude of Conduct; and that this Good correfponded to all our Preconceptions. Let us examine then, whether, upon trial, this Correfpondence will appear to hold; and, for all that we have advanced fince, fuffer it to pafs, and not perplex us. Agreed, faid I, willingly, for now, I hope to comprehend you.
§. 2. Recollect then, faid he. Do you not remember that one Pre-conception of the Sovereign Good was, to be accommodate to all Times and Places? I remember it.

And

Concerning H A P P INESS,

And is there any Time, or any Place; whence Rectitude of Conduct may be excluded? Is there not a right Action in Profperity, a right Action in Adverfity ?-May there not be a decent, generous, and laudable Behaviour, not only in Peace, in Power, and in Health; but in War, in Oppreffion, in Sicknefs and in Death ? There may.

And what fhall we fay to thofe other Pre-conceptions ---- to being Durable, Selfderived, and Indeprivable? Can there be any Good fo Durable, as the Power of always doing right? Is there any Good conceiveable, fo intirely beyond the Power of otbers? Or, if you hefitate, and are doubtful, I would willingly be informed, into what Circumftances may Fortune throw a brave and honeft Man, where it fhall not be in his Powertto act bravely and boneflly? If there are no fuch, then Rectitude of Conduct, if a Good, is a Good Indeprivable. I confefs, faid I, it-appears fo.

But farther, faid he----Another Pre-Part] conception of the Sovereign Good was, to be Agreeable to Nature. It was. And can any thing be more agreeable to $a$ Rational and Social Animal, than Rational and Social Conduct? Nothing. But Rectitude of ConduEt is with us Rational and Social Conduct. It is.

Once more, continued he---Another Pre-conception of this Good was, to be Conducive, not to Mere-being, but to Wellbeing. Admit it. And can any thing, believe you, conduce fo probably to the Well-being of a Rational Social Animal, as the right Exercife of that Reafon, and of thofe Social Affections? Nothing. And what is this fame Exercife, but the bigheft Rectitude of Conduct? Certainly.
§. 3. You fee then, faid he, how well our Hypothefis, being once admitted, tallies with our Original Pre-conceptions of the Sovereign Good.

I replied, it in-0 deed

194 Concerning H A P P I N E S S,

art II. deed appeared fo, and could not be denied. But who, think you, ever dreamt of a Happinefs like this? A Happinefs dependent, not on the Succefs, but on the Aim? Even common and ordinary Life, replied he, can furnifh us with Examples. Afk of the Sportfman where lies his Enjoyment? Afk whether it be in the Poffefion of a flaughter'd Hare, or Fox? He would reject, with Contempt, the very Suppofition----He would tell you, as well as he was able, that the Joy was in the Purfuit----in the Difficulties which are obviated; in the Faults, which are retrieved; in the Conduct and Direction of the Chace thro' all its Parts---that the Completion of their Endeavours was fo far from giving them Joy, that inftantly at that Period all their Joy was at an end. For Sportfmen, replied I, this may be no bad Reafoning. It is not the Sentiment, faid he, of Sportfmen alone. The Man of Gallantry not unoften has been found to think after the fame manner.

Iranfoolat in medio pofita, © fugientia captat.
To thefe we may add the Tribe of Builders and Projectors. Or has not your own Experience informed you of Numbers, who, in the Building and Laying-out, have expreffed the higheft Delight; but fhewn the utmoft Indifference to the Refult of their Labours, to the Manfion or Gardens, when once finifhed and complete?

The Truth, faid I, of there Examples is not to be difputed. But I could wifh your Hypothefis had better than thefe to fupport it. In the ferious Viewo of Happi$n e / s$, do you ever imagine there were any, who could fix it (as we faid before) not on the Succefs, but on the Aim? More, even in this light, faid he, than perhaps at firft you may imagine. There are Inftances innumerable of Men, bad as well as good, who having fixed, as their Aim, a certain Conduct of their own, have $\mathrm{O}_{2} \quad$ fo

* Hor. Sat. II. L. x. v. Io7. to it, as to deem all Events in its Profecution, whether fortunate or unfortunate, to be mean, contemptible, and not worthy their Regard. I called on him for Examples.

What think you, faid he, of the Affaffin, who flew the firt Prince of Orange; and who, tho' brought by his Conduct to the moft exquifite Tortures, yet confcious of what he bad done, could bear them all unmoved? Or (if you will have a better Man) what think you of that fturdy Roman, who would have difpatched Porfenna; and who, full of his Defign, and fuperior to all Events, could thruft a Hand into the Flames with the fteadieft Intrepidity?
I replied, That thefe indeed were very uncommon Inftances.

Attend too, continued he, to Epicurus dying, the Founder of a Philofophy, little favouring of Entbuffafm-----" This I " write you (fays he, in one of his Epiftles) "qubile the laft Day of Life is pafing, and "that a Happy One. The Pai ed of Part II
"my Body are not capable of $l$ igh"tened. Yet to thefe we oppole y of "the Soul, which arifes from t, vory
" of our paft Speculations."----- 1 im, confonant to this, in another $\mathrm{Pl}_{\mathrm{i}} \quad$ rting, that a Rational Adverfity ze ter. than an Irrational Profperity.

And what think you? --- Had he not placed his Good and Happinefs in the fuppofed Rectitude of bis Opinions, would he not have preferred Propperity, at all rates, to Adverfity? Would not the Pains, of which he died, have made his Happinefs perfect Mifery ? ---- And yet, you fee, he difowns any fuch thing. The Memory of his paft Life, and of his Philofophical Inventions were, even in the Hour of Death it feems, a Counterpoife to fupport him.

It muft be owned, faid I, that you appear to reafon juftly.

Pass from Epicurus, continued he, to Socrates. What are the Sentiments of that art II. divine Man, fpeaking of his own unjuft Condemnation? "O Crito, fays he, if it ", be pleafing to the Gods this way, then be " it this, way." And again --.-" Anytus " and Melitus, I grant, can kill me; but "to burt or injure me, is beyond tbeir "Porver." It would not have been beyond it, had he thought his Welfare dependent on any thing they could do; for they were then doing their worft-----Whence then was it beyond them?---Becaufe his Happinefs was derived not from witbout, but from witbin; not from the Succefs, which perhaps was due to the Rectitude of his Life, but from that Rectitude alone, every other thing difregarded. He had not, it feems, fo far renounced his own Doctrine, as not to remember his former Words; that ------ "To whom ever " all tbings, conducive to Happinefs, are de"s rived folely, or at leaft nearly from bim" Self, and depend not on the Welfare or "Adverfity of others, from the Variety of "robofe Condition bis owen muft vary alfo: "He it is, wobo bas prepared to bimfelf the " moft excellent of all Lives----He it is, who Part II " is the Temperate, the Prudent, and the "Brave----He it is, who, when Wealth or "Cbildren either come or are taken away, "will beft obey the Wife Man's Precept--.-. "For neither will be be feen to grieve, nor "to rejoice in excefs, from the Truft and "Confidence which be bas repofed in bimfelf.", ---You have a Sketch at leaft of his Meaning, tho' far below his own Attic and truly elegant Expreffion. I grant, faid I, your Example; but this and the reft are but fingle Inftançes. What are three or four in Number, to the whole of Hu man Kind ?

If you are for Numbers, replied he, what think you of the numerous Race of Patriots, in all Ages and Nations, who have, joyfully met.Death, rather than defert their Country, when in danger? They muft have thought furely on anotber Happinefs than Succefs, when they could gladly go, where they faw Death often inevitable. Or what think you of the many Martyrs have dared defy the worft, rather than fwerve from their Belief? You have brought indeed, faid I, more Examples than could have been imagined.

Besides, continued he, what is that Comfort of $a$ Good Conscience, celebrated to fuch a height in the Religion which we profefs, but the Joy arifing from a Confcience of right Energies; a Confcience of having done nothing, but what is confonant to our Duty? I replied, It indeed appeared fo.

Even the Vulgar, continued he, recognize a Good of this very Character, when they fay of an Undertaking, tho' it fucceed not, that they are contented; that they have done their beft, and can accufe themfelves of nothing. For what is this, but placing their Content, their Good, their Happinefs, not in the Succefs of Endeavours, but in the Rectitude? If it be not the Rectitude which contents them, you muft tell me what 'tis elfe. replied I , to be that alone.

It appears, Part II.

I hope then, continued he, that tho' you accede not to this Notion of Happinefs, which I advance; you will at leaft allow it not to be fuch a Paradox, as at firft you feemed to imagine. That indeed, replied I , cannot be denied you.
§. 4. Granting me this, faid he, you encourage me to explain myfelf----We have fuppofed the Sovereign Good to lie in Rectitude of Conduct. We have. And think you there can be Rectitude of Conduct, if we do not live confjently? In what Senfe, faid I, would you be underftood? To live conffeently, faid he, is the fame with me, as To live agreeably to fome one fingle and confonant Scheme, or Purpofe. Undoubtedly, faid I, without this, there can be no Rectitude of Conduct. All Rectitude of Conduct then, you fay, implies fuch Confiftence. It does. And does all Confjfence, think you, imply fuch faid he, for aught we have difcovered yet to the contrary. But what if it fhould be found that there may be numberlefs Schemes, each in particular conffitent with itfelf, but yet all of them different, and fome perhaps contrary? There may, you know, be a confjfent Life of Knavery, as well as a confflent Life of Honefy; there may be a uniform Practice of Luxury, as well as of Temperance, and Abftemioufnefs. Will the Confiftence, common to all of these Lives, render the Conduct in each, right? It appears, faid I , an Abfurdity, that there fhould be the fame Rectitude in two Contraries. If fo, faid he, we muft look for fomething more than mere Conffence, when we fearch for that Rectitude, which we at prefent talk of. A confiftent Life indeed is requifite, but that alone is not enough. We muft de-termine its peculiar Species, if we would be accurate and exact. It indeed ap=, pears, faid I, neceflary, Nor is any thing, continued he, more Part II. eafy to be difcuffed. For what can that peculiar Confftence of Life be elfe, than a Life, whofe feveral Parts are not only confonant to each other, but to the Nature alfo of the Being, by whom that Life has been adopted? Does not this laft Degree of Confiftence appear as requifite as the former? I anfwered, It could not be otherwife.

You fee then, faid he, the true Idea of right Conduct. It is not, merely $T_{0}$ live confftently; but 'tis To live confftently rith Nature. Allow it.

But what, continued he? Can we live confiftently with Nature, and be at a lofs how to behave ourfelves? We cannot.

And can we know how to behave ourfelves, if we know nothing of what befals us; nothing of thofe Things and Events, which perpetually furround, and affect us? We cannot. You fee then, fallen infenfibly into that Doctrine, which proves the Neceffity of forutinizing, and knowing the Value of Externals. I replied, 'Twas true. If you affent, faid he, to this, it will of courfe follow, that, To live conffently roith Nature, is, To live agreeably to a juft Experience of thofe Things, wobich bappen aroumd us. It appears fo.

But farther ftill, faid he.---Think you any one can be deemed to live agreeably to fuch Experience, if he felect not, as far as poffible, the things moft congruous to bis Nature? He cannot. And by the fame Rule, as far as poffible, muft he not reject fuch as are contrary? He muft. And that not occafionally, as Fancy happens to prompt; but feadily, conftantly, and without Remiffion. I fhould imagine fo. You judge, faid he, truly. Were he to act otherwife in the leaft inftance, he would fallify his Profeffions; he would not live according to that Experience, which we now fuppofe him to pofferf. would not.

I replied, He Part II

IT fhould feem then, faid he, from hence, as a natural Confequence of what we have admitted, that the Effence of rigbt Conduct lay in Selection and Rejection. So, faid I, it has appeared. And that fuch Selection and Rejection fhould be confonant with our proper Nature. 'Tis true. And be fleady and perpetual, not occafional and interrupted. 'Tis true. But if this be the Effence of Rigbt Conduct, then too it is the Effence of our Sovereign Good; for in fuch Conduct we have fuppofed this Good to confirt. We have.

See then, faid he, the Refult of our Inquiry.----The Sovereign Good, as conftituted by Rectitude of Conduict, has, on our ftricteft Scrutiny, appeared to be this-To live perpetually selecting, as far as possible, what is congruous to Nature, and rejecting what is §. 5. Before we haften then farther; faid he, let us ftop to recollect, and fee whether our prefent Conclufions accord with our former.-We have now fuppofed the Sovereign Good to be Rectitude of Conduct, and this Conduct we have made confift in a certain Selecing and Rejecting. We have. And do you not imagine that the Selecting and Rejecting, which we propofe, as they are purely governed by the Standard of Nature, are capable in every inftance of being rationally jufified? I replied, I thought they were. But if they admit a rational Fuffification, then are they Moral Offices or Duties; for thus * you remember yefterday a Moral Office was defined. It was. But if fo, To live in the Practice of them, will be

$$
{ }^{*} \text { Sup. p. r75 }
$$

be To live in the Dijcharge of Moral Offices. Part II. It will. But To live in the Difcbarge of thefe, is the fame as Living according to Virtue, and Living according to Nature. It is. So therefore is Living in that Selection, and in that Rejection, which we propofe. It is.

We need never therefore be at a lofs, faid he, for a Defcription of the Sovereign Good. We may call it, Rectitude of Conduct. - If that be too contracted, we may enlarge and fay, 'tisTo live Perpetually Selecting and Rejecting according to the StanDARD of our Being.- If we are for ftill different Views, we may fay 'tis To live in the Discharge of Moral Offices-To live according to Nature --To live According to Virtue -To live according to Just Experience of those Things, Which happen around us. -_Like fome finifhed Statue, we may behold it every way; 'tis the fame Object, tho' varioufly Part II. varioufly viewed; nor is there a View, but is natural, truly graceful, and engaging.

§. 6. I cannot deny, faid I, but that as you have now explained it, your Hypothefis feems far more plaufible, than when firft it was propofed. You will believe it, faid he, more fo ftill, by confidering it with more Attention. - In the firft place, tho' perhaps it efteem nothing really Good but Virtue, nothing really Evil, but Vice, yet it in no manner takes away the Difference, and Difinction of other Things. So far otherwife, it is for eftablihing their Diftinction to the greateft Accuracy. For were this neglected, what would become of Selection and Rejection, thofe important Energies, which are its very Soul and Effence? Were there no Difference, there could be noChoice. 'Tis true, faid I, there could not.

Again, faid he. It is no meagre, mortifying Syftem of Self-denial-It fuppreffes no Social and Natural Affections, nor takes Part II. away any Social and Natural Relations---It prefcribes no Abftainings, no Forbearances out of Nature; no gloomy, fad, and lonely Rules of Life, without which 'tis evident Men may be as honeft as with, and be infinitely more ufeful and worthy Members of Society.--_It refufes no Pleafure, not inconfiftent with Temperance--It rejects no Gain, not inconfiftent with Fuftice----Univerfally, as far as Virtue neither forbids nor difuades, it endeavours to render Life, even in the mof vulgar Acceptation, as chearful, joyous, and eafy as poffible. Nay, could it mend the Condition of Exiftence in any the mof trivial Circumftance, even by adding to the ampleft Poffeffions the pooreft meaneft Utenfil, it would in no degree contemn an Addition even fo mean. Far otherwife---It would confider, that to neglect the leaft Acquifition, when fairly in its power, would be to fall fhort of that perfect and accurate Conduct, which it ever has in view, and on which alone all depends.

Part II. And yet, tho' thus exact in every the minuteft Circumftance, it gives us no Solicitude as to what Rank we maintain in Life. Whether noble or ignoble, wealthy or poor; whether merged in Bufinefs, or confined to Inactivity, it is equally confffent with every Condition, and equally capable of adorning them all. Could it indeed choofe its own Life, it would be always that, where moft focial Affections might extenfively be exerted, and moft done to contribute to the Welfare of Society. But if Fate order otherwife, and this be denied ; its Intentions are the fame, its Endeavours are not wanting; nor are the Social, Rational Powers forgotten, even in Times and Circumftances, where they can leaft become conficicuous.

It teaches us to confider Life, as one great important Drama, where we have each our Part allotted us to act. It tells us that our Happinefs, as AEtors in this Drama, confifts not in the Length of our Part, nor in the State and Dignity, but in Part II the juft, the decent, and the natural Performance.

IF its Aims are fucceffful, it is thankful to Providence. It accepts all the Joys, derived from their Succefs, and feels them as fully, as thofe who know no other Happinefs. The only Difference is, that having a more excellent Good in view, it fixes not, like the Many, its Happine/s on Succe/s alone, well knowing that in fuch cafe, if Endeavours fail, there can be nothing left behind but Murmurings and Mifery. On the contrary, when this happens, 'tis then it retires into itfelf, and reflecting on what is Fair, what is Laudable and Honeft (the truly beatific Vifion, not of mad Entbufiafts, but of the Calm, the Temperate, the Wife and the Good) it becomes fuperiour to all Events; it acquiefces in the Confcioufnefs of its own Rectitude; and, like that Manfion founded, not on the Sands, but on the Rock, it defies all the Terrors of Tempeft and Inundation.

$$
P 2 \quad \S .7
$$

art II. §. 7. Here he paufed, and I took the Opportunity to observe, how his Subject had warmed him into a degree of Raptare ; how greatly it had railed both his Sentiments and his Stile. No wonder, faid he. Beauty of every kind excites our Love and Admiration; the Beauties of Art, whether Energies or Works; the Beauties of Nature, whether Animal or Inanimate. And fall we expect lefs from this Supreme Beauty; this moral, mental, and original Beauty; of which all the reft are but as Types or Copies? ---Not however by high Flights to lofe Sight of our Subject, the whole of what we have argued, may be reduced to this-

Ali Men pursue Good, and would be happy, if they knew how; not happy for Minutes, and miferable for Hours, but happy, if poffible, tho' every Part of their Exifence. Either therefore there is a Good of this Heady durable Kind, or there is none. If none, then all Good mut be tranfent and uncertain; and if fo , an Ob - Part It ject of lorveft Value, which can little deferve either our Attention, or Inquiry. But if there be a better Good, fuch a Good as we are feeking; like every other thing, it muft be derived from fome Caufe; and that Caufe muft be either external, internal, or mixt, in as much as except thefe three, there is no other poffible. Now a feady, durable Good, cannot be derived from an external Caufe, by reafon all derived from Externals muft fluctuate, as they fluctuate. By the fame Rule, not from a Mixture of the $T_{\text {woo; }}$ becaufe the Part which is external will proportionally defroy its Effence. What then remains but the Caufe internal; the very Caufe which we have fuppofed, when we place the Sovereign Good in Mind; in Rectitude of Conduct; in juft Selecting and Rejecting? There feems indeed no other Caufe, faid I, to which we can poffibly affign it.

Forgive me then, continued he, fhould I appear to boaft ---.--We have P 3 proved, we have proved, that, eitber there is no Good except this of our oren; or that, if there be any other, 'tis not worthy our Regard. It muft be confeffed, faid I, you have faid as much, as the Subject feems to admit.
§. 8. By means then, faid he, of our Hypothefis, behold one of the faireft, and moft amiable of Objects, behold the true and perfect Man: that Ornament of Humanity ; that Godlike Being; who, without regard either to Pleafure or Pain, uninfuenced equally by either Propperity or Adverfity, fuperiour to the World and its beft and worft Events, can fairly reft bis All upon the Rectitude of bis own Conduct; can conftantly, and uniformly, and manfully maintain it; tbinking that, and that alone, wholly fufficient to make bim bappy.

And do you ferioufly believe, faid I, there ever was fuch a Character? And what, replied he, if I fhould admit, there never was, is, or will be fuch a Charazter? ?-. Part II. that we have been talking the whole time of a Being, not to be found;

A faultefs Monfer, which the World ne'er fawe?
Suppofing, I fay, we admit this, what then?
Would not your Syftem in fuch a cafe, faid I , a little border upon the chimerical? I only afk the Queftion. You need not be fo tender, he replied, in expreffing yourfelf. If it be falfe, if it will not indure the Teft, I am as ready to give it up, as I have been to defend it. He muft be a poor Philofopher indeed, who, when he fees Truth and a Syfem at variance, can eves be folicitous for the Fate of a Syftem.

But tell me, I pray-----Do you object to mine, from its Perfection, or from its Imperfection? From its being too excellent for Human Nature, and above it; or from its being too bafe, and below it?
It feems to require, faid I, a Perfection, to which no Individual ever arrived.
That very Tranfeendence, faid he, is an

$$
\mathrm{P}_{4} \quad \text { Argu- }
$$

216  Concerning H A P P I N E S S,

art II. Argument on its behalf. Were it of a Rank inferior, it would not be that Perfection, which we feek. Would you have it, faid I, beyond Nature? If you mean, replied he, beyond any particular or individual Nature, moft undoubtedly I would.--As you are a Lover of Painting, you fhall hear a Story on the Subject.
" In ancient days, while Greece was " flourihing in Liberty and Arts, a cele" brated Painter, having drawn many ex" cellent Pictures for a certain free State, " and been generoufly and honourably re" warded for his Labours, at laft made " an Offer to paint them a Helen, as a " Model and Exemplar of the moft ex" quifite Beauty. The Propofal was rea" dily accepted, when the Artift informed " them, that in order to draw one Fair, " 'twas necefflary he fhould contemplate " many. He demanded therefore a Sight " of all their fineft Women. The State, "" to affift the Work, affented to his Re"queft. They were exhibited before "him;
" him; he felected the mof beautiful ; Part II. " and from thefe formed his Helen, more "s beautiful than them all."

You have heard the Fact, and what are we to infer?---Or can there be any other Inference than this--- that the Standard of Perfection, with refpect to tbe Beauty of Bodies, was not (as this Artift thought) to be difcovered in any Individual; but being difperfed by Nature in Portions thro' the many, was from thence, and thence only, to be collected and recognized? It appears, faid I, he thought fo. The Picture, continued he, is loft, but we have Statues ftill remaining. If there be Truth in the Teftimony of the beft and faireft Judges, no Woman ever equalled the Delicacy of the Medicean Venus, nor Man the Strength and Dignity of the Farnbefian Hercules. 'Tis generally, faid I, fo believed.

And will you, faid he, from this unparalelled and tranfcendent Excellence, deny there

258 Concerning HAPPINESS,

Part II. thefe Works of Art to be truly and ftrietly Natural? Their Excellence, replied I, muft be confeffed by All; but how they can be called fo ftrictly Natural, I muft own a little ftartles me.

That the Limbs and their Proportions, faid he, are felected from Nature, you will hardly I believe doubt, after the Story juft related. I replied, 'Twas admitted. The Parts therefore of thefe Works are Na tural. They are. And may not the fame be afferted, as to the Arrangement of thefe Parts? Murt not this too be natural, as 'tis analogous we know to Nature? It muft. If fo, then is the Whole, Natural. So indeed, faid I, it fhould feem. It cannot, replied he, be otherwife, if it be a Fact beyond difpute, that the Whole is nothing more, than the Parts under fuch Arrangement. Enough, faid I, you have fatisfied me.

If I have, faid he, it is but to transfer what we have afferted of this fubordinate Beauty, to Beauty of a bigher Order; it is but but to pafs from the External, to the Part II. Moral and Internal. For here we fay, by parity of Reafon, that no where in any particular Nature is the perfect Cbaracter to be feen intire. Yet one is brave; another is temperate; a third is liberal; and a fourth is prudent. So that in the Multitude of mixed imperfect Cbaracters, as before in the Multitude of imperfect Bodies, is expreffed that Idea, that Moral Standard of Perfection, by which all are tried and compared to one another, and at laft upon the whole are either juftified or condemned----that Standard of Perfection, which cannot be but mof Natural, as it is purely collected from Individuals of Na ture, and is the Teft of all the Merit to which they afpire. I acknowledge; faid I, your Argument.

I might add, faid he, if there were Occafion, other Arguments which would furprize you. I might inform you of the natural Pre-eminence, and high Rank of Specific Ideas;---that every Individual was Part II. but their Type, or Shadow ;---- that the Mind or Intellect was the Region of Pof-fibles;---that what ever is Pofjible, to the Mind actually $I_{s}$; nor any thing a Nonentity, except what implies a Contradic-tion;----- that the genuine Sphere and genuine Cylinder, tho' Forms perhaps too -perfect, ever to exift conjoined to Matter, were yet as true and real Beings, as the groffeft Objects of Senfe; were the Source of Infinite Trutbs, which robolly depend on them, and which, as Truths, have a Being moft unalterable and eternal. But thefe are Reafonings, which rather belong to another Philofophy; and if you are fatisfied without them, they are at beft but fuperfluous.

He waited not for my Anfwer, but proceeded as follows. 'Tis thus, faid he, have I endeavoured, as far as in my power, to give you an Idea of the perfect Cbaracter: a Character, which I am neither fo abfurd, as to impute to myfelf; nor fo rigorous and unfair, as to require of others. We have propofed it only, as an Exemplar of Imitation, which tho' None Part II. we think can equal, yet $A l l$ at leaft may follow---an Exemplar of Imitation, which in proportion as we approach, fo we advance proportionably in Merit and in Worth---an Exemplar, which, were we moft Selffh, we fhould be Fools to reject; if it be true, that to be Happy, is the ultimate Wihb of us all, and that Happinefs and Moral Worth fo reciprocally correfpond, that there can be no Degree of the one, without an equal Degree of the other. If there be Truth, faid I, in your Reafonings, it cannot certainly be otherwife.

He continued, by faying-----The Proficiency of Socrates, and indeed of every honeft Man, was fufficient to convince us, could we be fteadfaft to our Purpofe, that fome Progrefs at leaft might be made toward this Perfection---How far, we knew not-The Field was open----The Race was free and common to All----Nor was the Prize, as ufual, referved only to the Firft but All, who run, might depend on a Reward, having but liften, to affure them,

* Nemo ex boc numero mibi non donatus abibit.
§. 9. Here he paufed, and left me to meditate on what he had fpoken. For fome time we paffed on in mutual Silence, till obferving me on my part little inclined to break it, What, faid he, engages you with an Attention fo earneft? I was wondering, faid I, whence it fhould happen, that in a Difcourfe of fuch a nature, you hould fay fo little of Religion, of Providence, and a Deity. I have not, replied he, omitted them, becaufe not intimately united to Morals; but becaufe what ever we treat accurately, fhould be treated feparately and apart. Multiplicity of Matter naturally tends to Confufion. They are weak Minds indeed, which dread a rational Sufpence; and much more fo, when in the Event, it only leads to a furer Knowledge,

[^4]ledge, and often ftrengthens the very Sub-Part II. ject, on which we furpend. Could I however repeat you the Words of a venerable Sage, (for I can call him no other) whom once I heard differting on the Topic of -Religion, and whom ftill I hear, when ever I think on him; you might accept perhaps my Religious Theories as candidly, as you have my Moral. I preffed him to repeat them, with which he willingly complied.

The Speaker, faid he, whofe Words I am attempting to relate, and whom for the prefent I name Theopbilus, $w_{i s}$ of a Character truly amiable in every part. When young, he had been fortunate in a liberal Education; had been a Friend to the Mufes, and approved himfelf fuch to the Public. As Life declined, he wifely retired, and dedicated his Time almoft wholly to Contemplation. Yet could he never forget the Mufes, whom once he loved. He retained in his Difcourfe (and fo in the Sequel you will foon find) a large in which thofe Ladies ufually choofe to exprefs themfelves.

We were walking, not (as now) in the chearful Face of Day, but late in the Evening, when the Sun had long been fett. Circumftances of Solemnity were not wanting to affect us; the Poets could not have feigned any more happy ------a a running Stream, an ancient Wood, a ftill Night, and a bright Moonfhine.---I, for my own part, induced by the Occafion, fell infenfibly into a Reverie about Inhabitants in the Moon. From thence I wandered to other heavenly Bodies, and talked of States there, and Empires, and I know not what.
$\mathrm{W}_{\text {но }}$ lives in the Moon, faid he, is perhaps more than we can well learn. 'Tis enough, if we can be fatisfied, by the help of our beft Faculties, that Intelligence is not confined to this little Earth, which we inhabit ; that tho' Men were not, the World would not want Spectators, to contemplate its Beauty, and adore the Wifdom of its Part II Author.
"c This whole Universe itfelf is but " one City or Commonwealth-----"a Syftem of Subftances varioully frmed, " and varioufly actuated agreeably to thofe "Forms - ---a Syftem of Subftances both " immenfely great and fmall, Rational, "Animal, Vegetable, and Inanimate.
"As many Families make one Village, " many Villages one Province, many Pro" vinces one Empire; fo many Empires, "Oceans, Waftes and Wilds, combined, " compofe that Earth on which we live. " Other Combinations make a Planet or a " Moon; and thefe again, united, make " one Planetary Syftem. What higher "Combinations fubfift, we know not. " Their Gradation and Afcent 'tis impof" fible we fhould difcover. Yet the ge" nerous Mind, not deterred by this Im" menfity, intrepidly paffes on, thro' Re"g gions unknown, from greater Syftem Part II. " to greater, till it arrive at that greateft, " where Imagination ftops, and can ad" vance no farther. In this laft, this " mighty, this ftupendous Idea, it beholds " the Universe itfelf, of which every "Thing is a Part, and with refpect to " which not the fmalleft Atom is either " foreign or detached.

" Wide as it's Extent, is the Wifdom " of itṣ Workmanfhip, not bounded and " narrow, like the humbler Works of Art. "Thefe are all of Origin no higher than "Human. We can readily trace them to " their utmoft Limit, and with accuracy " difcern both their Beginning and their "End. But where the Microfcope that " can fhew us, from what Point Wifdom " begins in Nature? Where the Telefcope " that can defcry, to what Infinitude it " extends? The more diligent our Search, " the more accurate our Scrutiny, the " more only are we convinced, that our "Labours can never finifh; that Subjects
" inexhauftible remain behind, ftill un- Part 1 " explored.
"Hence the Mind truly wife, quit" ting the Study of Particulars, as know" ing their Multitude to be infinite and in"comprebenfible, turns its intellectual Eye " to what is general and comprehenfive, "s and thro' Generals learns to fee, and re" cognize what ever exifts.
"IT perceives in this view, that every "Subftance, of every degree, has its Na " ture, its proper Make, Conftitution or "Form, by which it acts, and by which " it Juffers. It perceives it fo to fare with "s every natural Form around us, as with " thore Tools and Inftruments, by which " Art worketh its Wonders. The Saw is " deftined to one Act; the Mallet, to an" other; the Wheel anfwers this Purpofe; " and the Lever anfwers a different. So "Nature ufes the Vegetable, the Brute, " and the Rational, agreeably to the proper "Form and Confitution of every Kind. The \mathrm{Q}_{2} \quad \text { "Vegetable }

$$
$$ " bility. The Brute poffeffes a Senfe of " what is pleafurable and painful, but fops " at mere Sensation, and is unable to go far" sher. The Rational, like the Brute, has "' all the Powers of mere Sensation, but en" joys fuperadded a farther tranfcendent Fa " cully, by which it is made confcious, not " only of rabat it feels, but of the Powers "themselves, which are the Sources of " thole very Feelings; a Faculty, which " recognizing both itself" and all Things "elfe, becomes a Canon, a Corrector, and " a Standard Universal.

"Hence to the Rational alone is in" parted that Master-Science, of what " they are, where they are, and the End " to which they are defined.
" Happy, too happy, did they know " their own Felicity; did they reverence " the Dignity of their own fuperior Cha" racter, and never wretchedly degrade " themfelves into Natures to them fubor"dinate.
" dinate. And yet alafs! 'tis a Truth too Part I'
" certain, that as the Rational only are ", fufceptible of a. Happinefs truly excel" lent, fo thefe only merge themfelves s into Miferies paft Indurance.
cf Assist us then, Thou Power " Divine, with the Light of that Rea"son, by which Thou lighteneft the "World; by which Grace and Beauty is " diffufed thro' every Part, and the Wel" fare of the Whole is ever uniformly up" held; that Reafon, of which our own is " but a Particle or Spark, like fome Pro" methean Fire, caught from Heaven above. "So teach us to know ourfelves, that we " may attain that Knowledge, which " alone is worth attaining. Check our " vain, our idle Refearches into the Laws, " and Natures, and Motions of other Be" ings, till we have learnt and can prac" tife thofe, which peculiarly refpect our" felves. Teach us to be fit Actors in " that general Drama, where Thou haft §f allotted every Being, great and fmall, its Q 3 "prom " is the only End of its Exiltence:
"Enable us to curb Desire within " the Bounds of what is Natural. Enable " us even to fufpend it, till we can employ " it to our Emolument. Be our fir $/ t$ " Work, to have eícaped from wrong Opi" nion, and bad Habit; that the Mind, " thus render'd fincere and incorrupt, may " with Safety proceed to feek its genuine " Good and Happinefs.
" When we are thus previoufly ex" ercifec, thus duly prepared, let not our " Love there fop, where it firft begins; " but infenfibly conduct it, by thy invi" fible Influence, from lower Objects to " higher, till it arrive at that Supreme, " where only it can find what is adequate " and full. Teach us to love Thee, and "Thy Divine Administration-----" to regard the Univerfe itfelf as our true " and genuine Country, not that little ca"f fual Spot, where we firft drew vital "Air. Teach us each to regard Himfelf, Part II. " but as a Part of this great Whole; " a Part which for its Welfare we are as "patiently to refign, as we refign a fingle " Limb for the Welfare of our whole "Body. Let our Life be a continued "Scene of Acruiescence and of Grati"TUDE; of Gratitude, for what we enjoy; " of Acquiefcence, in what we fuffer; as " both can only be referable to that con" catenated Order of Events, which can" not but be beft, as being by Thee ap" proved and chofen.
"In as much as Futurity is hidden " from our Sight, we can have no other "Rule of Cboice, by which to govern our " Conduct, than what feems confonant to " the Welfare of our own particular Na " tures. If it appear not contrary to Duty " and moral Office, (and how fhould we " judge, but from what appears?) Thou " canft not but forgive us, if we prefer " Health to Sicknefs; the Safety of Life " and Limb, to Maiming or to Death. Q4. "But

$23^{2}$ Concerning H A P P I N E S S,

 'art II. "But did we know that thefe Incidents, " or any other were appointed us; were " fated in that Order of incontroulable " Events, by which Thou preferveft and " adorneft the Whole: it then becomes " our Duty, to meet them with Magna" nimity; to co-operate with Chearfulnefs " in what ever Thou ordaineft; that fo " we may know no other Will, than thine " alone, and that the Harmony of our " particular Minds with thy Univerfal, " may be fteady and uninterrupted thro' "t the Period of our Exiftence."Yet, fince to attain this Height, this " tranfcendent Height, is but barely pof" fible, if poffible, to the moft perfect "Humanity: regard what within us is "Congenial to Thee; raife us above our" felves, and warm us into Enthufiafn. "But let our Enthufiafin be fuch, as befits " the Citizens of Thy Polity; liberal, " gentle, rational, and humane---not fuch " as to debafe us into poor and wretched "S Slaves, as if Thou wert our Tyrant,
" not our kind and common Father ; Part II.
" much lefs fuch as to transform us into
" favage Beafts of Prey, fullen, gloomy, " dark and fierce ; prone to perfecute, to " ravage, and deftroy, as if the Luft of " Maffacre could be grateful to thy Good" nefs. Permit us rather madly to avow "Villany in thy Defiance, than impioully " to affert it under colour of thy Service. " Turn our Mind’s Eye from every Idea " of this Character; from the Servile, Ab" ject, Horrid and Ghaftly, to the Gene" rous, Lovely, Fair and Godlike.
" Here let us dwell;-----be here our "Study and Delight. So fhall we be en" abled, in the filent Mirrour of Contem" plation, to behold thofe Forms, which " are hidden to Human Eyes ---- that ani" mating Wisdom, which pervades and " rules the Whole----that Law irrefirtible, " immutable, fupreme, which leads the "Willing, and compels the Averfe, to co" operate in their Station to the general 84 Welfare----that Magic Divine, which $$ " transform every Appearance, the moft " hideous, into Beauty, and exhibit all "Things Fair and Good to Thee, "Essence Increate, wobo art of "purer Eyes, than ever to bebold Iniquity.

$$
\because \text { by }

" Be thefe our Morning, thefe our " Evening Meditations - with thefe may " our Minds be unchangeably tinged----" that loving Thee with a Love moft dif-
" interefted and fincere; enamoured of "thy Polity, and thy Divine Admi" nistration ; welcoming every Event " with Chearfulnefs and Magnanimity, as " being beft upon the Whole, becaufe or" dained of Thee; propofing nothing of " ourfelves, but with a Referve that Thou
"s permitteft; acquiefcing in every Obftruc" tion, as ultimately referable to thy Pro" vidence----in a word, that working this " Conduct, by due Exercife, into perfect
"Habit; we may never murmur, never
" repine ; never mifs what we would ob" tain, or fall into that which we would
"ConduIt me, Thou, of Beings Caufe Divine, "Where-e're I'm definn'd in thy great Defign. "Active I follow on: for Bould my Will "Reffjt, I'm impious; but muft follow fill.

In this manner did Theopbilus, faid he, purfue the Subject, to which I had led him. He adorned his Sentiments with Expreffions even more fplendid, than I have now employed. The Speaker, the Speech, the happy Circumftances which concurred, the Night's Beauty and Stillnefs, with the Romantic Scene where we were walking, all together gave the Whole fuch an Energy and Solemnity, as 'tis impoffible you fhould feel from the Coldnefs of a bare Recital. I, continued he, for touched, and retained the ftrongeft Feelings of what I had heard, till the following Morning. Then the Bufinefs of the Day gently obliterated all, and left me by Night as little of a Philofopher, as I had ever been before.
§. ro. And is it pofible, faid $I$, fo foon to have forgotten, what feems fo ftriking and fublime, as the Subject you have been now treating? 'Tis Habit, replied he, is all in all. 'Tis Practice and Exercife, wobich can only make us truly any thing. Is it not evidently fo , in the mof common vulgar Arts? Did mere Theory alone ever make the meaneft Mechanic? And is the Supreme Artijt of Life and Manners to be formed more eafily, than fuch a ,ne? Happy for us, could we prove it near fo eafy. But believe me, my Friend, good Things are not fo cheap. Notbing is to be bad gratis, much lefs that which is moft valuable.
Yet

Yet however for our Comfort, we have Part I this to encourage us, that, tho' the Difficulty of acquiring Habits be great and painful, yet nothing fo eafy, fo pleafant, as their Energies, when once wrought by Exercife to a due Standard of Perfection. I know you have made fome Progrefs in Mufic. Mark well what you can do, as a Proficient this way--You can do that, which without Habit, as much exceeds the wifeft Man, as to walk upon the Waves, or to afcend a Cliff perpendicular. You can even do it with Facility; and (left you fhould think I flatter) not you yourfelf alone, but a thoufand others befide, whofe low Rank and Genius no way raife them above the Multitude. If then you are fo well affured of this Force of Habit in one Inftance, judge not in other Inftances by your own prefent Infufficiency. Be not fhocked at the apparent Greatnefs of the perfect Moral Cbaracter, when you compare it to the Weaknefs and Imperfection of your own. On the contrary, when there dark, art II. dark, thee melancholy Thoughts affail you, immediately turn your Mind to the Confideration of Habit. Remember how eafy its Energies to those, who polfess it; and yet how impracticable to fuch, as pofo fess it not.

Concerning HAPPINESS,

IT muff be owned, faid I , that this is a Satisfaction, and may be forme kind of Affiftance in a melancholy Hour. And yet this very Doctrine naturally leads to another Objection. -Does not the Difficulty of attaining Habit too well fupport a certain Affertion, that, defend Virtue as we roil, 'is but a Scheme of Self-denial?

By Self-denial, said he, you mean, I fuppofe, fomething like what follows Appetite bids me eat ; Reafon bids me for-bear--If I obey Reafon, I deny Appetite; and Appetite being a Part of my elf, to deny it, is a Self-denial. What is true thus in Luxury, is true alpo in other Subjects; is evident in Matters of Lucre, of Power, of Refentment, or whatever elfe we purfue by the Dictate of any Paffion. You Part II. appear, faid $I$, to have ftated the Objection juftly.

To return then to our Inftance, faid he, of Luxury. Appetite bids me eat; Reafon bids me forbear----If I obey Reafon, I deny Appetite----and if I obey Appetite, do I not deny Reafon? Can I act either way, without rejecting one of them? And is not Reafon a Part of myfelf, as notorioully as Appetite?
$\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{R}}$ to take another Example--- I have Depofite in my Hands. Avarice bids me retain----Confcience bids me reftore. Is there not a reciprocal Denial, let me obey which I will? And is not Confcience a Part of me, as truly as Avarice?

Poor Self indeed muft be denied, take which Party we will. But why fhould Virtue be arraigned of thwarting it, more than Vice her contrary?----Make the moft of the Argument, it can come but to Virtue, fo is it to Vice--- If Self-denial be no Objection to Vice, no more can it be to Virtue. A wonderful and important Conclufion indeed!

He continued by faying, that the Soul of Man appeared not as a fingle Faculty, but as compounded of many---- that as thefe Faculties were not always in perfect Peace one with another, fo there were few Actions which we could perform, where they would be all found to concur. What then are we to do? Sufpend till they agree ?--Abfurd, impoffible. ----- Nothing therefore can remain, but to weigh well their feveral Pretenfions; attend to all, that each has to offer in its behalf; and finally to purfue the Dictates of the Wifeft and the Beft. This done, as for the Self-denial, which we force upon the reft; with regard to our own Cbaracter, 'tis a Matter of Honour and Praife----- with regard to the Faculties denied, 'tis a Matter of as fmall Weight, as to contemn the Noife and Clamours of a mad and fenfelefs Mob, in deference to the Part fober Voice of the worthier, better Citizens. And what Man could be juftified, fhould he reject thefe, and prefer a Rabble?
§. 10. In this place he paufed again, and I took occafion to acknowledge, that my Objection appeared obviated. As the Day advanced apace, he advifed that we might return home; and walking along leifurely, thus refumed to himfelf the Difcourfe.

I dare fay, continued he, you have feen many a wife Head thake, in pronouncing that fad Truth, bow wee are governed all by Interest. ----- And what do they think fhould govern us elfe? Our Lofs, our Damage, our Dijintereft ? ------Ridiculous indeed! We fhould be Idiots in fuch care, more than Rational Animals. The only Queftion is, where Intereft truly lies: for if this once be well adjufted, no Maxim can be more harmlefs.

42 Concerning HAPPINESS

irt II. "I find myfelf exifting upen a little " Spot, furrounded every way by an im" menfe unknown Expanfion.-----Where " am I? What fort of Place do I " inhabit? Is it exactly accommodated, " in every Inftance, to my Convenience? " Is there no Excefs of Cold, none of "Heat, to offend me? Am I never an" noyed by Animals, either of my own " kind, or a different? Is every thing " fubfervient to me, as tho' I had ordered " all myfelf? ----- No---nothing like it---" the fartheft from it poffible.-The "World appears not then originally made " for the private Convenience of me alone?--"It does not. - But is it not poffible fo to " accommodate it, by my own particular " Induftry? - If to accommodate Man " and Beaft, Heaven and Earth, if this be " beyond me; 'tis not poffible.-What "Confequence then follows? Or can " there be any other than this----if I feek "an Intereft of nyy own, detacbed from that " of others; I feek an Intereft which is chi- Part II " merical, and can never bave Exiftence?
" How then muft I determine? Have " I no Intereft at all? - If I have not, I " am a Fool for ftaying here. 'Tis a " fmoaky Houfe, and the fooner out of " it, the better. - But why no Interef? " Can I be contented with none, but one " reparate and detached ? - Is a Social "Interest joined with others fuch an "Abfurdity, as not to be admitted? The " Bee, the Beaver, and the Tribes of herd" ing Animals, are enough to convince " me, that the thing is, fome where at " leaft, poffible. How then am I affured, " that 'tis not equally true of Man? --- "Admit it; and what follows?-If fo, " then Honour and Justice are my "Interest-then the whole Train " of Moral Virtues are my Inte"REST; without fome Portion of which, " not even Ibieves can maintain Society.

Part II. "BuT farther fill - I fop not here"I purfue this Social Intereft, as far as I " can trace my feveral Relations. I pafs " from my own Stock, my own Neigh" bourhood, my own Nation, to the whole "Race of Mankind, as difperfed through" out the Earth.-Am I not related to them " all, by the mutual Aids of Commerce; " by the general Intercourfe of Arts and " Letters; by that common Nature, of " which we all participate?--- Again"I muft have Food and Clothing.-----"Without a proper genial Warmth, "I inftantly perifh.---- Am I not rela" ted, in this view, to the very Eartb " itfelf? To the diftant Sun, from " whofe Beams I derive Vigour? To that " ftupendous Courfe and Order of the infi" nite Hof of Heaven, by which the Times " and Seafons ever uniformly pafs on ?---" Were this Order once confounded, I " could not probably furvive a Moment; " So abfolutely do Idepend on tbis common ge" neral Welfare.
" What then have $I$ to do, but to Part I] " enlarge Virtue into Piety? Not " only Honour and Fuffice, and what I " owe to MAN, is my Intereft; but Grati" tude alfo, Acquiefcence, Refignation, Ado" ration, and all I owe to this great Polity, os and its greater Governor, our Com"s mon Parent.
"But if all thefe Moral and Di" vine Habits be my Interest, I " need not furely feek for a better. I " have an Intereft compatible with the "Spot on which I live -----I have an In" tereft which may exift, without altering " the Plan of Providence; without mend" ing, or marring the general Order of * Events--I can bear what ever happens, " with manlike Magnanimity; can be " contented, and fully happy in the Good, " which I poffefs; and can pafs thro' this " turbid, this fickle, fleeting Period, with" out Bewailings, or Envyings, or Mur" murings, or Complaints,"

And

246 Concerning H A P P I N E S S,

art II. And thus, my Friend, have you my Sentiments, as it were abridged ; my Sentiments on that Subject, which engages every one of us. For who would be unhappy? Who would not, if he knew how, enjoy one perpeiual Felicity? Who are there exifting, who do not at every inflant feek it? 'Tis the Wifh, the Employ, not of the Rational Man only, but of the Sot, the Glutton, the very loweft of our Herd. For my own Syftem, whether a juft one, you may now examine, if you think proper. I can only fay on its behalf, if it happen to be erroneous, 'tis a grateful Error, which I cherih and am fond of. And yet if really fuch, I fhall never deem it fo facred, as not willingly, upon Conviction, to refign it up to Truth, Littee pafs'd after this worth relating. We had not far to walk, and we fell into common Topics, Yet one Obfervạtion vation of his I muft not omit. 'Twas Part II what follows. ---- When we are once, faid he, well babituated to this CHIEF, this moral Science, then Logic and Physics become two profitable Adjuncts: Logic, to fecure to us the Poffeffion of our Opinions; that, if an Adverfary attack, we may not bafely give them up: Pbyjics, to explain the Reafon and Oeconomy of Natural Events, that we may know fomething of that Univerfe, where our Dwelling has been appointed us. But let me add a Saying (and may its Remembrance never efcape you) while you find this great, this Mafter-Science wanting, value Logic but as Sopbiftry, and Pbyjics but as Raree-ghew; for both, affure yourfelf, will be found nothing better.

'Twas foon after this that our Walk ended. With it ended a Converfation, which had long engaged us; and which, according to my Promife, I have here endeavoured to tranfcribe.

$E$

Advertifement to the Reader.

THE Author has chofen to Separate all Notes from bis firft and third Theaties, and thus Subjoin them to the End, because those Treaties, being written in Dialogue, from their Nature and Genius admit not of Interruption. One of bis Reafons for adding Notes was, to give Weight to bis Alfertions from the Autbothority of antient Writers. But bis chief and principal Reafon was, to excite (if poffible) the Curiofity of Readers, to examine with Aricter Attention thole valuable Remains of antient Literature. Should be obtain this End, be Jubal think bis Labours (fuck as they are) abundantly rewarded.
( -2
-
4
,

N O T E S

0 N

TREATISE the Firft;

CONCERNING

NOTE I. p. 6. All Arit is Cause.] Artis maxume proprium, creare $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$ gignere. Cic. de Nat. Deor. 1. 2. c. 22. "E5b d! $\tau_{\varepsilon}^{\prime} \chi$ णn tion, that is, in making fometbing to be. Ariftot. Ethic. Nicom. 1. 6. c. 4 .

The active efficient Caufes have been ranged and enumerated after different manners. In the fame Etbics, they are enumerated thus--- $\left.\alpha_{i}^{i}\right\rceil \iota \alpha \gamma \alpha_{\rho}$ $\pi \tilde{\alpha} \nu$ тò $\delta^{\prime} \alpha^{2} v \theta \rho \dot{\omega} \pi т$. The feveral Caufes appear to be Nature, Neceffity, and Chance; and befides theefe, Mind or Intellect, and whatever operates by or thro'.Man. 1. 3. c. 3. The Paraphraft Andronicus in explaining this laft Paffage, $\Pi \tilde{\alpha} \nu$ to $\delta_{i}^{\prime} \alpha^{2} \nu \theta_{\rho} \omega \pi \pi$, adds oĩo $\tau^{\prime} \chi^{\nu} n$, $\hat{n}{ }^{\eta} \alpha^{\prime} \lambda \lambda \eta \tau \iota s \pi \rho \alpha \alpha^{2} \xi \iota$, , as for inftance Art, or any other buman Action.

NOTES on Treatise the Firfo.
Alexander Aphrodisiensis fpeaks of effi-

 Caufes, which are frictly and properly efficient, are Nature, Art, andeach Man's particular Cbaice of Action.

In what manner Art is diftinguifhed from the reft of theie efficient Caufes, the fubfequent Notes will attempt to explain.

Note II. p. 6. Of that Painter famed in Story, Goc.] See Valer. Max. 1. 8. c. in.

Note III. p. 12. Art is Man eecoming a Cause, Intentional and Habitual.] Arifotle, in his Rhetoric, thus accurately enumerates all the poffible manners, either direct or indirect, in which Mankind may be faid to aEt or мíav.

 Фúrw,

All Men do all Things either of themfelves, or not of themfelves. The Things wubich they do not of themfelves, they do either by Chance, or from Neceffity; and the Things done from Necelfity, they do cither by Compulfion, which is External Neceffity, or by Nature, which is Internal. So that all Things wubat foever, which Men do not of themfelves, they do either by Chance, or from Compulfion, or by Nature.
Again, the Things, which they do of themfelves, and of which they are themfelves properly the Caufes, fome tbey do thro' Cufom and acquired Habit, others thro' original and natural Defire. Farther, the Things done tbro'. natural Defire, they do either tbro' fuch Defire affited by Reafon, or thro' Juch Defire devoid of Reafon. If it be affifted by Reafon, then it affumes the Denomination of Will; ----on the contrary, the irrational Defires are Anger and Appetite.

Hence it appears that all Things whatever, which Men do, they neceflarily do thro one of thefe feven Caufes, either tbro' Cbance, Compulfion, Nature, Cu foom, Will, Anger, Appetite. Arif. Rhet. 1. 1. c. 10.

It remains, agreeably to this Enumeration, to confider with which of thefe Caufes we ought to arrange Art.

As to Chance, it may be obferved in general of all Cafual Events, that they always exclude Intention or Defign; But Intention and Defign, are from

NOTES on Treatise the Fired.

Art infeparable. Thus is the Difference between Art and Chance manifest.

As to External Compulsion, we have it an AET of Compulsion, the efficient Principle of which is from without, independent of the Doer. Ethic. Nit. 1. 3. c. r. Again, in the fame Treatife, I. 6. c. 4. we are told of the Works of Art, that they of which is in the Doer or Agent. Thus therefore is Art diftinguifhed from Compulsion.

These two Caufes, Cbance and Compulsion, are mentioned and confidered in the Dialogue, Pages 6 and 7 .

Nature, or rather Natural Necessity, is that Caufe, thro' which we breath, perfpire, digeft, circulate our Blood, ' ${ }^{\circ}$ c. Will, Anger, and Appetite, are (as already observed) but fo many Species of Natural Desire, confidered either as affifted by Reafon, or elfe as devoid of it. Now tho' Natural Define and Natural Neceflity differ, because in the one we act /pontaneoufly, in the other not fpontaneoufly, yet both of them meet in the common Genus of Natural Power. Moreover this is true of all Natural Power, that the Power itself is prior to any Energies or Acts of that Power. 'O, $\gamma \alpha{ }_{\rho} \rho \dot{\varepsilon} x ~ 7 \tilde{\gamma} \pi 0 \lambda-$ $\mu \varepsilon \nu_{0} \frac{\stackrel{1}{\varepsilon} \chi \circ \mu \varepsilon \nu . \text {. For [to instance in the natural Powers }}{}$ of Senfation] it was not from often Seeing, and often bearing, bearing, that we acquired thofe Senfes; but on the contrary, being firft poffefled of them, we then ufed them, not through any Ufe or Exercife did we come to poffess them. Arif. Ethic. 1. 2. c. I.

Now the contrary to this is true in the cafe of any Powers or Faculties not natural, but acquired by Cuflom and UJage. For here there ate many Energies and Acts, which muft neceffarily precede the Exiftence of fuch Power or Habit, it being evident neous Energies, it is that Habits are obtained. So again, in the fame Place, á $\gamma \hat{\alpha}_{\rho} \delta_{\varepsilon \tilde{\varepsilon}} \mu \alpha \theta_{0} v 7 \alpha s$ тoиs $\tilde{\nu}$, we are to do by baving learnt, we learn by doing. Thus by building Men become Builders, and by practijing Mufic they become Muficians.

Thus therefore is Art diftinguifhed from ale Natural Power of Man, whether Natural Neceflity, Will, Anger, or Appetite. But Art has been already diftinguifhed from Chance and Compulsion. So that being clearly not the fame with $f_{2 x}$ of thofe feven Caufes by which all Men do all Things, it muft needs be referred to the feventh, that is, to Custom or Habit.

It muft be obferved, the natural Caufes or Powers in Man, confidered as diftinct from Art, are treated in the Dialogue, Pages 8 and 9.

And now as we have fhewn Art to be a certain Caufe working in Man, it remains to fhew how it is diftinguifhed from thofe other Caufes befide Man, which we fuppofe to operate in the Univerfe. Thefe are either fuch Caufes as are below him, like the Vegetative Power, which operates in Vegetables, the Serfitive in Animals; or elfe fuch Caufes as are above him, " like God, and whatever is elfe of Intelligence more than human.

The Causes below us may be all included in the common Genus of Nature; and of Nature we may fay univerfally, as well of Nature without us as within us, that its feveral Operations, contrary to thofe of Art, are not in the leaft degree derived from Cuflom or Ufage. Thus the Author above cited---- ua' $7 \omega$. None of thofe Things, which are what they are by Nature, can be altered by being accuftomed. Thus a Stome, which by Nature is carried downward, can never be accuftomed to nount uproard, no not tho any one Sould ten thoufand times attempt it by throwing the Stone upward. The fame may be faid of accuftoming Fire to move downward. Ethic. Nicom. 1. 2. c. r. Again, in the Works of Nature, fuch as Trees, Animals, and the like, the efficient Principle is vitally united to the Subjects, wherein it operates.----

 c. 4. But in the TVorks of Art, fuch as Statues or Houfes, the efficient Principle is difunited. from the Subjects, and exifts not in the Things done or made, is indeed poffible that, even in Works of Art, the Subject and effrient Caufe may be united, as in the Cafe of a Phyfician becoming his own Patient, and curing himfelf. But then it mult be remembered dental, and no way ejential to the conflituting of Art, confidered as Art. By this therefore is $\mathrm{ART}_{\mathrm{T}}$ clearly diftinguihed from Nature, whofe Definition informs us that it is --- $\alpha_{p} \rho \chi_{n}^{n}$ ris $x \alpha i$ ain $\alpha_{i}^{\prime} \alpha \tau \tilde{\delta}$ moving and ceafing to move, in fome Subject wherein fuch Principle exifs immediately, efentially, and not by zuay of Accident. Arif. Natur, Aufc. 1. 2. c. I.

The Causes, which are of Rank superiouk to Man, fuch as the Deity, can have nothing to do with. Art, becaufe being (as is faid in the Dialogue, p. II.) perfect and complete, and knowing all from the Beginning, they can nee" admit of what is additional and fecondary. Art therefore can only belong to Beings, like Men, who being imperfect know their Wants, and endeavour to remove them by Helps fecondary and fubfequent. It was from a like Confideration that Pythagoras called himfelf a Philosopher, that is to fay (according to his own Explication of the Name) a Lover and Seeker of what was wife and good, but not a Poffeffor, which he deemed a Character above him. Confonant to this we read in Plain's Banquet, $\theta$ ewiv

NOTES on Treatise the Firft.

 $j \dot{\alpha} \rho, ~ \& c c$. No God philofophizes, or defires to become wife, for He is so already. Nor, if there be any other Being wife, doth he philoopphize for the fame Reafon. On the other hand, neither do the Indocil philofophize; for this is the Misfortune of Indocility, zuithout being virtuous, good or prudent, to appear tó onefelf fufficient in all thefe Refpects. In general therefore, be who thinketh bimfelf in no want, defireth not that, which he thinks bimfelf not to need. Who then, faid Socrates to Diotima, (the Speaker of this Narration) Who are those who philosophize, if they are neither the Wife nor the Indocil? That (replied fhe) may be now confpicuous even to a Child. They are those of middle Rank, between these Extremes. Plat. p. 203. tom. 3. Edit. Serrani.

Here we fee (agreeably to what is faid in the Dialogue, pages 11. and 12.) that as to acquired or fecondary Habits, fome Beings are too excellent. for them, and others too bafe; and that the Deity above all is in the Number of thofe $\operatorname{tran} f$ cendent, and is thus, as a Caufe, diftinguifhed from Art.

There are, befides the Deity and Nature now fpoken of, certain other external Caufes, which are mentioned in the firft Note as diftinct from Art; namely Chance and Neceffity. But of thefe hereafter, when we confider the Subject of Art.

NOTES on Treatise the Fief.

Note IV. p. 13. Faculties, Powers, E ic. are obscure and hidden Things ----Evergees and Operations lie open to the plain what each of the ese things are, as for inftance, what the intelligent Principle, what the Sensitive, we must frt inquire what it is to think, what to See, bear, and use the Senses. For with refpect to us Men, the Energies are prior and more evident than the Powers, because it is in the Energies we are first conversant, and comprehend the Powers from them. Themift. in lib. 2. de Animâ, p. 76. Edit. Ald. Fol.

Note V. p. 15. Are there not Premcerts, Etc.] Vid. Plat. in Min. tom. 2. p. bit, 17. Edit. Serran.

As to thole low Habits here mention'd, from. which we diftinguifh Art by the Number and Dignity of its Precepts, they fall in general under the Denomination of $\mathrm{M} \alpha 7$ व sore $\varepsilon$ via, of which 2 quintilian gives the following Account. Ma7aso7s $\chi$ vic quoque eft quadam, id eft, Jupervacua Attis Imitatio, qua nihil fane nee boni nee mali babeat, fed vanum laborem: qualis illius fuit, qui grana ciceris, ex patio diffante mi $\int a$, in cum continuo © fine fruftratione inferebat: quem, cum fpectafet Alexander, donafe dicitur ejufdem

$$
S_{2} \quad \log 2 i_{-}
$$

NOTES on Treatise the Firfo.

leguminis modio. Quod quidem premium fuit illo opere digniflimum. Inf. Orat. 1. 2. c. 20.

Note VI. p. if. An Habitual Power in Man of becoming the Cause of some Effect, according to a System of variou's and well-approved Precepts----] found and true. Reafon. Ariftot. Ethic. Nic. 1. 6. c. 4.

The Stoic Definition, as we find it in Sext. Empir. adverfus Logicos, p. 392. is, इús nux ér $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$ 多 $\tau \tilde{\omega}$ ß'íw. Thus tranflated by Cicero in Diodemes de Grammat. 1. 2. Ars eft Perceptionum exercitatarum collectio, ad unum exitum vitce utilem pertinentium. And again by શuintilian, Inft. Orat. 1. 2. c. 18. Artem confare ex perceptionibus confentientibus © coexercitatis ad finem utilem vitce. The fame Definition is alfo alluded to in the Academics of Ciccro, 1. 2. c. 7. where it is faid ----- Ars vero qua poteft effe, nife qua non ex una, aut duabus, Jed ex multis animi: perceptionibus confat?

There is a third Definition of Art cited by Quintilian in the fame place, and afcribed by him to Cleanthes---Ars eft poteftas viä (id eft, ordine) efficiens.

Now if we compare thefe Definitions with that in the Dialogue, we fhall find them all to correfpond. The Habitual Power in Man of becoming the Caufe of fome Effect, is the fame as "EL's $\pi$ ountixn in the Peripatetic Definition. According to a Syftem of various and well-approved Precepts, is the fame as $\mu_{\mathrm{E}} 1 \dot{\alpha}$ $\lambda$ ó $\gamma 8 \dot{\alpha} \lambda n \vartheta \hat{y} s$. For found and true Reafon muft needs be the Bafis of all fuch Precepts.

Peripa-

Again, as to the fecond Definition---The Words certain and evident Truths] correfpond to the latter Part of the Definition in the Dialogue ---- According to a Syftem of various and well-approved Precepts. The Habit and Excercife] correfponds to the firf Part, that Art is a Caufs founded in Habit. And the reft has refpect to fome ufeful and ferviceable End or Purpofe in Human Life] fhews the Syftem here mentioned to regard Practice and Action, not Theory and Specu. lation. And thus does it correfpond with the Definition of the Dialogue, where it is faid that Art is an Habitual Power not of merely contemplating and knowing, but of becoming the Caufe of fome Effect. It is not indeed exprefled in the Dialogue, that this Effect has refpect to the Utility of Human Life, becaufe this latter Circumftance is referved to the Definition of the final Caufe of Art, given page 29.

As to the third Definition of Art, poteftas viâ efficiens, a Power operating methodically, it may be obferved, that by being called an operating Power, it is diftinguifhed from Powers purely Speculative; and as it is faid to operate metbodically, or in a Road and regular Proce $/ s$, it is diftinguifhed from Cbance as well as blind Neceffity. And thus far it correfponds with what is offer'd in the Dialogue. But it does not appear from this Definition, whether the Power therein mentioned be Original and Natural, or Secondary and Habitual, because Powers of either fort may operate methodically. And perhaps Cleanthes intended not to diftinguifh fo far, but took Art in that larger and more general Senfe, adopted rometimes by the Stoics; as when they describe Nature an artificial Fire, proceeding methodically to Production or Creation. For it is not to be imagined, they intended by this to infinuate that Nature was a Fire, which had learnt by Habit fo to operate. On the contrary, by artificial it is probable they intended no more than forme active efficient Principle, working with.Reafon, Order, and Method; of which Principle they confider'd Fire to be the properest Vehicle, as being of all Bodies the mort subtle, and that into which the reft are all ultimately refolvable. Vide Dig. Laert. 1. 7. Sect. 156. Cit. de Nat. Dear. 1.2. c. 22.

NOTES on Treatise the Firft.

Note VII, page 22. It should seem that the common or universal Subject of Art was ---- All those contingent Natures; which lie within the reach of Human Powers to influence.]

The Cause here treated is the Material,

Of a Contingent, we have the following Defini-

 Suc̀ Tz̃า' ciouvarov. I call that a Contingent, which not being neceffary, but being fuppofed to be, there will follow nothing impofible from fuch Suppofition. Arift. Anal. prior. 1. 1. c. 13.

That this is true in Works of Art, is evident. It is not neceffary, that a given Fragment of fuch a Rock fhould affume the Figure of Hercules: but there follows nothing impofible, if we fuppofe it fo figured. 'Tis for this reafon, that the Subject of Art is in the Dialogue called a Contingent.

But however, to explain the whole of what is faid in this Place, it is neceffary to go backward, and deduce what we would fay from fome remoter Confiderations.

The Peripatetics held the End or Aim of their Philofophy to be the difcovering and knowing the 'A $\rho \times$ ', the primary and creative Principle of all Things. They purfued this Inquiry, by beginning their Contemplation from thofe things, which are to us firft in the Order of our Comprehenfion, and fo afcending gradually to that which is truly firf, in the real Order of Beings.

The firft and original Objects of our Comprehenfion are thofe nearer and more immediate, viz. the Objects of Senfe, with which we are furrounded on every Side. Thefe Objects we perceive to be all in motion; and the Motions are multiform, zarious, and often oppofite to each other. The Con-

NOTES on Treatise the Firft.

fequences of this we perpetually behold. By fuch Motions we fee that not only the mere local Site of thefe Beings is changed, but their very Bulk, and Figure, and Qualities; nay more than this, even the Beings themfelves are made to feparate and perifh, while new Beings arije from the Re-affemblage of the fcattered Parts, which Parts different Notions can as well concrete, as difunite. The Beings or Objects of the Character here defribed, the Peripatetics denoted un-$\phi \geqslant a_{j} 7 a$, the Eeings moving and corruptible.

From thefe moving and perifable Cbjects, they paffed to thofe fublinier and more tranfcendent Cbjects of Senfe, which they faw adorn the Heavens. Here likewife they difcovercd Notion ; but then this Motion was uniform and conftant; affentirg nat the Beings moved, fave in the relation of loonl Site. As therefore they beheld no Cbange in the Form and Edence of there Beings, they deemed them (wipon their Hypothefis, incorruptible, and out of them eftablifhed another Clafs of Beings, that is to fay, the corruptible.

From thele fublimer Objects of Senfe, they paffed to Objects of pure Intellect; to Bodies devoid of all Motion, and of all Quality, fave that infeparable one of ligure; fuch Bodies for inftance as the Cube, the Sphere, and the reft of Bodies mathematical. From mathematical Bodies, and the Trutbs refulting from them, they paffed to the Contemplation of Trutb in general; to the Soul, and its Powers both of Intuition and Syl-logization; to Being univerfal, and above both Time and Place; and thus at laft to that fupreme Caufe, the great Principle of the whole, which is ever the fame, immutable and eternal. The feveral Objects of this intellectual Comprehenfion they ftiled not merely tible and immoveable.

In this manner did the Peripatetics fpeculate, And hence was it they eftablifhed to themfelves tbree species of Philofophical Employment-----one about Beings motionlefs and eternal; another, about Beings moveable and eternal; and a third, about Beings moveable and peribable. The firt they held the proper Employment of the Metaphyfician; the two laft of the Aftronomer and the Naturalift.

 mobili; altera de eo, quod movetur quidem, fed eft interitus expers; tertia de rebus, interitui obnoxiis. Ariftot. Natural. Aufc. 1. 2. c. 7. $\Delta$ ò xj tef $\tilde{\varepsilon} \tilde{s} \alpha$ in ${ }^{\prime} \varphi \varphi^{\prime} q_{\rho} 7 \alpha$. Themifiii Paraphrafis in loc.

This threefold Subject of Philofophic Inquiry is elegantly explained in the following Paffage.

 dézuvor

 ? $\pi$ : THN AKINHTON KAI AEI $\Omega \Sigma A \Upsilon$ T $\Omega \Sigma$ EXOT $\Sigma A N$ APXHN. A $\mu \mu$ oviz $\varepsilon$ हis ròs wainyogias, p. I2. Edit. Venet. 8vo, 1545.

The Author of the Dialogue has had Reference to this threefold Divifion of Subjects, as may be feen in that Part of his Dialogue, which gives occafion to the prefent Comment. He has chofen however to ftile the $\tau \alpha$ 'Oséáro, or Heavenly Bodies rather Contingents of higber Order than Beings neceffary, as imagining the former to be their truer Character.

It may be here added, that the Peripatetics confined Фúrs or Nature, for the moft part, to this Earth of our's, where they confidered her as the attive Principle of Life in Plants and Animals. Hence therefore they diftinguifhed not her Effects from thofe of Art, "by their Neceffity (for the Effects of both they treated as contingent) but from the Caufe in Natural Subjects operating within, in Artificial without, as has been already oberved, $p .256,257$.

It may be farther added, that they placed thefe Effects of Art and Nature, and indeed all other Contingents whatever, in a middle Rank between Things Neceffary, and Things Impofible. The Reafon was evident. Things Neceflary could not but be; Things Impolible could not be; but Contingents equally fufceptible both of Being and Non-being.

But yet tho' all Contingents admitted on their Hypothefis both of Being and Non-being, yet they fuppofed fome to have a greater Tendency to Exiftence, and others to have a lefs. The firt Species of thefe they ftiled $\tau \alpha$ wis $\dot{\varepsilon} \pi i$ iò $\pi 0 \lambda \dot{\jmath}$ the Things which bappen for the moft part; the laft, $\tau \dot{\alpha} \dot{\varepsilon} \pi^{\circ}$ हो $\lambda \alpha \tau$ Tov, the THings which happen lefs frequently.

Now as it is evident that both Nature and Art oftener obtain their End, than mifs it (for complete Animals are more frequently born than Monfters, and the Mufician, if an Artift, ftrikes oftener the right String than the wrong) hence it was, that they ranged the Effects of Nature and Art among Contingents of greater Frequency. But yet as thefe Effcets were not from the Hypotheris neceffary, and contrary to thefe upon occafion happened, hence it was, that whenever either Nature or Art became Caules of the $\tau \alpha \dot{\varepsilon} \pi^{\prime} \xi \lambda \alpha \tau \tau 0 ;$, thofe rarer Events, in fuch cafe they (Nzture and Art) were confidered Caufes by way of Accident, and not according to their own E/fence and diftinguifhing Character. In fuch Infances it was that they affumed the Name rú $\chi$ n having moftly Reference to Works of Men, dंv7ómaioy to Works of Nature. The Inftances given by Themifitius, in Cafes of Cbance and Fortune, are as follow. A Tile falls from a Houfe. The End of its falling is to arrive at that lower Place, whither Nature would carry it by the common Law of Gravity. In falling it ftrikes and wounds a Paffenger. This laft Event is from Chance. Again, a' Man digs in his Garden, to plant. In digging, he difcovers a hidden Treafure. This laft Event is from Fortune. And thus, adds Themiftius, $\dot{n} \alpha \dot{\alpha} \cup \hat{n}$

 Coufe of one Thing from its own peculiar Character, and of another Thing, by way of Accident. And again,

 Events we may call Nature or Human Will in a manner the Caufe, but yet not fo from themfelves, and according to their own peculiar Efence; for it was not for the fake of what happened that either the Paffenger wernt forth, or the Tile fell downward, but if any thing it was by Accident. Themif. in lib. 2. Natur. Aufcult. p. 26. Edit. Ald. See alfo Arifot. Natur. Aujcult. 1. 2. c. 4, 5, 6.
 [by arcident] means in no Part of there Quotations accidental, as ftanding for cafual; for this would be mere Tautology, as to what is here faid concerning Cbance. It means rather fomething by way of Appendage; fomething Adventitious; in other Words, it means Accident, as adhering to Subftance, without which it can bave no Being, tho' fuppofe it abfent or taken away, the Nature of Subftance is no way affected. It was in this Senfe, the Peripatetics fuppofed Cbance and Fortune to be Accidents or Appendages to Nature, and Mind. According therefore to them, the Suppofition of Chance and Fortune was fo far from excluding Nature and Mind from the Univerfe, that they demonftrably proved their Exiftence in it. For admitting their Account of Cbance and Fortune to be juft; if we grant the Accidents to exift, much more muft we grant the Subjects, and this too with that fuperior Dignity and Priority of Exiftence, which is evidently due to all Subjects above their Accidents. Well therefore did ifence, are Chance and Fortune to Mind and Nature. Arifot. Natur. Aufc. 1. 2. c. 6.

From what has been faid, we fee the Reafon of that Enumeration of Caufes mentioned in the Beginning of the firf Note, where they are defcribed to be Necessity, Nature, Man, and Fortune.

NOTES on Treatise the Firfl.

To Necessity they referred all thofe Things and Events, which they fuppofed of nece.fary Exifence; fuch as the Univerfe, the Heavenly Bodies, and their Motions; Truth, and all Univerfals, together with the 'A $\rho \chi^{n}$, or Principle, or firft Caufe of all Things.

To Nature, Man, and Chance, they referred all Contingents; to Nature and Man, obtaining their End, they referred Contingents of greater Frequency; to the fame Caufes, confidered as operating befide their End, and thus becoming Cbance or Fortune, they referred thofe oppofite Contingents, of Exiftence lefs ufual.

And hence as Art and Fortune were both converfant about the fame Subjects (viz. the Contingent, and not the Necefary) and were both referable to the fame Origin (viz. Man, becoming a Caufe, either defignedly or undefignedly) hence the Meaning of that Yerfe, cited by Arifotle from Agatho;

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { Art loveth Fortune; Fortune loveth Art. } \end{aligned}
$$

As much as if he had faid, that thefe were kindred Powers, which amicably confpired to affift each other ; that Art often helped Fortune, by judicious Conduct; and that Fortune often helped Art, by lucky Incidents. See Arifot. Etbic. Nic. 1. 6. c. 4. More might be cited, but we cannot lengthen a Note, which has proved, 'tis to be feared, too long already.

Note VIII. p. 23. I mean, said he, by Beginning, that Cause for the Sake of which, ©̛c.]

As the Cause here fpoken of, is that Caufe ufually called Final, it may be afked, how it comes in this place to be confidered as a Beginning. The Anfwer is, that what comes laft in Prastice, ftands in Theory firf ; or in other Words, the Order of Ideas in the Intellect of the Artift is exactly $i^{n}$ verted, with refpect to the Order of his Energies.

 $\mathrm{A} \mu \mu$. вis кaтทү. p. 15. Edif. Venet. 8vo.

For in general the End of Theory is the Beginning of Practice; and So reciprocally, the End of Practice, the Beginning of Theory. Thus for inftance: An Arcbitect, being ordered to build a Houfe, fays to bimjelf, I am ordered to build a Houfe; that is to fay, a certain Defence, to protect againgt the Rains and the Heats. But this cannot be without a Roof or Covering. From this Point therefore be begins bis Theory. He proceeds and fays----But there can be no Roof, if there be no Walls; and there can be no Walls, without fome Foundations; nor can there be laid Foundations, without opening the Earth. At this Point, the Theory is at an End. Hence therefore commences the Practice or Action. For firft he opens the Earth; then lays the Foundation; then raifes the Walls; and laftly puts on the Roof, which is the End of the Action or Practice, [but Beginning of the Theory] as the Beginning of the Practice was the End of the Theory. See alfo Arif. Ethic. Nicom. 1.3. c. 3 .

NOTES on Treatise the Firff.

Note IX. p. 24. Was it not the Abfence of Health, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$.] Vide Platon. de Rep. 1. I. tom. 2.

 admodum, inquam, $f i$ a mequareres, an fatis fit Corpori, ut fit Corpus, an aliâ quâpiamr re indigeat: refponderem, omnisò indigere. Atque bấc quidem de Caufâ medicinae ars nume eft inventa, quonian Corpus per fe profigatum eft, neque ipfis fatis eft, ut fit bujufmodi.

Note X. p. 26. Or is it not absurd to suppose there should be an Art of Impossibilities ?] What is here faid concerning the Difference between thofe things for which we may poffibly wifh, and thofe which we actually purfue, is expreffed in the Etbics of Arifotle, 1.3.

 no determined Cboice of Action with refpect to Things impoffible; and if any one Jhould fay be bad fo determined, he would appear to be a Fool. But there may be a Willing or Longing after things impoffible; as for inftance, never to die.

Note XI. p. 27. The Suggestions of Will, and uninstructed Instinct.] Will,

Note XII. p. 29. The Want or Absence of something appearing good; relative to Human Life, and attainable by Man, but superior to his natural and uninstructed Faculties.]

The CAUSE here defcribed is the to | © |
| :---: | evvexa, or final.---- Arifotle in his Pbyjecs, 1.2. c. 3. in enumerating the various forts of Caufes, reckons among the reft ---..-- $\tau \grave{o} \delta^{\prime} \omega_{s}$ to $\tau \underline{\varepsilon}-$ be added that Caufe, which is confidered as the End, and Good of all the reft. For that, for whofe fake all T

NOTES on Treatise the Firf.

the others are decmed neceffary, bas juft Pretenfions to be beft, and to be the End of them all. To this he fubjoins, confonant to what is faid in the Dialogue-- áyatov--- Let it make no Difference whether we call this End, real Good, or only apparent Good. So in the Beginning of his Ethics --- $\Pi \tilde{\alpha} \sigma \alpha \tau^{\prime} \chi \cup \eta$, 久ỳ $\pi \tilde{\alpha} \sigma \alpha \mu \mu^{\prime}-$ Speculation, so likewife every Action, and determined Cboice of Purfuit, appear all of them to tend toward fome Good. Well therefore have they pronounced Good to be that, toward which all things tend.

In the Definition here treated, the Words [rela tive to Human Life] exprefs that Part of the Stoic $\tau \tilde{\omega} E_{i}^{\prime} \omega$.] They were omitted in the Definition, p. 17 • as more properly belonging to the prefent Definition, which refpects Art in its final Caufe. See page 26r.

That what is perfect and Self-תufficient is above the fecondary Helps of Art ; that our own Weakne/s and Infufficiency, and the Profpect of procuring that $a b$ fent Good, by which we all hope to fupply ourfelves, where deficient ; that this is the Source not only of all Arts, but (joined to focial Affection) is the Origin, and Cement of Human Societx; fee (befides the Place here treated) pages II, 12; and of the third Treatife, p. 147 to p. 157.

Thus

Thus the Poet in Stobceus, p. 515.

Need all things taught: What cannot Need invent?
Agreably alfo to this, Virgil, in his firf Georgic, having told us of the various Changes to the worfe, which happened in the natural World immediately fubfequent to the Golden Age, goes on to enumerate the feveral Inventions of Men, which were the natural Refult of this their newly indigent State. He at laft fums up the whole by faying----

Tum varia venere artes: labor omnia vicit
Improbus, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ}$ duris urgens in rebus egestas.
Where (according to the Doctrine in the Dialogue) $W_{A n t}$ is made the Beginning or Origin of Arts. The Poet even refers this Di/penfation, this Introduction of Indigence, Care, and'Solicitude, to the immediate Will of Providence, acting for the Good of Mankind; lef Plenty fhould lull them into floathful Lethargy, fo as to forget their nobleft and moft active Faculties.
------ Pater ipfe colendi
Houd facilem efe viam valuit, primufq; per artem Movit agros, curis acuens mortalia corda, Nec torpere gravi paffus fua regna veferno.

Note XIII. p. 32. Co-existent, Replied he, as in a Statue, EgG. Successive, as in T 2

A Tune or Dance, $\xi^{\circ}$ c.] This Divifion of Beings or Productions we find mentioned by Arifotle in his Pbyfics, (1.3. c. 8.) where explaining his Doctrine concerning Infinite, he fays ----'A $\lambda \lambda$ ' áwespov. In as much as Being is manifold, fuch as is the Being of a Day or public Feftival, (which exift by continually becoming fometbing farther) fuch alfo is the Being and Nature of Infinite. The fame Sentiment foon after is more fully explained and opened.

 !iv revéres rai $\varphi$ Oopã. We are not to conceive of Infinite, as of a pofitive particular Subftance, like a Man or a Houfe; but rather as we pronounce Exifence of a Day or public Feftival, which bave their Effence, not as Senfible, individual Subfances, but by a continued Proccdure of Being and ceafing to be.

Note XIV. p. 32. What is Human Life, but a Compound of Parts thus fleetING, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ}$ C.] It is not inelegantly faid in the Life is a certain Energy, and each Manenergizes about thofe Subjects, and with thofe Faculties, for wbich be bath the greatef Affection; the Mufician, with bis Hearing, Hearing, about Sounds harmonious; the Studious, with bis Intellect, about Matters of Speculation; and in like manner each Man elfe of the various forts befide. Ethic. Nicom. 1. io. c. 4 .

Note XV. p. 34. Every Art will be accomplished and ended in a Work or Energy.] The Cause here treated is the Formal, called by various Names; the $\varepsilon$ ido

In the Beginning of the above-cited Ethics, after the Author has told us that every Art, and Human Action tend to fome Good or End, he adds $\Delta_{r a} \varphi_{o p o} \alpha_{-}$ Difference in Ends: For fome are Energies; fome, over and above thefe Energies, are certain Works. In थuintilian's Infitutes the fame Difinction, with refpect to the End of Arts, is mentioned 1.2. c. 18.

But here perhaps it may be afked, if all Arts are ended and accomplifhed in fome Energy or Work, and this Energy or Work be almoft univerfally that abfent Good, toward which they all tend, and for the fake of which they are all exerted; (for a Dance, which is an Energy, and a Houfe, which is a Work, are certain abfent Goods or Pleafures, for the fake of which certain Arts operate) if this be allowed, it may be anked, whence then the Difference between the Formal Caufe and the Final; the Final, as in Note XII. it has been already treated ?

NOTES on Treatise the Firff.

The Anfwer to this is, that they concur and are
 The Formal Caufe and the Final are one. Arif. Nat. Aufc. 1. 2. c. 7. If they differ, it is (as foannes Grammaticus obferves in commenting on this Place) a Difference rather in the Time and Manner of our viewing them, than in their own E Jence and Nature. It may not perhaps be improper to tranfcribe his own the FORM are numerically the fame, differing (as has been faid) in Relation only, and Time. For thus the fame Thing, while confidered as in its Progrefs to Completion, but as not yet complete, is fo long an End; when confidered as attually complete, is no longer an End, but a Form. And thus is this Queftion one way anfwered, by acknowledging that thefe two Caufes co-incide, and differ not in their EJfnce or real Characier, but rather in the Time and Manner of our contemplating them.

But there is another Anfwer, and that is derived from the twofold Nature of final Caufes. According to this Doctrine, Arts have not only a nearer and more immediate End, (as a Ship is the End of Shipbuilding, or Navigating the End of Pilotry) but they have a fill remoter and bigher End, a $\tau \boldsymbol{\varepsilon} \boldsymbol{\lambda} 0 ; \tau \varepsilon-$ $\lambda_{\text {ırúrcelov, that is to fay, Man, Human-Kind, or }}$ (in other Words) the Utility or Elegance of Human Life. Thus the Stagirite. 'Es $\mu \dot{\varepsilon} \nu \gamma^{\prime} \alpha_{\rho} \pi \omega s$ кai selves alfo are in fome fort an End; for the final Caufe is twofold. Natur. Aufcult. 1. 2. c. 2. If therefore we have refpect to this ultimate End, thefe two Caufes will be found to differ, and be really diftinct from each other.

And thus it is that in fome refpects they agree, and in others they differ, according to the above Diftinctions eftablifhed by this Philofophy.

Note XVI. p. 38. O Art! Thou Praise of Man, छ${ }^{\circ}$.] Euftratius, in the Beginning of his Comment on the Etbics of Arifotle, has the following elegant Encomium on Arts. $\Delta \varepsilon \imath ̃ ~ \gamma \alpha{ }_{\alpha} \mu \dot{n} \alpha^{\alpha} \chi \rho \eta-$

 wрoेs $\tau \propto \alpha^{\tau} \tau \varepsilon \lambda \varepsilon \omega \dot{\omega} \tau \varepsilon \rho \alpha_{0}$

NOTES on Treatise the Firff.

Note XVII. p. 44. The Efficient, the Material, the Final, and the Formal.]
 Eîios.

Thus Seneca in his 65th Epifle. Caufam AriFoteles putat tribus modis dici. Prima, inquit, caufa eft ipfa Materia, fine qua nibil poteft effici. Secunda, Opifex. Tertia, Forma qua unicuique operi imponitur, tanquam fatux; ; nam banc Arifoteles Idos (sidos) vocat. 2uarta quoque, inquit, bis accedit, Propofitum totius operis.

Quid fit hoc, aperiam. Es prima flatuce caufa eft: nunquam enim faita eflet, nifi fuiffet id, ex quo ea funderetur, ducereturve. Secunda caufa, Artifex eft: won potuifjet enim as illud in babitum fature figurari, nifi accefifent perita manus. Tertia caufa eft Forma: neque enim flatua ifta Doryphoros aut Diadumenos vocaretur, nifi hac illi effet impreffa facies. Quarta caufa eft, faciendi Propofitum: nam nifı boc fuifet, facta non effet. Quid eft Propofitum? 2uod invitavit artificem, quod ille fecutus fecit. Vel pecunia eft hoc, fi venditurus fabricavit; vel gloria, fi laboravit in nomen; vel religio, $\mathfrak{j}$ donum templo paravit. Ergo छ hact Caufa eft, propter quam fit. An non putas inter caufas facti operis numerandum, quo remoto factum non effet? ------

Aristote's own Words are as follow.

Tò घido

In one manner that may be called a Caufe, out of which, exifting as a Part of it, any thing is made or compounded. Thus is Brafs the Caufe of a Statue, Silver of a Cup, and fo alfo the bigher Genera, in which thefe are included [as Metal, the Genus including Brafs and Silver; Body, the Genus including Metal, $\mho^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$. $\mathrm{O}^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.] In another way, the Form and Exemplar of any thing is its Caufe; that is to Say, in other Words, the Definition or Rationale of its EJence [that which, characterizing it to be fuch a particular thing, diftinguifhes it from all things elfe] and of this $R a-$ tionale the feveral higber Genera. Thus the Caufe of the Diapafon or Octave is the Proportion of two to one; and more generally than that, is Number; and is moreover the feveral Parts, out of which this Definition is formed. Add to this Caufe, that other, from whence the original Principle of Cbange, or of Ceafing to change; as for inflance, the Perfon who deliberates is the Caufe of that, which refults from fuch Deliberation; the Father is the Caufe of the Son; and in general the Efficient, of the thing effected; the Power changing, of the thing changed. Befides thefe Caufes, there there is that alfo, which is conjidered as the End; that is to fay, the Caufe, for the fake of which the thing is done. Thus the Caufe of Exercifing is Health. For if it be afked, Why does be ufe Exercije? We fay, To preferve his Health; and having faid thus much, we think we have given the proper Caufe. Ariftot. Natur. Aufçult. 1. 2. c. 3.

NOTES on Treatise the Firft.

Addition to NOTE III.

The Peripatetic Definition of Nature, given p. 257. tho' in fome degree illuftrated p. 266. yet being flill from its Brevity perhaps obfcure, the following Explication of it is fubjoined.

In the firft place, by Nature the Peripatetics meant that Vital Principle in Plants, Brutes and Men, by which they are faid to live, and to be difinguifhed from things inanimate. Nature therefore being another Name for Life or a vital Principle, the firf Act of this Principle, throughout all Subjects, is univerfally found to be of the following kind; namely, to adrance the Subject, which it enlivens, from a Seed or Embryo to Jomething better and more perfect. This Progreffon, as well in Plants as in Animals, is called Growth. And thus is it that Nature is a Principle of Motion.-------But then this Progreffion or Growth is not infinite. When the Subject is mature, that is, hath obtained its Completion and perfect Form, then the Progrefion ceafes. Here therefore the Bufinefs of the vital Principle becomes different. It is from henceforward no longer employed to acquire a Form, but to preferve to its Subject a Form already acquired. And thus is it that Nature is a Principle of Reft, Stability, or Ceafing to move. And fuch indeed the continues to be, maintaining, as long as pofible, the Form committed to her Care, till Time and external Caufes in the firt place impair it, and induce at length its Difolution, which is Death.

N OTES on Treatise the Firft.

And thus has it been fhewn how Nature may be called a Principle both of Motion and Ceasing to move.

As to the reft of the Definition, namely that Nature is a Principle, which inheres in its Subject immediately, effentially, and not by way of Accident; no more is meant by this, than that the Nature or Life in every Being, which hath fuch Principle, is really and truly a Part of that Being, and not detached and feparate from it, like the Pilot from the Ship, the Mufician from the Infrument. For to thefe Subjects are thofe Artifts the Principles of Motion and Reft, yet do they in no Senfe participate with them of vital Sympathy and Union.

END of the NOTES on Treatise the Firfe.

N O T E S

ON

TREATISE the Third;

CONCERNING

H A P P I NES S.

NOTE I. p. 107. Nature seems to treat Man, $\sigma^{\circ}$ c.] Ut Phidias poteft a primo infituere fignum, idque perficere; poteft ab alio inchoatum accipere $\mathfrak{E}$ abfolvere: buic eft fapientia fimilis. Non enim ipfa genuit hominem, fed accepit a natura inchoatum: banc ergo intuens, debet infitutum illud, quafi fignum, abfolvere. Cic. de Fin. IV. 13. p. 304. Edit. Davif.

Note II. p. il3. Practice too ofteif CReeps, छ'c.] See p. 136. and Note X.

Note III. p. ily. The Sovereign Good is that, the Possession of which renders evodaipoves. By the Pofeffion of Things GOOD, are tom 2. Edit, Serrani. See Arrian. Epict. 1. 3. c. 22. p. 453 .

The Reader will be pleafed to obferve, that, in all Quotations from the Differtations of Epiczetus collected by Arrian, the Author refers to the late Edition in two Volumes 2uarto, publifhed by his learned and ingenious Friend, Mr. Upton.

Note IV. p. ifs. Certain original Characteristics and Pre-conceptions, $\mathfrak{O}^{\circ}$.] The Pre-conceptions here fpoken. of, are called by the Latins, Pranotiones, or Anticipationes; by the Greeks, шpo $\lambda$ n' $\psi \varepsilon!s$, or "Evvo: $\alpha$, , with the occafional Epithets of either xovvai, ${ }^{\prime} \mu, \varphi \cup \mathcal{O} 0$, or $\varphi$ urirai.
${ }^{2}$ Tis evident that all Men, without the leaft Help of Art, exert a kind of Natural Logic; can in fome degree refute, and prove, and render a Reafon.

Now this cannot be (as the meaneft Proficient in Logic well knows) without general Ideas, and general Propofitions, becaufe a Syllogifm of Particulars is an Impoffibility. There muft be therefore fome natural Faculty, to provide us thefe Generals. This Faculty cannot be any of the Senfes, for they all refpect Particulars only. Nor can it be the reafoning or fyllogizing Faculty, for this does not form fuch Generals, but ufe them when formed. There only therefore remains the Farulty called $\mathrm{N} \tilde{\varepsilon} \varsigma$, that is to fay, the Inductive Faculty; the Faculty, which by Induction of fimilar Individuals, forms out of the particular and the many what is general and one. This Species of Apprehension is evidently our fir lt and earlieft Knowledge, because all Knowledge by Reasoning dates its Origin from it, and because, exsept these two, no other Knowledge is poffible.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

As therefore every Ear, not abfolutely depraved, is able to make forme general Diftinctions of Sound; and in like manner every Eye, with refpect to Objects of Vifion; and as this general Ufe of there Faculties, by being diffused through all Individuals, may be called common Hearing, and common Vifion, as oppoled to thole more accurate Energies, peculiar only to Artifs: fo fares it with refpect to the Intellect. There are Truths, or Univerfals of fo obvious a kind, that every Mind, or Intellect not absolutely deproved, without the least Help of Art, can hardly fail to recognize them. The Recognition of there, or at leaft the Ability to recognize them, is called Kovìs Nüs, Common Sense, as being a Senfe common to all, except Lunatics and Idiots.

Farther, as this Power is called Kobo's Nos, fo the feveral Propositions, which are its proper Objects, are called upon' $\psi \varepsilon!$, or Preconceptions, as being previous to all other Conceptions. It is eafy to gather from what has been faid, that there apo$\lambda n ́ \psi \varepsilon เ s$ mut be general, as being formed by Induction; as alfo natural, by being common to all Men, and previous to all Inftruction. Hence therefore their rato $\lambda$ y. "A Preconception is the natural Apprebenfion of what is general, or univerfal." Dig. Laert.

Laert. l. 7. ©. 54 See alfo Arrian. Epict. 1. 1. c. 22. 1. 3. c. 6. Cic. de Naturâ Deor. 1. I. c. 16, 17. Plut. de Placit. Philofoph. 910. c.

Note V. p. ilf.----And that the Difference lay only in the applying them to Particulars.] This was called 'Eрap $\mu$ oyǹ Epict. 1. 1. c. 22. p. 114, 116. Edit. Upt. See an eminent Inftance, illuftrating the Truth of this Reafoning, in the fame Author, l. 4. c. I. p. $545 \cdot$

Note VI. p. 120. Why are there, who fuerunt, qui eam, quam dico, tranquilitatem expetentes, a negotiis publicis se removerint, ad otiumque perfugerint. ----- His idem propofitum fuit, quod regibus; ut ne quâ re egerent, ne cui parerent, libertate uterentur: cujus proprium eft fic vivere, ut velis. 2uare cum boc commune fit potentice cupidorum cum iis, quos dixi, otiofis: alteri fe adipific id polfe arbitrantur, fi opes magnas habeant; alteri fi contenti fint छo fuo, छo parvo. Cic. de Offic. 1. I. c. 20, 21.

Note VII. p. i2i.---The Sovereign Good, they have taught us, ought to be, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} \mathrm{C}$.] The original Pre-conceptions of the Sovereign Good here recited, may be juftified by the following Authorities, from among many which are omitted.

Agreeable to Nature.------ Neque ulla alia in re, nifi in Natura, quarendum effe illud Summum bonum, quo omnia referrentur. Cic. Acad. 1. I. c. 5. p. 27. Edit. Davif.

Conducive to well-being.---Epictetus calls that Truth or Knowledge, which refpects our real Hap-or Knowledge, which regards not mere Living, but Epict. 1. r. c. 4. p. 28. Edit. Upt. 'As кovvei $\pi \varepsilon \rho$ ' common Pre-conceptions concerning Happiness call it the Living according to Nature; farther than this, they fay it is Living or Exifing well, THE Life of well-being. Alex. Aphrod. $\pi \varepsilon p i \not \psi u$. p. 157. Edit. Ald.

Accommodate to all Places and Times-Antoninus, fpeaking of that Happine/s, which he deemed our Sovereign Good, calls it fomething which was in our Power MANTAXOT \&j $\triangle$ IHNEK $\Omega \Sigma$, every where and perpetually. 1.7. f. 54 .

Durable --- and Indeprivable. -- Nifistabili © fixo $\mathfrak{G}$ permanente bono, beatus effe nemo potef. Tufc. Difp. 1.5. c. 14. p. 372. Edit. Davif.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.
Davif. So immediately after, in the fame page--An dubium eft, quin nibil fit babendum in eo genere, quo vita beata completur, fi id poffit amitti? nibil enim interarefcere, nibil exfingui, &c. Kai tís ITON. And what fort of Happinefs is this, which any thing intervening may embarrafs; I fay not Cæfar, or Cæfar's Friend, but a Crow, a Piper, a Fever, a deep thoufand things befide? Happiness furely implies file nothing fo much, as Perpetuity and being superior to Hindrance or Impediment. Arrian. Epict. 1. 4. c. 4. p. 585. Edit. Upt. See alfo, l. 2. c. II. p. 227.

ir the
Self-derived.---Atque hoc dabitis, ut opinor, $\sqrt{2}$ esfor modo fit aliquid effe beatum, id oportere тотим poni in potestate Sapientis: nam, fi amitti vita beata poteft, beata effe non poteft. Cic. de Fin. 1. 2.

$\qquad$

 Gods have put the whole in his own Power. $M$.

 what is it, that every Man living feeks? To be fecurely i). fixed, to be happy, TO DO All things Accord--wi. to be compelled. Arr. Epict. 1. 4. c. I. p. 539, 540, wre have feen mod 2

Note operth uगed. f/arrie armatale it asifay

NOTES ON TREATISE the Third. Lom-lad inane tail plea 2 curative

Note VIII. p. 125. The Political and Lucrative, the Contemplative and Pleasurable.] This fourfold Distinction of Lives is mentioned in Arifotle's Ethics, 1. I. c. $5^{\circ}$

Note IX. p. i zr. $\qquad$ -Pleasure
Whom Love attends, sic. alluding to Homer, Iliad. ヨ. V. 214.

Note X. p. is. Suppose an Event were to happen---not an Inundation, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$.] See Arrian.Epict. 1. 4. c. 4. which Chapter is peculiarly addreffed to the Seekers of Leijure, Retirement, and Study. Part of it has been already quoted p. 290. is cis alvin $\dot{n}$ 色ppora, $\sigma^{\circ} c$. See alpo the fame Author, 1. 4. c. I. p. 567 . Пथ̃s $\alpha \times x$ 'sss, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$. and of the Dialogue here commented, $\mathrm{p} . \mathrm{II}_{3}$.

Note XI. p. i $37 .---$-Is Acting a Circumstance, $\mathcal{E}_{6}$.] Etenim cognitio contemplatioque naturco mana quodammodo atque inchoata $f i$ t, $\sqrt{ }$ s sulla actio rerum confequatur. Ea autem actio in bominum commodis tuendis maxime cernitur. Cic. de Office. l. r. c.43. The whole Chapter, as well as the Subsequent, is well worthy of Perufal.

Note XII. p. I40.---If a Piece of Metal be

Note XIII. p. i44.---Are alienated from it, or are indifferent to it?] Placet bis, inquit, quorum ratio mini probatur, fimul atque notum fit find EM K óictikos.n. animal animal (binc enim eft ordiendum) ipfum fbi conciliari, छ* commendari ad Se confervandum, no fuum fatum, no ad ea, qua confervantia funt jus fatûs, diligenda; alienari autem ab interitu, iifque rebus, qua interitum videantur afferre. Cis. de Fin. 1. 3. c. 5. p. 211. Edit. Dav. See alpo l. 5. c.9. De Office. 1. 1. c. 4. 'Oıxєıs $\mu=\theta$ os

Note XIV. p. 155. Let it not be forgot then, said he, in favour of Society, Etc.] The whole Argument to prove Society natural to Man, from $p$. 147 to the page here cited, is taken from the fecond Book of Plato's Republic. See Plat. tom. 2. p. 36 g , Etc. Edit. Serrani.

Note XV. p. 156. ---Are not the Powers and Capacities of Speech, Etc.] The Argumont in favour of Society, from our being poffeffed of $\lambda$ óz(s), or the Speaking Faculty, feems to have been much infifted on by the beft Authors of Antiquity.

N OTES on Treatise the Third.

 xai wódiv. The Reafou why Man is a Social AniMAL, more than any Bee, or any berding Species whatever, is evident from bence. Nature, we fay, makes nothing in vain; and Man, of all Animals, is only poofeffed of Speech. Bare Sound indeed may be the Sign of what is pleafurable or painful; and for that reafon is it common even to otber Animals alfo. For fo far we perceive even their Nature can go, that they bave a Senfe of thore Feelngss, and fignify them to each other. But Speech is made to indicate what is expedient, and what burtful, and in confequence of this, what is juff and unjuff. It is therefore given to Men, becaule this, with refpect to other Animals, is to Men alone peculiar, that of Good and Evil, Fuft and Unjuft, they only pofless a Senfe or Feeling. Now' 'tis the Participation or Community of thefe, which makes and confitutes both a Family, and a Polity. Arifot. Polit. 1. ı. c. 2.

 Ideas are Images of Things in the Soul; and Sounds are declarative of thefe Ideas. And for this reafon aopech were theefe Sounds imparted to us by Nature, not only that we might indicate to each other theefe Ideas, but that we might be enabled to communicate and live in Associations. For Man is by Nature a Social Animal. Ammon. in l. de Interpr. p. 16.b.

294 NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Thus Cicero, fpeaking of Human Nature---Omitto opportunitates babilitatefque reliqui corporis, moderationem vocis, orationis vim, quace conciliatrix eft humana maxume focietatis. De Legg. 1. I, c. g. p. 35. Edit. Davif:

Again in his Offices---- Sed qua natura principia. fint communitatis ${ }^{\circ}$ focietatis bumana, repetendum altius videtur. Eft enim primum, quod cernitur in univerf generis bumani focietate. Ejus enim vinculum ef Ratio, छ Oratio; quac docendo, difcendo, communicando, difceptando, dijudicando, conciliat inter fe? homines, conjungitque naturali quadam focietate De Offic. 1. r. c. 16.

Thus too in his Treatife De Nat. Deor. ---- Fam vero domina rerum (ut vos foletis dicere) Eloquendi vis quam eft praclara, quamque divina? Qua primum efficit, ut ea, quce ignoramus, difcere, छo ea, qua fcimus, alios docere polfimus. Deinde bac cobortamur, bac perfuademus, bac confolamur affictos, hac deducimus perterritos a timore, bac gefientes comprimimus, hac cupiditates iracundiafque refinguimus: hac nos juris, legum, urbium focietate devinxit: bac a vitâ immani छ ferâ fegregavit. De Nat. Deor. 1. 2. c. 59. p. 243. Edit. Davif. --- See alfo 2uint. Inf. 1. 2. c. 16. and Alex. Apbrod. $\pi \varepsilon \rho$ i \&ux. p. 155 : b. Edit. Ald.

Note XVI. p. 166. 'Tis from among the FEW, G\%c.] In omni enim arte, vel fudio, vel quavis fientia, vel in ipfa virtute, optumum quodque rarifjmum ef. Cic. de Fin. 1. 2. c. 25. p. 158. Edit.Dav.

Note XVII. p. 167.----Working eyer uniformly according to this Idea of Perfection, E'c.] $\left.^{\circ}\right]$

Thus Boethius, addrefling the Deity,
O qui perpetua mundum ratione gubernas, Terrarum coelique Sator, qui tempus ab avo
Ire jubes, fabilifque manens das cuncta moveri;

2uem non externa pepulerunt fingere caufa
Materia fuitantis opus; verum insit a Summi
Forma boni, livore carens: Tu cuncta superno Ducis ab exemplo, pulchrum pulcherrimus ipfe Mundum mente gerens, fimilique in imagine formans. Confol. Philof. 1. 3. Metr. 9.

Note XVIII. p. 167.----From some hidden

 Joannes Gram. in Ariftot. lib. 2. Natural Aufcult. Nibil enim fieri fine caufâ poteft: nec quicquam fit, quod fieri non poteft: nec, fid factum eft quod potuit fieri, portentum debet videri. Cic. de Divin. 1. 2. c. 28. p. 18g. Edit. Davif.

296 NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Note XIX. p. 16g. Man is a social Defcriptions of Humanity, which we meet in every Page of Epictetus and Antoninus.

It feems indeed to have been a received Opinion of old, that fo intimate was the Relation between thefe two Atiributes, that wherever there was Rationality, Sociality followed of courfe. Thus Anto-
 f. 2. And again, more fully --- xj̀ toívve $\pi \tilde{\alpha} \nu ~ \tau o ̀$

It is not perhaps foreign to the prefent Subject to obferve, that were the Eyes of any two Men whatever to view the fame Object, they would each, from their different Place, and their different Organization, behold it differently, and have a different Image. But were all the Minds in the Univerfe to recognize the fame Truth, they would all recognize it as one, their Recognition would be uniform, and themfelves in a nanner would be one alfo. The Reafon is, Perception by the Senfes admits of more and lefs, better and worfe ; but Perception by the Intellect, like Truth, its Object, admits of no degrees, and is either nothing at all, or elfe total, uniform, complete, and one. Hence therefore one Source of the Society, and as it were Communion of all Minds, confidered as Minds, namely, the Unity of Truth, their common Object.

Again, every juft and perfect Society ftands on the Bafis of certain Laws. But Law is nothing more, than right and perfect Reason, feen in bidding and forbidding, according to the Nature and Effence of thofe Beings, to which it is a Law. If therefore this Universe be one whole, or general Society, there muft be fome common, general Law for its Conduct and Welfare; and this Law muft, of confequence, be fome right and perfect Reason, which paffes thro' all things, and extends to every Part. Well therefore might Antoninus fay in the Beginning of this Note, that every thing rational, was of courfe focial, fince Reason and Law appear to be the Jame, and Law to be the Support and Bafis of all Society. Thus too Cicero----- equitur, ut eadem fit in bis [fc. Diis] quae bumamo generi Ratio; eadem Veritas utrobique fit; eademque Lex, qua eft reeti praceptio, pravique depulfio. De Nat. Deor. 1. 2. c. 31. p, 180. See alfo the fame Author De Legg. 1. 1. c. $8,12,15$. p. 29, 41, 51. Edit. Davif. De Fin. 1. 2. c. 14. p. 123. See alfo Diog. Laert. 1. 7. f. 88. M. Anton. 1.5. c. 16. 1.6. c. 23, Arif. Polit. as quoted in Note XV.

Note XX. p. 169. Nothing can be pursuable, which is destructive of Society.] Si enim fic erimus affecti, ut propter fuum quifque emolumentum fpoliet, aut violet alterum, difrumpi neceffe eft eam, quce maxime eft fecundum naturam, bumani generis Societatem. Cic. de Offic. 1. 3. c. 5 .

Note ever recognized through the same Ha-घvovilicu, 衣 dंviǹ sivar. There feems to be one and the fame Error, and one and the fame Science, with refpect to things contrary. Arift. de Anim. 1. 3. c. 3. This by Themiftius, in his Paraphrafe, is thus illuftrated.

 contrary there is one Science, and one Ignorance. For thus be, who knows Good to be fomething beneficial, knows Evil at the fame time to be formething pernicious; and he, who is deceived with refpoct to one of thefe, is deceived alfo with refpect to the other.

Note XXII. p. 174.----Those four Grand Virtues, Ec.] Stobous having told us, that of the Virtues fome were primary, fome fubordinate, adds tues are fout; Prudence, Temperance, Fortitude, and Justice: Prudence is employed in moral Offices; Temperance, in Mens natuial Appetites and Purfuits; Fortitude, in Endurings; and Fuffice, in Liffributicus. Ecl. Ethic. p. 167.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

That the Life according to Virtue, was deemed the Life according to Nature, appears from what is faid by the fame Author, in the Page following-- thefe Virtues is, to live agreeably to Nature; and each of them, by thofe Means, which are peculiar to itfelf, is found to put a Man in pofeffion of this End.

So likewife Cicero------- Etenim quod fummum bonum a Stoicis dicitur, convenienter nature vivere, id babet banc, ut opinor, fententiam, cum virtute congruere femper. De Offic. 1. 3. c. 3.

Note XXIII. p. ify. That Life, where the Value of all Things is justly measured, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ}$. ] See pages 143, 146, 168, 203, 204.

Note XXIV. p. i75.---That, which being done, admits of a ratinoal Justifica-Mathem. 1. 7. Thus rendered by Cicero--- Officium id effe dicunt, quod cur factum fit, ratio probabilis reddi poffit. De Offic. 1. I. c. 3. The Reafon of its Greek Name, $\kappa \alpha \theta \tilde{n} \alpha o v$, is given by Simplicius. K $\alpha-$ 入.007 (a.--- Moral Offices are thofe things which are done agreeably agreeably to what is fitting, and expedient. Simplic. in Ench. c. $37 \cdot$

Note XXV. p. if6.----And when our several Energies, exerted according to the Virtues above, have put us in possession of, छ'c.] This was the Idea of Happiness, adopted by the old Academy, or Platonics. Secundum naturam vivere, fic affectum, ut optimè affici paffit, ad naturamque accommodatifime. Cic. de Fin. 1. 5. c. 9. p. 370. The Peripatetics, who were originally of the fame School, held the fame. 'Es

 If this be admitted, it follows that Human Good or Happiness is, the energizing of the Soul according to the beft and moft confummate Virtue, in a perfect and complete Life. Ethic. Nic. 1. I. c. 7. A perfect and complete Life, they explained to be fuch a Life as was no way deficient either as to its Duration, its bodily Health, and its being attended with a proper Competence of external Goods, and Profperity. By the beft and moft confummate Virtue, they not only meant that Virtue, which was in its kind moft perfect, but which was the Virtue alfo of that Part, which is in each of us mof excellent. For there are Virtues of the Body, fuch as Strength and Agility; and there are Virtues of the Senfes, fuch as-accurate Seeing, accurate Tafting; and the fame of every Faculty, from the loweft to that which is fupreme.

> The fovereign Good or Happinefs here fpoken of, is again repeated, in other Words, $p$. 179. where it is called, the Attaining the primary and juft Requifites of our Nature, by a Conduct fuitable to Virtue and moral Office.

The primary and just Requisites here mentioned, are all Things requifite to the Ufe and Enjoyment of our Primary and Natural Perfections. Thefe Primary and Natural Perfections mean the Natural Accomplishments of both our Mind and Body. They were called by the Latins, Prima Natura, Prima Secundum Naturam; by the Greeks, $\tau \grave{\alpha}$ шр $\omega \tilde{\tau} \alpha$ « $\kappa 7$ な cluded Health, Strength, Agility, Beauty, perfect Senfations, Memory, Docility, Invention, $\xi^{\circ} \%$. See Stob. Ecl. Etb. p. 163. Cic. de Fin. 1. 5. c. 7. p. 364. A. Gell. 1. 12. c. 5 .

A like Sentiment of Happinefs, to this here fpoken of, is that mentioned by Cicero---- Virtute adhibitâ, frui primis a naturâ datis. De Fin. 1.2. c. II. p. II3. 'Tis there called the Opinion of the old Academics, and Peripatetics. It is again repeated by the fame Author. Honefe vivere, fruentem rebus iis, quas primas homini natura conciliet. Acad. 1. 2. c. 42 . p. 240 .

In is to be obferved that Cicero, fpeaking of this Hypothefis, fays that it propofed an Idea of Happinefs, which was not properly in our ozun Power. Hos non eft pofitum in noftrâ actione: completur enim छ' ex eo genere vita, quod virtute finitur, छ' ex iis rebus que fecundum naturam funt, neque funt in noftra potefate. De Fin. 1.4. c. 6. p. 287\%

Hence

Hence therefore the Deficiency of this Doctrine. However juftifiable, however laudable its End, it could not infure a due Succefs to its Endeavours. And hence too the Force of what is objected to it in the Dialogue, from $p$. 177. to the End of the firf Part.

Note XXVI. p. 185.---To place the Sovereign Good in Rectitude of Conduct, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$ c.] As the Conduct here mentioned implies a Conduct under the Direction of a befitting Rule or Law, and that, as oppofed to wrong Conduct, which has either no Rule at all, or at leaft one erroneous; it may not be an improper Place to inquire, what was the antient Opinion concerning Law universal, that great and general Law, which ftood oppofed to the municipal Laws of particular Cities, and Communities.

Est quide Lex, recta ratio, nature coñ gruens, diffula in umnes, conftans, Sempiterna, qua vocet ad officium jubendo, vetando a fraude deterreat ----- nec crit alia lex Roma, alia Athenis, alia nunc, alia poftbac; Jed छo omnes gentes, छo omni tempore una lex, छ゚ fempiterna, छo immortalis continebit ; unufque erit communis quafi magifer, Eo imperator omnium Deus. Ille bujus legis inventor, difceptator, lator. Cui qui non parebit, ipje fe fugiet, ac naturam bominis a/pernabitur; boc ipfo luet maximas poenas, etiamfi catera fupplicid, quce putantur, effugerit. Fragm. Cic. de Rep. 1. 3.

Lex eft ratio fumma, infita in natura, qua jubet ea quae facienda funt, probibetque contraria. What follows is worth remarking. Eadem ratio, cum efs in hominis mente confirmata ${ }^{\circ}$ confecta, lex eft. Cic. de Legg. 1. I. c. 6. p. 22.

Again. Lex vera--- ratio ef recta fummi Govis. To which he fubjoins, as above, Ergo ut illa divina mens fumma lex eft; ita cum in bomine eff, perfecta eft in mente fapientis. De Legg. 1. 2. c. 4, 5. p. 88.
'Tis in this Senfe the Apofte tells us of the Gentiles, or Mankind in general, that they Jow the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, their Confcience alfo bearing witnefs, and their Thoughts the mean while accufing, or elfe excufing one another. Rom. i. II.

As Cicero, in his Book of Laws above cited, follows the Stoic Difcipline, fo is it agreeable to their Reafoning, that he make the original r Law, of which we here treat, to be the So ... gn Reason of the Deity bimfelf. Thus Cbry íppus--Idem [fcil. Chryjippus] legis perpetuce ©o aternae vim, quae quafi dux vite E magiftra officiorum $\overline{\text { It }}$, Jovem dicit effe. Nat. Deor. 1. I. c. 15. p. 41.

So by the fame Philofophers in Laertius, we are ordered to live according to Nature, $\dot{\delta} \delta \varepsilon \nu \quad \hat{\varepsilon} v ร \rho \gamma \tilde{y} \nu-$

 Sioxn'rews p̈v7, doing nothing, forbidden by the UNIversal Law, that is to fay, by that right Reaforit; which paffeth thro' all Things, and which is the SAME in Jove bimfelf, the Governor. and Conductor of this wniverfal Adminiftration. Laert. 1. 7. f. 88.

Agreeably to this Reafoning, Plutarch corrects thofe, who made $\Delta i x n$, a Goddefs, and the ADefor Right for bis Afefor, but is bimfelf Right, and Justice, and of all Laws the mof antient and perfect. Moral. p. 781. B.

 $\lambda_{0}{ }^{2} \omega$ 火ai: $\theta_{\varepsilon} \sigma \mu \tilde{\omega}$. The End of Rational Animals is to follow the Reason and sacred Law of that City and moft antient Polity, [in which all rational Beings are included.] 1. 2. f. I6.

The moft fimple Account of this Law, which the Stoics gave, feems to be that recorded by Stobaus; according to which they called it $\lambda 0^{\prime}$ yov, o $\rho \rho O_{0}^{\prime} v{ }^{\prime} \nu \nu 7 \alpha$, wonntén, Right Reason, ordaining what is to be done, and forbidding what is not to be done. Ecl. Ethic. 178. See alfo the Notes of Turnebus and Davis upon Cic. de Legg. 1. I. c. 6.

Having premifed thus much concerning Law univerfal, it remains to fay fomething of that Rectitude of Conduct, which is in this Part of the

Dialogue

Dialogue propofed as our Happines．Rectitude． of Conduc＇t is intended to exprefs the Term Kalóg⿴囗⿰丿㇄
 Fin．1．3．c．14．p．242．Now the Definition of a K $\alpha$ Tóg $\theta \omega \mu \alpha$ ，was Nó Ny wós $\alpha \gamma \mu \alpha$ ，a Thing com－ manded by Law ；to which was oppofed $\left.\alpha_{1} \mu \alpha \alpha_{p}\right\rceil \eta \mu$ ， a Sin or Offence，which was defined Nó $\mu$ у $\dot{\alpha} \pi \alpha-$ rógsu $\mu$ ，a Thing forbidden by Lazv．Plut．Mor： 1037 C．What Law is here meant，which thus commands or forbids，has been fhewn above．

Hence therefore may be feen the Reafon，why we have faid thus much on the Nature and Idea of Law univerfal，fo intimate being the Union between this and right Conduct，that we find the latter is no－． thing more than a perfect Obedience to the former．

Hence too we fee the Reafon，why in one view it was deemed Happiness，to be void of Error or Epict．1．4．c．8．p．633．For to be thus inculpable was the neceffary Refult of Rectitude of Conduct，or sather in a manner the fame thing with it．

I cannot conclude this Note，without remarking on ań elegant Allufion of Antoninus to the primary Signification of the Word $\mathrm{K} \alpha \mathrm{T}_{\mathrm{p}}{ }^{\prime}$ Woris，that is to fay，$x \times 7 \alpha$ ópfoos，right onwards，fraight and directly forwards．Speaking of the Reafoning Faculty，how， without looking farther，it refts contented in its own

 ．．．．．．．．For which Reajon are all Aetions，of this

206 NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Species, called Rectitudes, as denoting the Directnefof of their Progrefion right on wards. 1.5. f. it. So again in the fame Senfe, teviav wepaviviv, to kecp on, the fraight Road. 1. 5. f. 3. 1. 10. f. 11.

One would imagine that our Countryman Milton had this Reafoning in view, when in his 1gth Sonnet fpeaking of his own Blindnefs, he fays with a becoming Magnanimity,
.------ Vet I $^{\text {a }}$ argue not Againft Heav'n's Hand or Will; nor bate one jot Of Heart or Hope; but fill bear up, and Aleer Right onwards +------.

The whole Sonnet is not unworthy of Perufal being both fublime and fimple.

Note XXVII. p. 185.----The mere doing whatever is correspondent to such an End, even tho' we never attain it ----] Thus Epictetus in Arrian, fpeaking of Addrefs to. Men in Power, and admitting fuch Addrefs, when juftified by certain Motives, adds that fuch Addrefs ought to be made, without Admiration, or Flattery. Upon this an Objector demands of him, ww̃ ชิ тúx $\omega$, $\tilde{8} \delta^{\prime}$ 'oucut; But how then am I to obtain that, which I want? ?--- The Philofopher anfwers, 'Eyc' fay to thee, that thou Bouldft go and addrefs, as tho' 3.bou wert to SUCCEED; and not rather with this only View, that thou mightf do that, which is becoming thy Character? ?-.- And foon after, when when an Objection is urged from Appearance, and the Opinion of Mankind, he anfwers ---- o'ux oict $\dot{\alpha} \lambda \lambda \alpha$ т $\tilde{\varepsilon}$ ПЕПРАХ $\Theta \mathrm{AI} \mathrm{KA} \mathrm{\Lambda} \mathrm{\Omega} \mathrm{\Sigma ;} \mathrm{Knoweft}$ thou not, that a fair and good Man does nothing for the Sake of Appearance, but for the fake only of having done well and fairly? Arr.Epict. 1.3. c. 24. p. 497, 498. This Doctrine indeed feems to have been the Bafis of the Stoic Morals; the Principle, which included, according to thefe Philofophers, as well Honour and Honefty, as Good and Happiness. Thus Cicero---Facere omnia, ut adipifcamur qua fecundum naturam fint, etfi ea non adfequamur, id effe छْ boneftum, छ folum per Se expetendum ©゚ fummum bonum Stoici dicunt. De Fin. 1.5. c. 7. p. 365, 6. To this is confonant that Sentiment of theirs in Plutarch ---

 Mor. 1060. D. E. See below, Note XXX.

Note XXVIII. p. 185.---What if we make our natural State the Standard only to determine our Conduct, छ${ }^{\circ}$ c.] 'Tis in this Senfe we find it elegantly faid in Pluterch by the STATE and what is confonant to it, are the Elements of Happine/s---and juft before, the fame natural State Source of moral Office; and the Subject Matter of Virtue. Plut. Mor. 1069. E.F. Atque etiam illud perfpicuum eft, confitui necefle effe initium, quod fapientia, sum quid agere incipiat, fequatur ; idX 2 que

que initium effe natura accommodatum: nam aliter appetitio, छ'c. Cic. Acad. 1. 2. c. 8. p. 85, 86. Initia proponi necefe effe apta छ accommodata natura, quorum ex felectione Virtus pofft exifere. De Fin. 1.4. c. 17. p. 316. Cum vero illa, qua officia effe dixi, proficifcantur ab initiis natura; ea ad hac referri neceffe eft: ut recte dici pofit, omnia officia eo referri, ut adipifcamur principia natura; nec tamen ut hoc fit bon or um ultimum ---- De Fin. 1.3. c. 6. p. 217.

Note XXIX. p. 185. -----We should not want a Good to correspond, छoc.] Plutarch quotes the following Sentiment of Cbryippus, who patronized this Idea of Good ---- Tìv шछрi $\alpha, \gamma \alpha \theta \tilde{\omega} \nu$

Note XXX. p. i87.----Yet we look not for his Reputation, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$.] What 2uintiliar fays of Rbetoric, may with great Propriety be tranfferred to Morality. Nofter orator, Arfque a nobis finita, non funt pofita in eventu. Tendit quidem ad victoriam, qui dicit : Sed, cum bene dixit, etiamfi non vincat, id, quod arte continetur, effecit. Nam छ゚ -gubernator vult falvâ nave in portum pervenire: $\mathcal{1}$ tamen tempeftate fuerit abreptus, non ideo minus erit gubernator, dicetque notum illud; dum clavum rectum teneam. Et medicus fanitatem agri petit: Jo tamen aut valetudinis vi, aut intemperantiâ agri, aliove quo cafu fumma non esntingit; dum ipfe omnia fecundum rationem fecerit, medicince fine non excidit. Ita oratori bene dixife, finis eft. Nam eft ars ea----- in Астu. pofita, non in eventu. Inft. Orat. 1.2. c.i7.

Note XXX. p. 187. --- He for a Subject has the whole of Human Life, $\sigma^{\circ}$ c.] 'Oufía of Good, is a peculiar Direction of Mind; and the Eflence of Evil, is a peculiar Direction alfo. What then are Externals? They ferve as Subjects to the Mind's Direction, from converfing with which it obtains its proper Good or Evil. Arr. Epict. 1. I. c. 29.

 adóáゆop(G). The SUBJECTS are indiferent, but not fo the USE of them. Arr. Epict. 1. 2. c. 5.

Thus Horace:
Non poffidentem multa vocaveris Recte beatum; rectius occupat Nomen beati, qui Deorum Muneribus sapienter uti, Duramque callet pauperiem pati, Pejufg; leto flagitium timet:

Non ille, छ'c.
Od. 1. iv. 9:

Even the Comic Poet feems not to have been unacquainted with this Doctrine :

Ch. 2uid nárrat? Cl. Quid ille? míferum fe effe. Ch. Mîferum? quem minus crédere eft?

NOTES on Treatise the Third.
Quid rélliqui eft, quin bábeat qua quidem in hómine dicuntûr bona?
Faréntis, patriam incólumem, amicos, génus, cognatos, divitias:
Atque baéc perinde fûnt ut illius ánimus, qui ea póffidet :
Qui uti foit, ei bona; illi, qui non útitur recté, mala.

Heauton. Act. I. S. 2. V. 18.

Note XXXI. p. 189.---The End in other Arts is ever distant, छ'c.] Sed in cateris artibus cum dicitur Artificiosè, pofterum quodam modo छ confequens putandum eft, quod illi ह่тเүevnncilıxò appellant; quod autem in quo Sapienter dicifur, id adprimo rectiflame dicitur: quicquid enim a Sapiente proficijcitur, id continus debet expletum effe omnibus fuis partibus'; in eo enim pofitum eft id, quod dicimus efe expetendum. Nam ut peccatum eft patriam prodere, parentes violare, fana depeculari, qua funt in effectu: fic timere, fic marere, fic in libidine effe, peccatum eft, etiam fine effectu. Verum ut hac, non in pofteris $\mathfrak{\text { o in }}$ confequentibus, fed in primis continuo peccata Junt: Jic ea, que proficicuntur a virtute, susceptione prima, non perfectione, recta funt judicanda. Cic. de modum opportunitas (fic enim adpellemus ṡvxxipíav) non fit major productione temporis (babent enim fuum modum quacunque opportuna dicuntur) fic reeta effectio (xa7óp日worv enim ita adpello, quoniam rectum factum кх1óp $1 \omega \mu \alpha$ ) reCta igitur effectio, item. convenientia, denique IPSUM BONOM, quod in eo pofitum ef ut Naturae confentiat, crefcendi acceffronem nullam babot. Ut enims apportunitas illa, fic bac de quibus diwi, non fiunt temporis productione majora: ob eamque caufam Stoicis non videtur optabilior nec magis expetenda vita beata, $\sqrt{i}$ fit longa, quam $\sqrt{6}$ brevis : utunturque fimili, ut, $\jmath_{i}$ cotburni laus illa eft ad pedem apte convenire, neque multi cotburni paucis anteponerentur, nee majores minoribus: fic quorum omne bonum convenientiâ atque opportunitate finitur, nec plura paucioribus, nec longinquiora brevioribus anteponentur. Cic. de Fin. 1. 3. c. 14. p. 242. See alfo Dio. Laert. 1. 7. f. IoI. M. Ant. 1. 6. f. 23. 1.3. f. 7. Senec. Epif. 66.

Note XXXIII. p. igi.---Recollect then, said he, Do you not remember that one Pre-conception, छ'c.] In this, and the fubfequent Pages, the general Pre-conceptions of Good are applied to the particular Hypothefis of Good, advanced in this Treatife. See before, pag. 115, 121, 122.

Note XXXIV. p. 192. ...- And is there any Time or Place, whence Rectitude of Conduct may be excluded?] Man-

 M. Ant. 1. 7. f. 54.

Note XXXV. p. 192. --- Where it shale not be in his Power to act bravely

 c. 10. p. 650 .

Note XXXVI. p. 195. ----- There are Instances innumerable of Men bad, as well as GOOd, ®oc. $^{\circ}$ ] See a long Catalogue of thefe in Cicero's Tufculan Difputations; Spartan Boys; Barbarian Sages; Indian Wives; Egyptian Devotees, $\mathrm{E}^{\circ} c$. $\Xi^{\circ} c$. The whole Paffage is worth reading. Tufo. Di/p. 1. 5. c. 27. p. 400, 401 , छ'c.

Note XXXVII. p.ig6.---This I write you (says he in one of his Epistles) while,

- $\lambda \varepsilon ́ \varepsilon \pi \sim \nu 1 \alpha$ т

 Cum ageremus vitce beatum '大 eundem fupremum diem, fcribebamus bac. Tanti autem morbi aderant vefica $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$. vifcerum, ut nibil ad corum magnitudinem poffit accedere. Compenfabatur tamen cum his omnibus animi latitia, quam capiebam menoriâ rationum inventorumque nofroium ---- Cic. de Fin. 1. 2. c. 30. p. 173.

Soon after we have another Sentiment of Epicurus, that a rational Adverfity was better than an irrational

N OTES on Treatise the Third.

tional Profperity. The original Words are --- xpeĩ-Dio. Laert. 1. 10. f. I35.

Note XXXVIII. p. 198. O Crito, ifit be pleasing to the Gods, E'c.] The three Quotations in this Page are taken from Plato; the firf from the Crito, quoted by Epictetus at the End of the Enchiridion, and in many other Places; the fecond from the Apology, quoted as frequently by the fame Author; the third, from the Menexenus or Epitaph. Plat. Opera, tom. 2. p. 248. Edit. Serran. See alfo Cic. Tufcul. 1.5. c. 12.

Note XXXIX. p. 199. If you are for Numbers, replied he, what think you of the numerous Race of Patriots, Goc.] $^{\circ}$ Sed quid duces छo principes nominem; cum legiones foribat Cato fape alacris in eum locum profectas, unde redituras Se non arbitrarentur? Pari animo Lacedamonii in Thermopylis occiderunt : in quos Simonides,

Dic hoppes Sparta, nos te bic vidife jacentes,
Dum fanctis patrica legibus obfequimur. Tufcul. Difp. 1. r. c. 42. p. Ior.

Note XL. Ibid. ------ Martyrs for Systems wrong, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$ c.] That there may be a bigoted Obfinacy in favour of what is abfurd, as well as a rational Coriftancy in adhering to what is right, thofe Egyftians above mentioned may ferve as Examples. Egyptiorum morem quis ignoret? quorum imbuta mentes pravitatis erroribus quamvis carnificinam prius fubierint, quam ibim aut a/pidem aut felem aut canem aut crocodilum violent: quorum etiam $\int$ imprudentes quidpiam fecerint, paenam nullam recufent. Tufcul. Difp. 1. 5. c. 27. p. 402. See before, Note XXXVI.

Note XLI. p. 200.---Celebrated to such a Height, in the Religion, which we profess, $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$ c.] 'Tis probable, that fome Analogies of this fort induced a Father of the Cburch (and no lefs a one than St. Ferom) to fay of the Stoics, who made moral Rectitude the only Good, --- nostro dogmati in plerisque concordant. Vid. Menag. in D. Laert. 1. 7. f. ror. p. 300. and Gatak. Prafat. in M. Anton. See alfo of this Treatije page rio. and below, Note LXIV.

Note XLII. p. 201. To live consistently, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ}$ c.] To live consistently is here explained to be living according to some one single consonant Scheme or Purpose; and our Good or Happiness is placed in fuch Consistence, upon a Suppofition that thofe, who live inconfifently, and without any fuch uniform Scheme, are of confequence miferable, and unbappy. Tò $\tau \boldsymbol{q}$ 安

 p. 17 .

This Consistence was called in Greek óporoyia, in Latin Convenientia, and was fometimes by itfelf alone confidered as the End. Thiv i $\mu 0 \lambda$ дoyiay alfo Cic. de Fin. 1.3. c. 6. p. 216. So alfo in the fame laft named Treatife, c. 7. p. 220.--Ut enim bifrioni actio, faltatori motus, non quivis, fed certus quidam ef datus: Fic vita agenda eft certo genere quodam, non quolibet; quod gemus conveniens consentaneumpue dicizus. Nec enim gubernationi aut medicince fimilem fapientiam effe arbitramur, Sed actioni illi potius, quam modo dixi, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$ faltationi; ut in ipfa ARTE infit, non foris petatur extremum, idef, artis effectio.
'Tis upon this Principle we find it a Precept in Cicero's Offices------- In primis autem confituendum eft, quos nos छ' quales effe velimus, छo in quo genere vitæ ----1. 1. c. 32. So likewife in the Enracter and Model of Life, which thou mayt maintain both by thy felf, and when thou art converfant with Mankind.

So much indeed was refted upon this Principle of Confiftence, that even to be any thing confifently, was held better than the contrary. Thus

 Man, either good or' bad; either to cultivate thy own Mind, or to cultivate things external---- Arr. Epict. 1. 3. c. 15. p. 421. And more fully than this does he exprefs himfelf in a Place fubfequent; where having firft counfelled againft that falfe Complaifance, which makes us, to pleafe Mankind, forget our proper Cbaracter, and having recommended as our Duty a Behaviour contrary, he adds ----- 'El $\boldsymbol{D}^{\prime}$ E

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

 But if what I recommend thee do not pleafe, then turn thee totally to all that is contrary; become a profligate of the moft profitute kind ----Cbaracters so different are not to be blended; thou canft not act at once Therfites and Agamemnon.

So too Horace:

------ Quanto constantior idems

 In vitiis, tanto levius mifer, ac prior ills Qui jam contento, jam laxo fune laborat.$$
\text { Sat. 7. 1. 2. v. } 18 .
$$

See alfo Cbaracterifics, V. r.•p. I3r.
Note XLIII. p. 203.---It is not merely, to live consistently; but to live consistently wilh Nature.] 'Ouodozy $\mu$ éves $\tau \tilde{n}$ ñ Qíneı そñ̃. Cleanthes in Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. rı1.... Congruenter natura convenienterque vivere. Cic. de Fin. 1.3. c. 7. p. 22I. The firf Defcription of our End [to live conffifently] was deemed defective, and therefore was this Addition made. See Stobious in the Place cited. Arr. Epict. 1. 3. c. r. p. 352.

Note XLIV. p. 204. ----- To live consistently with Nature is, to live according to just Experience of those things, WHICH HAPPEN AROUND US.] Tí入 (G) है 5 i tò

 Ethic. 171. Diog. Laert. 1. 7. c. 87. His verbès [fcil.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

[fcil. vivere fecundum naturam] tria fignificari Stoici dicunt. Unum ejufmodi, vivere adhibentem fcientiams earum rerum, que naturâ cvenirent ---- De Fin. 1. 4. c. 6. p. 286. See alfo the fame Treatife, l. 3. c. g. p. 227. l. 2. c. II. p. 113. where 'tis expreffed--Vivere cum intelligentiâ earum rerum, qua naturâ evenirent.

Note XLV. p. 205.--To live perpetually selecting, as far as possible, what is congruous to Nature, and rejecting what is contrary, making our End that Selecting, and that Rejecting only.]

 Clem. Alex. Strom. 1. 2. p. 497. Edit. Potter. This Sentiment was fometimes contracted, and expreffed fometimes, more concifely ftill, by the fingle Term joins this, and the foregoing Defcriptions of Happinefs, together. Circumfcriptis igitur bis Sententiis, quas pofui, छo fi qua fimiles carum fint ; relinquitur, ut fummum bonum fit, vivere fientiam adbibentem earum rerum, qua naturâ eveniant, feligentem qua fecundum naturam, ซo que contra naturam funt rejicientem, id eft, convenienter congruenterque natura vivere. De Fin. 1. 3. c. 9. p.227. See alfo De Fin. 1. 2. c. II. p. Ir3. See alfo Diog. Laert. 1. 7. c. 88. .-Stob. Ecl. Eth. 171.

Note XLVI. p. 207. To live in the dis-
 ( $\tau \in \lambda$ (G)

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

 Laert. 1. 7. c. 88. --- Stob. Ecl. Eth. 171. ----Officia omnia----fervantem vivert. Cic. de Fin. 1.4. c. 6. p. 286.

Soon after we meet the Phrafes---To live according to Nature; To live according 1.7. c. 87.----Confentire naturce; quod effe volunt e virtute, id eft, honefate vivere ---De Fin. 1. 2. c. II. p. II3. Where, as has been already obferved page 174, and in the Note likewife on the Place, we find the Lives according to Nature and Virtue are confidered as the fame.

However to make ci.. Tertion plainer, (if it be not perhaps fufficiently plain already) it may not be improper to confider, what Idea thefe Pbilofophers had of Virtue.

In Laertius (where he delivers the Sentiments of Zeno and his followers) Virtue is called $\Delta a^{\prime} \theta_{\varepsilon \sigma \sigma s}$

 A Mind formed to Confiftence thro' every Part of Life. Laert. 1. 7. c. 89.

In Stobaus (according to the Sentiments of the aulñ wepi d' $\mathrm{\lambda ov}$ tòv biov. A Difpofition of Mind, confonant to itfelf throughout the whole of Life. Ecl. Eth. p. 167.

So Cicero in his Laws --- Confans $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$ perpetua ratio vita, quee eft Virtus.---1. I. c. I7. p. 55.

So Seneca in his 74 th Epifle ----Virtus eninh convenientia confat: omnia opera ejus cum ip $\iint_{a}^{a}$ concordant, छo congruunt.

Thus therefore Confiftence being the Effence of Wirtue, and upon the Hypothefis bere advanced, the, Effence alfo of Happinefs; it follows firft that a Virtuous Life will be a Happy Life. But if a Happy one, then of courfe a Life according to Nature ; fince nothing can be Good, which is contrary to Nature, now indeed which is not confonant, in ftricteft manner, to it.

And here (as a proper Opportunity feems to offer) we cannot but take notice of the great Similitude of Sentiments; it may be even faid, the Unanimity of almoft all Philofophers, on this important Subject concerning Ends, and Happiness.

Those, whofe Hypothefis we have followed in this Dialogue, fuppofed it to be Virtue and cons sistent Action, and that without regard to Fortune or Succefs. But even they, who from their $\mathrm{Hy}-$ pothefis made fome Degree of Succefs requifite; who refted it not merely on right Action, but on a Proportion of bodily Welfare, and good Fortune concomitant, even thefe made right Action and Virtue to be PRINCIPAL.

Thus Archytas, according to the Doctrine of the ह̇णनuxia. Happinefs is the Ufe or Exercife of Virtue, attended with external good Fortune. Opufc. Mytholog. p. 678 . Confonant to this Sentiment, he fays in the Beginning of the fame Treatife, $\dot{\circ} \mu \dot{\varepsilon \nu} \dot{\alpha} \gamma \mathrm{z}-$ of neceflity bappy; [becaufe, upon this Hypothefis, external Fortune may be wanting; ] but the happy Man is of neceffity Good, [becaufe, upon the fame Hypothefis, without Virtue was no Happinefs.] Ibid.

 at all times be miferable, whether he have or whether be want the Materials of external Fortune; for if he have them, he will employ them ill. Ibid. p. 696. Thus -we fee this Philofopher, tho' he make Externals a Requifite to Happine/s, yet fill without Virtue he treats them as of no Importance. Again--- $\Delta v_{0} \delta^{2}$ odoi

 There are two Roads in Life diffinct from each other; one the rougher, which the fuffering Ulyffes went; the other nore fmooth, which was travelled by Neftor. Now of thefe Roads (fays he) Virtue defires indeed the latter; and yet is the not unable to travel the former. Ibid. p. 696. From which laft Sentiment it appears, that he thought Virtue, even in any Fortune, was capable of producing at leaft fome degree of Happiness.

As for the Socratic Doctrine on this Subject, it may be fufficiently feen by what is quoted from it, in the Dialogue pag. 198, 199. And as the Sentiments, there exhibited, are recorded by Plato, they may be called not only Socratic, but Platonic alfo. However, leaft this fhould be liable to difpute, the following Sentiment is taken from Xenocrates, one of Plato's immediate Succeffors, in the old Academy sivas $\Delta$ xípova. Xenocrates beld that he was Eudæmon, or Happy, who had a virtuous Mind; for that the Mind was every one's Dæmon or Genius. Arift. Top. 1.2. c. 6.

Here we fee Virtue made the Principle of Happiness, according to the Hypothefis of the Dialogue. There is an elegant Allufion in the Paffage to the Etymology of the Word 'Evdaín $\omega$, which fignifies both [Happy] and [polfeded of a good Genius or Damon;] an Allufion which in tranflating 'twas not poffible to preferve. See below, Note LVIII.

As for the Peripatetic Scbool, we find their Idea of Happiness, as recorded by Laertius, to be in a manner the fame with that of the Pythagoreans. It sife of Virtue, in a complete and perfect Life. Laert. 1. 5. c. 30. We have already, in Note XXV, cited the fame Doctrine (tho' fomewhat varied in Expreffion) from the Founder of the Peripatetics, in his firf Book of Ethics. So again we learn
 Y

Yovias To $\tau$ ' $\lambda$ © ', that 'tis certain AEtions and Energies, which are to be deemed the End. Ethic. Nic. 1. I.
 $\lambda$ (G). For 'tis the very Rectitude of Action, which is itfelf the End. Ibid. 1.6. c. 5. And again, 'H छ̀v-Energizing. 1. 9. c. 9. And more explicitly than all thefe Paffages in that elegant Simile, l. r. c. 8.---

 ПРАТТОNTE $\Sigma$ OP@ $\Omega \Sigma$ 白 $\pi$ '́bodor rígvoviai. For as in the Olympic Games, not thofe are crowned, who are bandfomeet and Arongeft, but thofe who combat and contend, (for 'tis from among thefe come the Victors;) fo, with refpect to things laudable and good in buman Life, 'tis the right Actors only that attain the Poffeffion of them. Nay, fo much did this Philofopher make Happiness depend on right Action, that tho' he required fome Portion of Externals to that Felicity, which he held Jupreme ; yet ftill 'twas Honour and Virtue which were its principal Ingredients. Thus fpeaking of the Calamities and external Cafualties of Life, which he confeffes to be Impediments to a Happine/s mole $\gamma$ 'sion' àvo o evoainuv. And yet, even in fuch Incidents, the fair Principle of Honour and Virtue Jines forth, when a Man with becoming Calmnefs endures many and great Misfortunes, and that not thro' Injenfsbility, but being brave and magnanimous. Nay more, if it be true, as we bave already affirmed, that 'tis Actions, which are predominant in conffituting a bappy Life, then can no one be completely mijerable, who is bappy in bis right Conduct, becaufe be will never be the Actor of what is detefabable and bafe. For 'tis our Opinion that the Man, truly wife and good, endures all Fortunes with becoming Decency, and from whatever bappens to arije, fill frames the faireft Actions; like as the good Commander ufes the Army, which be bappens to find, after the manner mof agreeable to the Rules of War; and the Sboemaker, from fuch Skins as otbers provide him, mokes a Shoe, the beft that can be made from fuch Materials; and So in the fame manner all other Artifst befide. But if this be true, then be, who is happy in this Recritude of Genius, can in no Infance be truly and fricily miferable. Eth. Nic. 1. I. c. ro.

As for Epicurus, tho' he was an Advocate for Pleafure, yet fo high was his Opinion of a wifg and right Conduct, that he thought rational Adverfity better than irrational Profperity. See Dial. p. 197. Hence too he reprefented that Pleafure, which he efteemed our Sovereign Happine/s, to be as infeparable from Virtue, as Virtue was from that.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

 $\dot{n}$ réws. 'Tis impolfible to live pleafurably, without living prudently, and bonourably, and jufly; or to live prudently, and honourably and jufly, without living plenfurably. Epic. in Laert. 1. 10. f. 132.

To conclude the whole, our Countryman Thomas Hobbes, though he profeffedly explodes all this Doctrine concerning Ends, yet feems infenfibly to have eftablifhed an End himfelf, and to have founded it (like others) in a certain Energy or Action. For thus 'tis he informs us, in his Treatife called Human Nature, that there can be no Contentment, but in Proceeding; and that Felicity confifeth, not in Having ----but in Prospering. And again, fome time after, having admitted the Comparifon of Human Life to a Race, he immediately fubjoins---- But this Race we muft fuppofe to have no other Goal, nor other Garland, but being FOREMOST and IN IT.

And thus much as to the concurring Sentiments of Philofophers on the Subject of Ends, here treated.

Note XLVII. p. 208.---Yetit in no manner takes away the Difference and Distinction of other things.] Cum enim virtutis hoc propriuin fit, earum rerum, quce fecundum naturam fint, babere delectum; qui omnia fic exaquavorunt, ut in utramque partem ita paria redderent, uti nullit felectione uterentur, virtutem ipfam fugfulerint. Cic. de Fin. 1. 3. c. 4. p. 207.

Quid auten apertius, quam, fi selecrio nulla fit ab iis rebus, que contra naturam fint, earwm rerum quice fint fecusdum naturam, tollatur omnis ea, qua quaratur laudeturque prudentia? Cic. de Fin. 1.3. c. 9. p. 227.

Deinceps explicatur differentia rerum: quam $\sqrt{2}$ non ullam. efe diceremus, confunderetur omnis vita, ut ab Arifone; nee ullum Sapientice minus aut opus inveniretur, cum inter eas res, qua ad vitam degendam pertinerent, nibil omnino intereffet; neque ullum delectum baberi oporteret. Itaque cum effet fatis confitutum, id folum effe bonum quod efèt honeftum, \&o id malum folum quod turpe; tum inter hac E゚ illa, qua nibil valerent ad beate mifereve vivendum, aliquid tamen, quo differrent, effe voluerunt, ut effent corum alia aftimabilia, alia contra, alia neutrum. Ibid. 1.3. c. 15. p. 246.'

Cextera autem et finec bona nec mala effent; tamen alia Jecundum naturam dicebat, alia naturce efle contraria: iis ipfis alia interjecta छ media numerabat. Acad. 1. i. c. II. p. 46. See Dial. p. 187.

Note XLVIII. p. 208, It suppresses no social and natural Affections, Éc.] As much has been faid concerning the Stoic Apathy, or Infenfibility with refpect to Paffion, it may not be improper to inquire, what were their real Sentiments on this Subject.

חá $\theta$ (G), which we ufually render a Pafion, is always rendered by Cicero, when fpeaking as a Stoic, Perturbatio, a Perturbation. As fuch therefore in the firft place, we fay it ought always to be treated.

The Definition of the Term $\pi \alpha^{\prime} \theta$ ( 3 , as given lated by Cicero, Appetitus vehementior. Tufc. 1. 4. c. 9. p. 273. Now this Definition may be more Y 3

NOTES on Treatise the Third．

eafily explained，if we firt inquire，what they meant by $i_{p} \mu \dot{\eta}$ ．＇Opun they defined to be $\oint_{0 \rho \alpha \dot{\alpha}} \psi u \chi \tilde{n} s \dot{\varepsilon} \pi$＇ rt，a Tendency or Motion of the Soul toward fomething． Stob．Ecl．Ethic．p．175．A $\pi \alpha^{\prime} \theta$ O therefore，or Perturbation muft have been，according to their De－ finition，a Tendency or Motion of the Soul，which was excefive and beyond Bounds．Stobaus，from whom this Definition is taken，in commenting upon it ob－ that Zeno（its Author）does not call a Пód（ơ fome－ thing capable by Nature to pafs into Excefs，but fome－ thing actually in Excefs already，as having its Efence， not in mere Capacity，but in Actuality．Ecl．Eth．p．I59．

There is another Definition of the fame Term， ximiss，a Motion of the Soul，irrational and contrary to Nature．D．Laert．1．7．f．iro．Andronicus Rbodius adds，to this latter Definition，the Words $\delta_{i}^{\prime}$ vitó－ $\lambda n \psi w$ rarz $\begin{gathered}\hat{n} \\ \alpha \\ \gamma\end{gathered} \theta \ddot{z}$ ，from the Opinion of fomething Good or Evil．Пॄpi Пád．p．523．So that its whole Idea is as follows．A Perturbation，or Stoic Paffion， is a Motion of the Soul，irrational and contrary to Nature，arijing from the Opinion of fomething Good or Evil．Thefe laft Words，founding the $\Pi \dot{\alpha} \theta$（ $)$ or Perturbation on Opinion，correfpond to what Cicers fays，where he gives it as the Sentiment of the Stoic Pbilofophers，omnes perturbationes judicio fieri $छ$ opinione．Tufc．1．4．c．7．p．276．Laertius informs us，that they even made the Ferturbations themfelves to Laert．1．7．f．inf．He fubjoins an Inftance to illuf－

NOTES on Treatise the Third．

gúpsov xaxòv sivas．For thus（fays he）the Love of Money is the Judgment or Opinion，that Money is a thing good and excellent．Plutarch records the fame Sentiment of theirs，in a fuller and more ample manner．П $\alpha \theta$（G）－－－$\lambda^{\prime} \gamma\left(\mathcal{G}\right.$ woupòs $x^{\prime} \alpha^{\alpha} x_{0}^{\prime} \lambda \alpha 5$（G），${ }^{\prime} x$ woo $\lambda a 6 \omega \dot{v}$ ．A Perturbation is a vitious and in－ temperate Reafoning，which affumes Vehemence and Strength from bad and erroneous Judgment．Nor． p．441．D．

The Subftance of what is faid above，rems to amount to this；that חá自，in a Stoic Sente， implied a Perturbation，and not a Paffion；and that such Perturbation meant an irrational and violent Motion of the Soul，founded on Opinion or Fudg－ mont，which was erroneous and faulty．

Now from hence it follows，that the Man of perfect Character（according to their Hypo－ thesis）muff of neceffity be $\dot{\alpha} \pi \alpha \theta \dot{n} s$ ，Apathetic， or void of Perturbation．For fuch a Cha－ racter，as has been Shewn，implies perfect Rectitude of Conduct．But perfect Rectitude of Conduct in－ plies perfect Rectitude of Judgment；and fuch Recti－ tude of Judgment excludes all Error and wrong＇Fudg－ mint ：but if Error and wrong Judgment，then Perturbation of confequence，which they fuppofe to be derived from thence alone．

That this was the Sene，in which they under－ flood Apathy，we have their own Authority，as

 $\mathrm{Y}_{4}$ They

They fay the wife Man is apathetic, by being fuperior to Error---by being Juperior, to Error, if they may be credited themfelves; not, as for the moft part we abfurdly imagine, by being fuperior to all Senfe, and Feeling, and Affection. The Sentence immediately following the foregoing, looks as if thefe Philofophers had forefeen, how likely they were

 There is alfo another fort of Apathetic Man, who is bad; who is the fame in Character, as the hard and inflexible. To the fame Purpofe Epictetus. 'Ou $\delta_{\varepsilon}$ ä to be Apathetic, like a Statue, but $I$ am withal to obferve Relations, both the natural and adventitious; as the Man of Religion, as the Son, as the Brother, as the Father, as the Citizen. Arr. Epict. 1. 3. c. 2. p. 359.

Immediately before this, he tells us in the that a Perturbation in no other way ever arifes, but either when a Defire is fruftrated, or an Averfion falls into that which it would avoid. Where 'tis obfervable, that he does not make either Defire or Averfion חúdn, or Perturbations, but only the Caufe of Perturbations, when erroneoully conducted.

Agreeably to this, in the fecond Chapter of the Enchiridion, we meet with Precepts about the Conduct and Management of thefe two Affections---

Not a word is faid about lopping off either ; on the contrary, Averfion we are directed how to employ immediately, and Defire we are only ordered to fufpend for the prefent, becaufe we want a proper Subject of fit Excellence to excite it.

To this may be added, what the fame Philofopher fpeaks, in his own Perfon, concerning himfelf.

 fatisfied and contented, if I can Desire and avoid agreeably to Nature. He did not remain it feems diffatisfied, till he had eradicated thefe Affections; but he was fatisfied in reducing them to their natural UJe.

In Laertius we read recorded for a Stoic Sentiment, that as the vitious Man had his $\pi \alpha^{\prime} \theta n$, or Perturbations; fo oppofed to thefe, had the Virtuous his 'Evia0sías, his Eupatbies or Well-feelings, tranflated by Cicero Conftantic. The tbree chief of thefe were Defire; 'Euда́esio, Caution, defined "'Exкдiois Éviov © , rational Averfion; and Xapà, Joy, defined ह̈ $\pi$ apois principal $E$ upatbies belonged many fubordinate Species;
 द̇UUuix, छ'c. See Laert. 1. 7: โ. 115, 116. Andron. Rbod. $\pi \varepsilon \rho!{ }_{\rho} \alpha_{\alpha} \theta \omega v$. Cic. Tufc. 1. 4. c. 6.

Cicero makes Cato, under the Character of a Stoic, and in explaining their Syftem, ufe the following Expreffions. Pertinere autem ad rem arbitrantur, intellegi natura fieri, ut liberi a parentibus amentur: a quo initio profectam communem bumani generis focietatem perfequuntur. De Fin. 1.3. c. 19. The fame Sentiment of the Stoics is recorded by Laertius.

 natural to them. 1. 7. 个. 120.

Again, foon after, in the fame Treatife de Finibus. Quodque nemo in fumma folitudine vitam agere velit, ne cum infinita quidem voluptatum abundantia; facile intellegitur, nos ad conjunctionem congregationemque hominum, छo ad naturalem communitatem effe natos.

 The virtuous Man (fay they, the Stoics) will never be for living in Solitude; for be is by Nature forial, and formed for Retion. 1. 7. f. 123.

Again, Cicero, in the above-cited Treatife. Cum autem ad tuendos confervandofque bomines bominem natum effe videamus; confentaneum eft buic naturce, ut fapiens velit gerere, $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$ adminiftrare rempublicam; atque ut c natura vivat, uxorem adjungere, Ev velle ex eâ liberos. Ne amores quidem fanctos a fapiente alienos effe arbitrantur.-----Ut vero confervetur omnis homini erga bominem focietas, conjunctio, caritas; छ emolumenta Eo detrimenta----communia effe voluerunt. De Fin. 1. 3. c. 20, 21 .

In Epictetus, the leading Duties, or moral Offices

N OTES on Treatise the Third.

 p. 386. The fame Sentiments may be found repeated both in Stobaus and Laertius.

I fhall only add one more Sentiment of thefe Pbilofophers, and that is concerning Friendbip. $\Lambda \dot{\varepsilon}-$
 They fay that Friendbip exifs among the Virtuous only. Laert. 1. 7. f. 124.

The Sum of thefe Quotations appears to be this; that the Storcs, in the Character of their virtuous Man, included rational Defire, Averfion, and Exultation; included Love and parental Affection; FriendBip, and a general Cbarity or Benevolence to all Mankind; that they confidered it as a Duty, arifing from our very Nature, not to neglect the Welfare of public Society, but to be ever ready, according to our Rank, to act either the Magiftrate or the private Citizen; that their Apathy was no more than a Freedom from Perturbation, from irrational and exselfive Agitations of the Soul; and confequently that the frange Apathy, commonly laid to their Charge, and in the demolifhing of which there have been fo many Triumphs, was an imaginary Apathy, for which they were no way accountable.

Note XLIX. p. 209. It rejects no Gain, not inconsistent with Justice.] The Stoics were fo far from rejecting Wealth, when acquired fairly, that they allowed their perfect Man, for the fake of enriching himfelf, to frequent the Courts of Kings, and teach Philofophy for a Stipend. Thus Plutarch from a Treatife of Cbryfippus ----To To. $\mu, \mathbf{v}$

32 NOTES on Treatise the Third.

So likewife the Stoic Hecato, in his Treatife of Offices, as quoted by Cicero. Sapientis effe, nibil contra mores, leges, infituta facientem, babere rationem rei familiaris. Neque enim folum nobis divites effe volumus, fed liberis, propinquis, amicis, maximeque reipublica. Singulorum enim facultates E copia, $^{\circ}$ divitice funt civitatis. De Offic. 1. 3. c. 15 .

Note L. p. 209.---Universally as far as Virtue neither forbids nor dissuades, it endeavours torender Life, even in the most vulgar Acceptation, as chearful, joyous, and easy as possible.] Etenim quod fummum bonum a Stoicis dicitur, Convenienter naturce vivere, id babet banc (ut opinor) Sententiam, Cum virtute congrucre Sempcr: cætera autem, quæ fecundum naturam effent, ita legere, fi ea virtuti non repugnarent. Cic. de Offic. 1. 3. c. 3. ra, murely, ofser all that has tw = tue on the one fide, attended with thefe Externals, and $n$, Virtue on the other fide, alone by berfelf, the wife Man would never choofe that Virtue, which was defitute - tra and fingle, if 'twas in bis power to obtain that other, repargmarent. Ane frome which 2 Cast, thingsaccorbing to Nature which was accompanied with thefe Advantages. Mepi \$ $\cup$ Х. p. 157.

Alexander Aphrodisiensis, fpeaking of the al Stoic Doctrine concerning the external Conveniencies, and common Utilities of Life, delivers their Senti-

Note LI. p. 20g. ---Nay, could it mend the Condition of Existence---by adding to the amplest Possessions the poorest, meanest Utensil, it would in no degree contemn, छ'c.] --- Si ad illam vitam, quace cum virtute degatur, ampulla aut frigilis accedat, fumpturum fapientem eam vitam potius, cui bac adjecta fint---De Fin. 1. 4. c. 12. p. 300.

Note LII. p. 2io--Could it indeed choose its own Life, it would be always that, where most social Affections might be exierted, $\xi^{\circ}$ c.] Itemque magis eft fecundum naturam, pro omnibus gentibus (fi fieri poflit) confervandis aut juvandis, maximos labores moleftiafque fufcipere, imitantem Herculem illum, quem bominum fama, beneficiorum memor, in concilio coelefium conlocavit; quam vivere ins folitudine, non modo fine ullis moleftiis, fed etiam in maximis voluptatibus, abundantem omnibus copiis; us. excellas etiam pulcbritudine E viribus. शuocirca optime quifque छ Splendidifimo ingenio longe illam vitam buic anteponit. Cic. de Offic. 1. 3. c. 5 .

Note LIII. p. Ibid. ------It teaches us to consider Life, as one great important Drama, where, $\boldsymbol{\sigma}^{\circ}$ c.] Thus xovlus. The wife Man is like the good Actor; who, whether be aJume the Charakier of Therfites or Agamemnon, NOTES on Treatise the Thiod. memnon, acts either of the two Parts with a becoming Propriety. D. Laert. 1. 7. F. 160.

This Comparifon of Life to a Drama or Stageplay, feems to have been a Comparifon much approved by Authors of Antiquity. See Epicz. Enchirid. c. 17. and the Notes of the late learned Editor Mr. Upton. See alfo M. Anton. 1. 12. f. 36. and the Notes of Gataker.

Note LIV. p. 2if.---It accepts all the Joys derived from their Success, छo'c. It fixes not, like the many, its Happiness on Success alone, $E^{\circ}$ c.] One of the wifeft Rules that ever was, with refpect to the Enjoyment of external good Fortune, is that deliver'd by Epictetus; to enjoy it is given, and for fuch Time as it is given, remembring that neither of thefe Conditions we have the Power to command. See Arr. Epict. 1. 4. c. i. p. 556. See alfo p. 573. of the fame.

Note LV. Ibid. On the contrary, when this happens, 'tis then it retires into itself, and reflecting on what is fair, what is laudable, E'c.] See before, p. 322.

Note LVI. p. 212. All Men pursue Good, E'c.] This is a Principle adopted by all the Stoics, and inculcated thro' every part of the Differtations of Epictetus. Take an Example or two out of many.

 Nature

Nature of every one to purfue Good, and fly Evil---for notbing is more intimately allied to us than Good. Arr. Epict. 1. 4. c. 5. p. 606. Again, l. 2. c. 22.
 oun $\varphi$ ¢́povit. To nothing is every Animal fo intimately allied, as to its own peculiar Welfare, and InTEREST.

So Cicero. Omnes enim expetimus utilitatem, ad eamque rapimur, nec facere aliter ullo modo pofumus. De Offic. 1. 3. c. 28.

Note LVII. p. 2i3.---- All derived from Externals, must fluctuate as theyfluctuate.] See before, pag. 126, I30, 33.

Note LVIII. Ibid. --- When we place the Sovereign Good in Mind----] Demon or Genius means every Man's particular Mind, and nium efle uniufoujufque animum rationalem; छo ideo efle fingulos fingulorum---Varro in Fragm. 'Tis from this Interpretation of Genius, that the Word, which in Greek expreffes Happiness, is elegantly etymologized to mean a Goodness of Genius or Mind.

 See Gataker on the Place. 'The Sentiment came originally from the old Academics. See before, page 32 I.

Note LIX. p. 214. ----- Behold the true and perfect Man: that Ornament, Éc.]. 2uam gravis vero, quam magnifica, quam conftans conficitur ficitur perfona fapientis? Qui, cum ratio docuerit, quod boneftum effet, id effe folum bonum, femper fit necefle eft beatus, vereque omnia ifta nomina poffideat, qua inrideri ab inperitis folent. Rectius enim appellabitur rex, quam Tarquinius, qui nee fe nee fuos regere potuit : rectius magifer populi, छัఁ. Cic. de Fin. 1. 3. c. 22. p. 269. Ergo bic, quifquis eft, qui moderatione E conftantia quietus animo eft, fibique ipfe placatus; ut nee tabefcat moleftiis, nee frangatur timore, nee fitienter quid expetens ardeat defiderio, nec alacritate futili geftiens deliquefcat; is eft Sapiens, quem quarimus, is eft beatus: cui nibil bumanarum rerum aut intolerabile ad demittendum animum, aut nimis latabile ad ecferendum videri poteft. Quid enim videatur ci magnum, ®'c. $^{\circ}$ Tufc. Difp. 1.4. c. 17. p. 298.

Note LX. p. 215.---Would not your System in such a Case a little border upon the Chimerical? Éc.] Cbryjippus feems to have been fenfible of this, if we may judge from a Paffage of his, preferved in Plutarch. $\Delta 10^{\prime}$ rai diò

 th̀v àvpwrivnv ©úrw. For this reafon, thro' the exceffive Greatnefs and Beauty of what we affert, we appear to fay things which look like Fictions, and not fuch as are fuitable to Man and human Nature. Mor. 104I. F.

Note LXI. p. 216. ---.-In antient Days, when Greece, छơ.] See Cir. de Invent. 1. 2. c. i. See alfo Maximus Tyrius, Diff. 23. p. 277. of the fate Quarto Edition ; and Xenoph. Memor. 1.3. c. 10.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Note LXII. p. 219.----- No where in any particular Nature is the perfect Character to be seen intire.] The Stoicsthemfelves acknowledged, as we learn from Clemens of Alexandria, that their o $\sigma 0$ poos, or perfect Man, was difficult to be found to an exceeding great degree; ivosúricus gives it as their Opinion, that they bad never as yet found bim, $\mu!́ x p s$ т $\tilde{\varepsilon}$ $\tau \check{ } \sigma_{0} \nsupseteq \tilde{y}$. Adv. Phyf. p. 582. Edit. Lipfienf.

What Sextus fays, feems to be confirmed by Cicero, who fpeaking in his Offices the Language of a Stoic, has the following Expreffions. Nec vero, cum duo Decii, aut duo Scipiones, fortes viri commemorantur, aut cum Fabricius Arifidefve juftinominantur; aut ab illis fortitudinis, aut ab bis jufitice, tanquam a Sapientibus, petitur exemplum. Nemo enim horum sic Sapiens eff, ut Sapientem volumus intellegi. Nec ii, qui fapientes habiti funt, छo nominati, M. Cato §o G. Leclius, fapientes fuerunt; ne illi quidem feptem: fed ex mediorum officiorsm frequentia fimilitudinem quandam gerebant, Speciemque fapientum. De Offic. 1. 3. c. 4. Again, in his Laclius, fpeaking of the fame confummate Wifdom, he calls it, Sapientia, quam adbuc mortalis nemo ef confecutus.

So too Quintilian. Quod $f$ defuit bis viris fumma virtus, fic quarentibus, an oratores fuerint, refpondebo, quo modo Stoici, $\sqrt{ }$ interrogentur, an Sapiens Zeno, an Cleanthes, an Cbryippus, refpondeant; magnos quidem illos ac venerabiles; non tamen id, quod natura ho-

NOTES on Treatise the Third. minis fummam babet, confecutos. Inft. Orat. 1. 12. c. I. p. $7^{21}, 722$. Edit. Caper.

So likewife Seneca: Scis, quem nunc bonum virum dicam? Hujus fecundæ nota. Nam ille alter fortaffe, tanquam phoenix, femel anno quingentefimo nafcitur. Epift. 42.

Note LXIII. p. 2Ig.---I might inform you of the natural Pre-eminence, and high Rank of specific Ideas.] See Cicero in his Orator, near the Beginning. Sed ego fic fatuo, nibil effe in ullo genere tam pulchrum, quo non, छ'c. Eoc. See alfo the Verfes of Boethius before cited, Note XVII. p. 295 - か.

Note I XIV. p. 220, 22I.---An Exemplar of Imitatifinso which tho' none we think CAN equal, yet all at least may fol-low----an Exemplar, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ}$.]. Seneca gives it as a general Confeflion of the greateft Philofophers, that the Doctrine they taught, was not quemadmodum ipfi zosinerent, fed quemadmodum vivendum effet. De Vitâ beatâ, c. 18.

There appears indeed to be one common Reasoning with refpect to all Models, Exemplars, Standards, Correctors, whatever we call them, and whatever the Subjects, which they are deftined to adjuft. According to this Reafoning, if a Standard be lefs perfect than the Subject to be adjufted, fuch Adjufting (if it may be fo called) becomes a Detriment. If it be but equally perfect, then is the Adjufting fuperfluous. It remains therefore that it muft be more perfect, and that to any Tranfrendence, any Accuracy conceivable. For fuppofe a Standard as bighly accurate, as can be imagined. If the Subjects to be adjufted have a Nature fuitable, then will they arrive, by fuch Standard, to a degree of Perfection, which thro' a Standard lefs accurate they could never poffibly attain. On the contrary, if the Subjects be not $\int 0$ far capable, the Accuracy of the Standard will never be a hindrance, why they fhould not become as perfect, as their Nature will admit.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

It feems to have been from fome Sentiments of this kind, that the Stoics adorned their o $\sigma 0$ pos, or perfect Cbaracter, with Attributes fo far Juperior to he was fortunate; 'twas be was above van.; 'twas be was Self-fufficient, and happy, and perfect. Plutarch. Mor. 1068. B. See Note LXII.

Some Pbilofopbers have gone fo far, as not to reft fatisfied with the moft perfect Idea of Hum nity, but to fubflitute, for our Exemplar, even the fupreme Being, God Himself. Thus Plato, in his Theatetus, makes the great Object of our Endeavours, to be coming juft and holy, along with Wijdom or Prudence. Plat. tom. I, p. 176. Edit. Serrani.
 God, as far as in our power. He immediately explains, what this Refemblance is. 'O $\mu$ óswors $\delta \delta^{\prime}$, $\delta$ ' 2

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

The Gofpel appears to favour the fame Hypothefis. Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. Matt. v. 48.

What has been above faid, will be, 'tis hoped, a fufficient Apology for the Tranfcendence of the Character, defcribed in the Dialogue.

Note LXV. p. 221. The Proficiency of Socrates--was sufficient to convince us-that some Progress, $\sigma^{\circ}$ c.] See Diog. Laert.

Note LXVI. p. Ibid.---Nor was the Prize, As USUAL, RESERVED only to the first; but all, who run, might depend upon a Reward, having, छ'c.] Verum ut tranfeundi fpes non fit, magna tamen eft dignitas fubfequendi. Quinct. Inft. 1. 12. c. II. p. 760. Exigo itaqus a me, non ut optimis par fim, fed ut malis melior. Senec. de Vitâ Shall I be Milo, and yet I neglect not my Body; nor Crœefus, and yet I neglect not my Eftate; nor in general do we defift from the proper Care of any thing, thro' Defpair of arriving at that which is fupreme. Arr. Epict. 1. 1. c. 2. See alfo Horat. Epif. I. I. 1. v. 28, छ์6,

Note LXVII. p. 225.----This whole Uni-verse---Is one City or Commonwealth---]
 c. 24. p. 486. This was a Stoic Doctrine, of which Epictetus and the Emperor Marcus make perpetual mention. See of the laft, l. I2. $\int \cdot 3^{6}$.

So Cicero. Univerfus bic mundus una civitas communis Deorum atque bominum-xiftumandus. De Legg. 1. 1. c. 7. p. 29. See De Fin. I. 3. c. 19. De Nat. Deor. 1. 2. c. 62.

Note LXVIII. p. 227.----Hence the Mind truly wise, quitting the Study of Particulars, ${ }^{\circ}$ c.] The Platonics, confidering Science as fomething afcertained, definite, and feady, would admit nothing to be its Object, which was vague, infinite, and pafing. For this reafon they excluded all Individuals, or Objects of Sense, and (as Ammonius expreffes it,) raifed themfelves, in their Contemplations, from Beings particular to Beings univerfal, and which as fuch, from their ownNature, were eternal and definite. The whole Paf-р $\alpha \sigma \mu \varepsilon ์ \nu \omega \nu$ दُร'

 Z 3 , 'Eт:5 ำด

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

 Preface to Porphyry's IJagoge, p. 14. Edit. 8vo.

Consonant to this, we learn 'twas the Advice of Plato, with refpect to the Progrefs of our Speculations and Inquiries, to defcend from thofe bigher $G e-$ nera, which include many Jubordinate Species, down to. the loweft Rank of Species, thofe which include only Individuals. But bere 'twas bis Opinion, that our Inquiries ßould fop, and, as to Individuals, let them wholly alone; becaule of thefe there could not polfibly be any $\tau ช ่ า \omega \nu$ ह่ $\pi เ \varsigma^{n} n \mu \nu$. Porphyr. Ifagog. c. 2.

Such was the Method of antient Philofophy. The Fafhion at prefent appears to be fomewhat altered, and the Bufinefs of Philofophers to be little elfe, than the collecting from every Quarter, into voluminous Records, an infinite Number of fenfible, particular, and unconnected Facts, the chief Effect of which is to excite our Admiration. So that if that well-known Saying of Antiquity be true, 'twas Wonder which induced Men firft to philofophize, we may fay that Philofophy now ends, whence originally it began.

Note LXIX. p. 228.----A Faculty, which recognizing both itself, and all things else, becomes a Canon, A Corrector, and A Standard universal.] See before, p. 162 .

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

In Epictetus, 1. I. c. 1. p. 6. the $\Delta^{\prime}$ vaxuis $\lambda 0 \gamma \leqslant x n_{n}$, or reafoning Power, is called the Power $\dot{\eta}$ 站 $\dot{\alpha} v\rangle \eta_{\nu}$

 Properties of the reafoning Soul are, it beholdeth itfelf; it formeth itfelf, &c. 1. II. c. I. So again Epictetus, for Life itfelf, and the various Means which co-operate to its Support; for the Fruits of the Earth, for Wine and Oil, for all thefe things be thankful to God: yet be mindful that be bath given thee fomething elfe, wнicн is better than all these; fomething which is to ufe them, to prove them, to compute the Value of each. Arr. Epict. 1. 2. c. 23. p. 32 I.

Note LXX. p. 228. ------ That MasterScience, of what they are, where they are, and the End to which, E'c.] See Arr. Epi67. 1. 2. c. 24. p. 337 .-----See alfo 1. 1. c. 6. p. 36. and Perf. Satyr. 3. v. 66.

Note LXXI. Ibid.----And never wretchedly degrade themselves into Natures to them subordinate.] See Arr. Epect. 1. I.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Affinity (he means our Affinity to the Body, or bafer Part) fome of us, degenerating, become like Wolves, faitbless, and treacherous, and mifchievous; others, like Lions, fierce, and favage, and wild; but the greater Part turn Foxes, little, fraudulent, wretched Animals. Cum autem duobus modis, id eft, aut vi aut fraude fiat injuria; fraus, quafi vulpecula, vis, leonis videtur. Cic. de Offic. 1. 1. c. 13. See alfo Arr. Epict. 1. 2. c. g. p. 210. In our own Language we feem to allude to this Degeneracy of Human Nature, when we call Men, by way of reproach, Sbeepifh, Bearif, Hoggi/s, Ravenous, &c.

Note LXXII. p. 229.-----That Reason, of which our own is but a Particle, or дór전. Mar. Ant. 1. 5. f. 27. Humanus autem animus, decerptus ex mente divinâ, cum nullo alio nifı cum ipfo Deo (fi boc fas eft dictu) comparari potef. Tufc. Difp. 1. 5. c. 13. p. 37 I.

Note LXXIII. Ibid.---Fit Actors in that general Drama, where thou hast allotted every Being, great and small, its proper Part, © ${ }^{\circ}$.] See before, $p$. 210. and Note LIII. See alio Arr. Epict. 1. 3. c. 22. p. 444-- and great, but too long to be here inferted.

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

Note LXXIV. p. 230.---Enable us to curb Desire, Eic. Enable us even to suspend it, E'c. Be our first Work to have my Faculty of Defire I have not ufed at all; my Averfion I have employed with refpect only to things, which are in my power. 1.4. c. 4. p. 588. See alfo Enchir. c. 2. and Cbaract. V. III. p. 202.

 Defire altogether, that in time thou mayft be able to defire rationally. Arr. Epict. 1. 3. c. 13. p. 414.

Horace feems alfo to have alluded to this Doctrine:

> Virtus eft, vitium fugere ; Eo fapientia prima, Stultitia caruife------ Epif. 1. 1. 1. v. 41.

Note LXXV. Ibid..--- Let not our Love there stop, where it first begins, but insensibly conduct it, E'c.] See Plat. Symp.

Note LXXVI. Ibid.----Not that little casual Spot, where, छ'c.] See Arrian. Epict. 1. 1. c. 9. p. 51. Socrates quidem, cum rogaretur, cujatem fe effe diceret, Mundanum, inquit: totius eninı mundi fe incolam Eo civem arbitrabatur. Tufc. Difp. 1.5. c. 37 . p. 427.

Note LXXVII. p. 23 r----Teach us each to regard himself, but as a Part of this great Whole; a Part, छ${ }^{\circ} c$.] Пथ̃s ชั้

N OTES on Treatise the Third.

 Senfe then (fays the Philofopher, fince all is referable to one univerfal Providence) are fome things called agreeable to our Nature, and others the contrary? The Anfwer is, They are fo called, by confidering ourfelves as detached, and Separate from the Whole. For thus may I fay of the Foot, when confidered fo apart, that 'tis agreeable to its Nature, to be clean and free from Filth. But if we confider it as a Foot, that is, as fometbing not detached, but the Member of a Body, it will beboove it both to pafs into the Dirt, and to trample upon Thorns, and even upon occafion to be lopped off, for the Prefervation of the Whole. Were not this the cafe, it would be no longer a Foot. Something therefore of this kind Bould we conceive with respect to ourfelves. ------ What art thou? A Man. If thou confider thy Being as fometbing Separate and detached, 'tis agreeable to thy Nature, in this View of Independence, to live to extreme Age, to be rich, to be bealthy. But if thou confider ibyjelf as a Man, and as the Member of a certain Whole; for the .ake of that Whole, it will occafionally behoove thee, at one while to be fick, at another while to fail and rifque the Perils of Navigation, at another while to be in want, and at laft to die perbaps before thy time. Why therefore doft thou bear thefe Events impatiently? Knoweft thou not, that after the fame manner as the Foot ceafetb to be a Foot, fo doft thou too ceafe to be longer a Man? Arr. Epict. 1. 2. c. 5. p. 1 19.

Note LXXVIII. p. 231. ---- In as much as

 Qúбля

 c. 6. p. 195. It appears that the above Sentiment was of Cbry $\int$ pppus. In the tenth Cbapter of the fame Book we have it repeated, tho' in words fomewhat ótи, \&c.

Note LXXIX. p. 232. ---- That we may know no other Will, than thine alone, and that the Harmony of our particular Minds with thy universal, छj 6 .]

 ow. The Virtue of a bappy Man, and the Felicity of Life is this, when all things are tranfacted in. Harmony of a Man's Genius, with, the Will of Him, who adminifters the Whole. Diog. Laert. 1. 7. c. 88. p. 418 . This is what Epictetus calls $\tau \hat{\nu} \nu \alpha^{2} v \neq ช ี$ b'่ $\lambda \eta-$ бw ovvápuoras тois ywopúvoos, to attune or harmonize one's Mind to the things, which happen. Diff. 1. 2. C. I4. P. 242.

Note LXXX. Ibid. Yet since to attain this Height ---- is but barely possible, $\mathcal{F}^{\circ} \mathrm{C}$.] See before, page $215, \mathrm{E}^{\circ} \mathrm{C}$. See alfo Notes LX. and LXII.

Note LXXXI. p. 233.---Such as to transform us into Savage Beasts of Prey, sullen, $\mathcal{O}^{\circ}$ c.] See before, Note LXXI.

Note

N OTES on Treatise the Third.

Note LXXXII. p. 233. That animating Wisdom, which pervades, and rules the Whole, $\varepsilon^{\circ}$ c.] This Power is called by the Em-

Note LXXXIII. Ibid. --- That Magic Dr-

 f. $36 .--$ See alfo 1. 4. f. 44. 1. 3. f. 2. " $\Omega \sigma \pi \varepsilon \rho$ д ${ }^{\circ} \rho$

 Plutarch. p. 1065. D.

Cleantbis Hymn. apudSte¢h. in Poefi Pbilof. p. 49, 50.
[The Reader will obferve that the fourth of the above Veries is fupplied by the Mifcell. Obfervationes

Criticr,

NOTES on Treatise the Third.
Criticce, Vol. VII. from a Manufcript of Vofius at Leyden.]

Note LXXXIV. p. 234. - --WIth thesemay our Minds be unchangeably tinged, Éc.]
 M. Ant. 1. 5. f. 16.

Note LXXXV. Ibid. --------- With a Re-
 c. 2. M. Ant. 1. 4. f. 1. 1.5. f. 20. Seneca tranflates it, cum exceptione. See De Beneficiis, 1. 4. f. 34 • $^{\circ}$

Note LXXXVI. Ibid.---Never miss what we would obtain, or fall into that WHICH WE WOULD AVOID, छ'c.] $\mu$ и́ts óps $\gamma^{\circ} \mu \varepsilon-$
 Epict. 1.3. c. 12. p. 404.

Note LXXXVII. p. 235. ---- Conduct me, Thou, छic.]

Cleanthes in Epict. Ench. c. 52.

Thus tranflated by Seneca:
Duc me, parens, celfique dominator poli, Quocunque placuit : nulla parendi mora eft:

NOTES on Treatise the Third.
Adfum impiger. fac nolle: comitabor gemens, Malufque patiar, quod bono licuit pati.

Epif. $10 \%$
Note LXXXVIII. p. 236. 'Tis Habit, replied he, is all in all. 'Tis Practice and Exercise, which can only, छic. Éc.

 the virtuous Character) there is need of much Preparation, of much Labour and Learning. And what? Dof thou expeeg it bould be pofible (anfwers the Philofopher) to obtain, by little Pains, the chiefeft greatest Art? Arr. Epict. 1.1. c. 20. p. ini.

 mighty. Animal is complete at once; nor more is the brave and generous Man. 'Tis neceffary to undergo the - fevereft Exercife and Preparation, and not raßly plunge into things, which are no way fuitable. Ejufd. Differt. 1. 1. c. 2. p. 18. See alfo the fame Author, 1. 1. c. 15. p.86. 1. 2. c. 14. p. 243. Sed ut nec medici, nec imperatores, nee oratores, quamvis artis pracepta perceperint, quidquam magna laude dignum fine ufu छ exercitatione confequi polfunt : fic officii confervandi precepta traduntur illa quidem (ut facimus ìp $\sqrt{2}$;) Sed rei magnitudo ufum quoque exercitationemque defiderat. Cic. de Offic. 1. 1. c. 18. $\dot{n} \delta^{\prime}$ 'Н О IK H Ethic. Nicom. 1. 2. C. I.

Note LXXXIX. p. 236. Nothing is to be had. gratis, छ'c.] wpoíxa sodè rivelar. Art. Epict. 1.4. c. 10. p. 653. The fame Sentiment is often repeated by the fame Author.

Note XC. p. 24I. ------- We are all governed by Interest, $\delta^{\circ}$ c.] See of the Dia$\log u e$, p. 212, 246. See alfo Notes LVI. and XCII..

Note XCI. p. 243. ------- 'Tis a smoakt
 1. 5. c. 29. See Arr. Epič. 1. 1. c. 25. p. 129.

Note XCII. Ibid. Is a social Interest, Eoc.] As the Stoics, above all Philofophers, oppofed a lazy inactive Life, fo they were perpetually recommending a proper regard to the Public, and encouraging the Practice of every focial Duty. And tho' they made the original Spring of every particular Man's Action, to be Self-love, and the profpect of private Intereft; yet fo intimately united did they efteem this private Intereft with the public, that they held it impolible to promote the former, and not at the fame time promote the latter. Toóvilyv Qúasy พ $\alpha$ ture of the rational Animal, that it fhould not be able to obtain any private Goods, if it contribute not witbal fome thing profitable to the Community. Thus is there no longer any thing unsocial, in doing all things for the sake of self. Art. Epicf. 1. 1. c. 19. p. 106.

The

The Peripatetic Doctrine was much the fame.

 jointly at the fair Principle of Honour, and ever Arive. to act what is faireft and moft laudable, there would be to every one in common whatever was wanting, and to each Man in particular of all Goods the greateft, if Virtue deferve jufly to be fo efteemed. So that the good Man is necefarily a Friend to self: For by doing what is laudable, be will always bimfelf be profited, as well as at the fame time be beneficial to others. Ethic. Nicom. l. g. c. 8.

Note XCIII. p. 243.---If so, then Honour and Justice are my Interests, E'c.] Thus $^{\circ}$.] Ther Cicero, after having fuppofed a focial common Intereft to be the natural Intereft of Man, fubjoins imme-diately----2uod $\bar{z}$ ita eft, una continemur omnes छo eadem lege natura. Idque ipfum fi ita'eft, certe violare alterum lege natura prohibemur. De Offic. 1.3. c. 6.

Note XCIV. Ibid.----Without some Portion of which not even Thieves, Goc.] --Cujus (sc. Fufitica) tanta vis eft, ut ne illi quidem, qui maleficio छo fcelere pafcuntur, pofint fine ulla particula jufitice vivere. Nam qui corum cuipiam, qui una latrocinantur, furatur aliquid aut eripit, is fili ne in latrocinio quidem relinquit locum. Ille autem, qui archipirata dicitur, nifi aquabiliter pradam, छ'r. De Offic. 1. 2. c. II.

 ral, that JUSTICE hould be natural alfo, by which Society exifts. For that Guftice bolds Society together, is evident in thofe, who appear of all the moft unjuft, fuch I mean as Robbers or Banditti, whofe Society with each other is preferved by their fuftice to each other. For by not ajpiring to any unequal Shares, and by never falfifying, and by fubmitting to what appears expedient, and by jufly guarding the Booty amalfed together, and by afffing their weaker Companions, by thefe things it is, that their Society fubfifts; the contrary to all which they do by thofe, whom they injure. Alex. Aphrod. $\pi \varepsilon_{p t} \psi u \chi$. p. 156. Edit. Ald. See alfo Plat. de Repub. 1. I. p. 351. tom. I1. Edit. Serrani.

Note XCV. p. 245. What then have I to do, but to enlarge Virtue into Piety? Not only Honour, E'c.] $^{\circ}$ ]

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

All manner of Events, which any way affect a Man, arife either from within bimfelf, or from Caufes independent. In the former cafe, he maintains an active Part; in the latter, a pafive. The active Part of his Character feems chiefly to be the Care of Virtue, for 'tis Virtue which teaches us what we are to act or do; the pafive Part feems to belong more immediately to Pie ty, becaufe by this we are enabled to refign and acquiefce, and bear with a manly Calmnefs whatever befals us. As therefore we are framed by Nature both to act and to fuffer, and are placed in a Univerfe, where we are perpetually compelled to both; neither Virtue nor Piety is of itfelf fufficient, but to pafs becomingly thro' Life, we fhould participate of each.

Such appears to have been the Sentiment of the felf wholly to Justice, and the universal Nature; to Justice, as to thofe things which are done by bimfelf; and in all other Events, to the NAture of the Whole. What any one will fay, or think about him, or act againft him, be doth not fo much as take into confideration; contented and abundawtly fatisfied with these two things, bimfelf To Do justly what is at this inffant doing, and to Ap-PROVE and Love what is at this inflant allotted him.

 Фúvル

 thou wifbeft to arrive by a Raad round about, thou mayjt inftantly pofess, if thou doft not grudge them to thy felf; that is to fay, in other words, if every thing paft thou intirely quit, if the future thou truft to Providence, and the prefent alone thou adjuft according to Piety and Justice : according to Piety, that fo thoue mayst approve, and love what is allotted, (for whatever it be, 'twas Nature brought it to thee, and thee to it ;) according to fuftice, that fo thou mayf generoufly and without Difguije both fpeak the Truth, and act what is confonant to [the general] Law, and the real Value of things. M. Ant. 1. 12. c. 1. See alfo 1. 7. c. 54.

Note XCVI. p. 245..----- I have an Interest which may exist, without alteging the Plan of Providence; without that is to fay, to learn fo to will all things, as in fuct they happen. And how do they bappen? As He who ordains them, bath ordained. Now He bath ordained that there foould be Summer and IVinter, and Plenty

$$
\text { A a } 2 \quad \text { and }
$$

NOTES on Treatise the Third.

and Famine, and Virtue and Vice, and all manner of Contrarieties, for the Harmony of the Whole; and to each of us hath He given a Body, and its Members, and a Fortune, and certain Affociates. Mindful therefore of this Order, ought' I we to come for Infruction, not indeed how we may alteriw lis already eftablibed, (for that neither is permitted ish would it be better fo to be;) but bow, while things continue around us, juft as they are, and as is their Nature, we may fill preferve our Fudgment in harmony with all that happens. Arr. Epict. 1. I. c. 12. p. $74 \cdot$

Note XCVII. p. 246. Who would be unhappy? Who would not, if he knew how, enjoy one perpetual Felicity? ©'c.]
 $\eta_{\varepsilon \varsigma} \pi \alpha^{\alpha} \chi^{1} \propto \pi \rho \alpha{ }^{\prime} \tau 70 \mu \varepsilon v$. 'Tis for the fake of Happine/s, we all of us do all other things whatever. Ethic. Nicom. 1. 1. c. 12. fub. fin. ------ See before, of the Dialogue pages 212, 24I. and Notes LVI and XCII.

Note XCVIII. Ibid. ----- If it happen to be erroneous, 'tis a grateful Error, Man to be deceived, in baving learnt concerning Externals, that all beyond our Power was to us as nothing; I, for my own part, would defire a Deceit, which would enable me for the future to live tranquil and undiffurbed. Arr. Epict. 1. 1. c. 4. p. 27.

Note XCIX. p. 247. ------ When we are onće, said he, well habituated to this ---moral Science, then Logic and Physics beco. -wo prof table Adjuncts, छ'c.] Ad eafque virtul. us difputatum eft, Dialectisam etiam adjungu. Pbyficam, eafque ambas virtutum: nomine adpellant: alteram, quod habeat rationem, ne cui falfo adfentiamur, neve, छ\%. Cic. de Fin. 1. 3. c, 21. p. 265.

The threefold Division of Philosophy into Etbics, Phyfics, and Logic, was commonly received by moft Sects of Philofophers. See Laert. 1. 7. c. 39. See alfo Cicero in his Treatife de Legibus, 1. r. c. 23. and in his Academics, 1. r. c. 5. Fuit ergo jam accepta a Platone philofophandi ratio triplex, छ゚'c. Plutarch. de Placit. Philof. p. 874.
end of the NOTES on Treatise the Third.
P. 304. 1. 6. for $\Delta_{i x} n_{\text {, }}$ read $\Delta_{i x \eta}^{\prime}$ P. 349. 1. 20.

[^0]:    Why it is faid that Poetry is not univerfally, but only for the greater part artificial, fee below, Chapter the Third, where what Natural Forse it has, is examined and eftimated.

[^1]:    *See Note (a) Cbap. I.

[^2]:    * P. P. 67, 68,

[^3]:    A n Englifh Heroic Verfe confifts of ten Semipeds, or Half-feet. Now in the Lines above-mentioned

[^4]:    * 原neid. l.v. V. 305.

